Mr. McNulty: All franchised train operators are required by their franchise agreements to provide passengers with accurate and timely information about delays, cancellations and disruptions. Most have installed public address systems to enable this information to be provided to passengers waiting at unstaffed stations. Where these are not provided, telephone information points are available at the stations which enable passengers to ask the nearest control centre for information about train running.

Cancer

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are suffering from cancer in (a) Chorley and (b) the North West. [198936]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Lindsay Hoyle, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning how many people are suffering from cancer in (a) Chorley and (b) North West. (198936)

Figures on the number of people suffering from cancer at any point in time are not routinely calculated for England as a whole, or for areas within England. Available figures relate to newly diagnosed cases in each year and are for England and Government Office Regions only. The latest available figures are for the year 2001. These were published in "Cancer statistics: registrations, England 2001. Series MB1 no.32. London: The Stationery Office, 2004" on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_health/MB1_32.pdf

There were 32,533 newly diagnosed cases of cancer in the North West in 2001 (based on International Classification of Diseases Tenth Revision codes C00-C97 excluding C44).

European Social Chapter

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the breakdown is by sector of the change in numbers of jobs in the United Kingdom since the UK adopted the European Social Chapter. [198855]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about change in numbers of jobs in the UK since the UK adoption of the social chapter, by sector. (198855)

The UK signed-up to the social chapter on 2nd October 1997, following its endorsement of the Treaty of Amsterdam. On 1st May 1999, it came into force having been ratified by all the member States.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to change in jobs by sector, between the closest data reference points to these dates, September 1997 and June 1999, and the latest data reference point, June 2004.

Influenza Deaths

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 65 years or over died of influenza in (a) West Derbyshire, (b) the East Midlands and (c) the UK in each year since 1997. [198366]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Patrick McLoughlin, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people aged 65 years or over have died of influenza in (a) West Derbyshire, (b) East Midlands, (c) the UK in each year since 1997. (198366)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2003. Figures for East Midlands Government Office Region and the United Kingdom are provided in the attached table. There were fewer than five deaths from influenza in each year from 1997 to 2003 in West Derbyshire Parliamentary Constituency and in each of the local authorities in which it is located (Amber Valley and Derbyshire Dales). There were a total of 8 deaths in Amber Valley and 6 deaths in Derbyshire Dales between 1997 and 2003. Figures cannot be provided for individual years or for the parliamentary constituency because of the risk of disclosure.

[2] Deaths of usual residents of this area.

[3] Figures are for deaths occurring in each calendar year, except for data for Scotland and Northern Ireland included in the United Kingdom totals. These are deaths registered in each calendar year.

National Lottery

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the annual tax revenue to the Treasury from the National Lottery has been in each year since 1994. [198333]

Mr. Timms: Details of tax revenue from the National Lottery can be obtained from the Betting and Gaming Bulletin, published monthly by HM Customs and Excise, which provides a full historic series of data on the revenues collected from betting, gaming and lottery duties. The Bulletin is available on application to Customs and Excise or online from www.uktradeinfo.com

Unemployment

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have taken place in the numbers of people classified as long-term unemployed in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198581]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Farrelly, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about unemployment. (198581)

The Office for National Statistics compiles statistics of unemployment from the Labour Force Survey following International Labour Organisation definitions. However, the Labour Force Survey sample size is too small to give reliable estimates of long-term unemployment in the Newcastle-under-Lyme Constituency.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for local areas including parliamentary constituencies.

The attached table gives the annual average number of people resident in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency claiming Jobseeker's Allowance benefits for over 12 months for each year from 1997 to 2003.

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people living in the London borough of Wandsworth were unemployed in each of the last three years; how many were (a) long-term unemployed and (b) youth unemployed; and if he will make a statement. [198887]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people living in the London Borough of Wandsworth were unemployed in each of the last three years; of these figures how many were (a) long-term unemployed and (b) youth unemployed. (198887)

Table 1 overleaf provides the information requested for the London Borough of Wandsworth, for the twelve-month periods ending in February each year from 2001 to 2003.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas. Table 2 overleaf gives the total number of all JSA claimants resident, the total claiming for over 12 months and claimants aged 18 to 24 years old annual averages in the London Borough of Wandsworth, for each year since 2001 to 2003.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the peak year was for the unemployment rate in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1979; and how many people were unemployed there in that year. [198534]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Farrelly, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about unemployment in the Newcastle-under-Lyme Parliamentary Constituency. (198534)

Statistics of unemployment for Newcastle-under-Lyme Parliamentary Constituency extend back only to 1992. However, figures for claimants of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) in the constituency, which extend back to 1983 on a consistent basis, show that the highest level was recorded in September 1984, when there were 4,449 claimants. This compares with the most recent figure of 711 claimants in October 2004. Comparisons over this period for JSA claimants expressed as rates are not available.

Average Earnings

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of (a) changes in the level of average earnings of full-time employees in Newcastle-under-Lyme and (b) the proportion of national average earnings which these levels represented in each year since 1997. [198712]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Farrelly, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimates have been made of (a) changes in level of average earnings of full-time employees in Newcastle-under-Lyme and (b) the percentage of national average earnings which these levels represent in each year since 1997. (198712)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) and are provided for full-time employees on adult rates of pay whose pay was unaffected by absence during the pay period, by their place of work. This is the standard definition used for ASHE tables. The ASHE does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I attach a table showing the average gross weekly wage for full time employees in the Newcastle-under-Lyme area for 1998 to 2004. Data for 1997 is not available yet.

The ASHE, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes, but because of its sampling frame, it has difficulty capturing data on people with very low pay. It is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings publication criteria ensures that all estimates are undisclosive. A number of estimates have been removed from the published tables for these reasons.

The tables provide data on the average gross weekly earnings for full-time employees on adult rates of pay whose pay for the pay period was unaffected by absence, who worked in Newcastle-under-Lyme and for the United Kingdom, for the years 1998 to 2004.

Notes:

(a) The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, (ASHE), carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a 1 per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn (PAYE) schemes.

(b) The ASHE replaces the New Earnings Survey (NES) from October 2004. The main difference between the ASHE and NES being that estimates are weighted to population totals from the Labour Force Survey.

(c) In addition the 2004 ASHE included supplementary information to improve its coverage. This means that the results for the 2004 ASHE are discontinuous with earlier results. However, in order to compare results a second set of results have been given for 2004 that exclude these supplementary information.

(d) Average gross weekly earnings for Adult Full-Time Employees whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence.

Bank Accounts

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the population of (a) Hemsworth constituency, (b) the Yorkshire and Humber area and (c) England have no bank account. [198735]

Mr. Timms: Estimates from the 2002–03 Family Resources Survey show that 9 per cent. of households in the Yorkshire and Humber area have no account and 7 per cent. of households in England have no account. There is no data available at constituency level.

Central Government Administration

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues regarding levels of central Government administration. [198799]

Mr. Boateng: As part of the 2004 Spending Review the Chancellor had discussions with Cabinet colleagues about the scope for releasing resources in their departments to invest in essential, frontline services, including through real terms reductions in administration budgets.

Child Trust Fund

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families he estimates will benefit from the Child Trust Fund in (a) Newcastle-under-Lyme and (b) the country as a whole when it is introduced. [198709]

Mr. Timms: All children born since 1 September 2002 in families awarded child benefit will receive a Child Trust Fund. In 2005–06 around 700,000 families will benefit from the Child Trust Fund across the country as a whole. No estimate is available of the number of families benefiting in Newcastle-under-Lyme. However, there were around 8,000 new births across Staffordshire in 2002.

The CTF is intended to encourage parents and children to develop the savings habit. It will ensure that every child, whatever their family background, will have access to a stock of assets from the age of 18, so they can invest in their future.

It will also help children and their parents to understand the benefits of saving and investment and how to engage with financial institutions.

Children (North Somerset)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children between the ages of (i) birth and four years and (ii) five and seven years live in (a) the constituency of Weston-Super-Mare and (b) North Somerset local education authority. [198089]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from John Pullinger to Mr. Brian Cotter, dated 17 November 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question concerning how many children live in the constituency of Weston-Super-Mare and North Somerset Local Education Authority between the ages of birth and four years and between five and seven years. I am replying in his absence. (198089)

In the Weston-Super-Mare Parliamentary Constituency, there were an estimated 5,554 children aged 0 to 4 years old and 3,393 children aged 5 to 7 years old on Census day 29 April 2001. Annual mid-year estimates are not currently estimated for parliamentary constituencies.

In the North Somerset Local Education Authority there were an estimated 10,300 children aged between 0 and 4 years old and 6,800 children aged 5 to 7 years old in mid 2003.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195615]

Mr. Timms: The available information is as follows:

Sections 59 (Restrictions on putting export goods alongside for loading) and 62(2) (Information, documentation etc as to export goods) Customs and Excise Management Act

1994

Section 51A (Co-owners etc of buildings and land) Value Added Tax Act

2000

Section 104 (Control of business transfers) Financial Services and Markets Act insofar as it relates to banks

2003

Section 189 (CHP exemption based on current efficiency) Finance Act

2004

Section 4 (Duty stamps for spirits etc) Finance Act

There are likely to be other legislative provisions passed in the last 30 years that the Chancellor's Departments are responsible for and which remain to be brought into force. However, comprehensive information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In the case of the Inland Revenue, legislative provisions dealing with revenue matters are normally only included in Finance Acts where it is necessary. But, rarely, provisions may be included in anticipation that particular events will happen and until they do the legislation may not yet have come into force.

Consultants

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent in each year since 2002 on employing (a) external management consultants and (b) external human resources consultants; and if he will make a statement. [195759]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1055–56W to the Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Earnings

Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees in the United Kingdom in each of the last five available years. [198170]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Denzil Davies, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. (198170)

The attached table gives estimates of the number of full-time and part-time employees resident in the United Kingdom for the three months ending in August each year from 2000 to 2004.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (c), the United Kingdom have gross hourly earnings (i) including and (ii) excluding overtime below (A) £7.44, (B) £5.59 and (C) £4.50, broken down by (1) male, (2) female and (3) all workers. [198284]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Michael Moore, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many and what proportion of full-time workers in (a) Scotland, (b) each of the unitary authority areas in Scotland and (c) the United Kingdom, have gross hourly earnings (i) including and (ii) excluding overtime below (A) 7.44, (B) 5.59 and (C) 4.50, broken down by (1) male, (2) female and (3) all workers . (198284)

Average earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings and are provided for full-time employees on adult rates of pay whose pay was unaffected by absence during the pay period, by their place of work. This is the standard definition used for Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings tables. The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings does not collect data on the self employed and people who do unpaid work.

I am placing in the House of Commons Library, tables showing the counts and proportion of full-time workers for the United Kingdom, Scotland and Scottish local authorities earning below the stated hourly pay bands.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings, carried out in April of each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom. It is a one per cent. sample of all employees who are members of pay-as-you-earn schemes, but because of its sampling frame, it has difficulty capturing data on people with very low pay. It is therefore likely to under-represent relatively low paid staff earning below the tax threshold.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings publication criteria ensures that all estimates are undisclosive. A number of estimates have been removed from the published tables for these reasons.

Electoral Register

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people living abroad at the last General Election were eligible to vote in the Election; and how many of these voted; [198641]

(2) how many people between the ages of 18 and 24 years in the United Kingdom are expected to be eligible to vote at the next General Election. [198642]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter Len Cook to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your questions concerning how many people living abroad at the last General Election were eligible to vote in the British General Election and how many of those voted; and how many people between the ages of 18 and 24 years in the United Kingdom are eligible to vote at the next General Election. (198641, 198642)

There were 11,506 registered overseas electors as at 10 October 2000, the last date that figures were collated before the most recent General Election on 7 June 2001. Details of who voted are not available, consequently we are not able to say what proportion of the overseas electorate voted.

Data are not available on how many people aged between 18 to 24 will be eligible to vote in the next General Election. Age information for those registered to vote is not recorded, other than information on the number of "attainers", that is those that will reach the voting age of 18 within two years. The estimated population aged between 18 and 24 in the United Kingdom as at 30 June 2003 was 5,245,300. However this does not represent the number of people aged 18 to 24 that are eligible to vote for various reasons, including non-registration.

Employment (Rhondda)

Chris Bryant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in each ward of the Rhondda are (a) employed and (b) unemployed. [198299]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Chris Bryant, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment and unemployment in each ward of the Rhondda Parliamentary Constituency. (198299)

The data, from the 2001 Population Census for people aged 16 to 74, are shown in the attached table.

As the ward level information requested is not available from the Labour Force Survey, information from the Census has been given in the reply.

The figures have been extracted from table KS09a on the 2001 Census Key Statistics for Output Areas in England and Wales CD, which is available in the House of Commons library.

Foreign Debt

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries have had 100 per cent. of debt to the UK written off. [198408]

Mr. Timms: The UK is committed to provide 100 per cent. debt relief for all 42 HIPCs to support a sustainable exit from debt. This is done by writing off or holding in trust their debts. Under the Enhanced HIPC Initiative, at Completion Point the UK offers 100 per cent. stock relief on all bilateral debt owed by eligible HIPCs. 15 countries have reached Completion Point, receiving a total debt write-off of £989 million from the UK. A further 12 have reached Decision Point and will receive 100 per cent. flow relief until such time as they reach Completion Point.

The UK's hold-in-trust policy means that any debt service payments received from indebted countries yet to enter the Initiative will be returned to the countries once they reach Decision Point. The UK will not benefit financially from their payments.

Details of debt forgiveness by the UK through the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) can be found at: http://www.ecgd.gov.uk/index/susdev_home/susdev_debt.htm

Iraq

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's most recent estimate is of the cost of the British occupation of Iraq in each month since the start of the conflict, broken down by (a) military and (b) reconstruction costs. [197247]

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much of the £3.8 billion in special reserve to cover the cost of operations in Iraq has been spent to date; when he expects it to be fully expended; what plans he has to increase the sum; for what period he plans to allocate further funds; whether it will be maintained and accounted for under budget heads which will enable the extra costs incurred to be clearly discernible; and if he will make a statement; [197618]

(2) what the (a) total cost to date and (b) cost in each year since the start of the war to the Exchequer has been of the war and subsequent activity in Iraq, separately identifying costs which would have been expended on other purposes but have been redirected to purposes in connection with Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [197620]

Mr. Boateng: In Budget 2003 the Chancellor set aside £3 billion as a Special Reserve to cover the cost of operations in Iraq. £1 billion was drawn down by the Ministry of Defence in the Spring Supplementary Estimate for 2002–03.

The remaining £2 billion of this Special Reserve was carried forward to 2003–04. The Ministry of Defence drew down £1,539 million in the 2003–04 Winter and Spring Supplementary Estimates.

In the PBR 2003 the Chancellor announced a further £500 million for the Special Reserve in the financial year 2003–04 and a further £300 million for 2004–05 as a prudent allowance to cover Iraq and our continuing international commitment to the war on terrorism.

At the Madrid Donors' Conference in October 2003, the Government announced a total UK pledge of £544 million towards the reconstruction effort in Iraq up to March 2006.

Job Creation (Stroud)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs have been created in the Stroud constituency since (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [198499]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. David Drew, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about jobs created in Stroud. (198499)

While statistics of new jobs created are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes in numbers of jobs from year to year.

The attached table shows the information requested, relating to jobs in Stroud, for 1997 and 2001.

Number of employee jobs[1] with workplace in Stroud parliamentary constituency: 1997 and 2001

Manufacturing

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs have been lost in the manufacturing sector in each component part of the UK in each month since the beginning of 2001. [198984]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Adam Price, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about numbers of jobs in the manufacturing sector in each component part of the UK. (198984)

While statistics of jobs lost are not available explicitly, statistics from surveys enable comparisons to be made of net changes, in numbers of jobs.

The attached table shows quarterly changes in manufacturing jobs, between March 2001 and June 2004, for each country within the UK. Similar figures showing monthly changes are not available.

National Debt

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the United Kingdom's national debt was (a) in total and (b) per capita in (i) 1996 and (ii) 2003; [198392]

(2) how much was spent on interest payments for the national debt in (a) 1996 and (b) 2003 (i) in total amount and (ii) per capita. [198393]

Mr. Timms: Figures for public sector net debt and central government debt interest payments in current prices are available on the Office for National Statistics website: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/tsdtables1.asp?vlnk=fsf

Table 1.1 A: Public Sector Finances (series RUTN and RUTO) shows figures for public sector net debt in £ billion and as a percentage of GDP. Table 1.1C: Central Government (series NMFX) shows debt interest payments in £ billions.

Figures for mid-year population estimates are also available on the Office for National Statistics website: Mid-1996 population estimates are available on http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Expodata/Spreadsheets/D8588.xls Mid-2003 population estimates are available on http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Expodata/Spreadsheets/D8548.xls

Income Tax

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax would be raised by introducing a new 50 per cent. tax band for those with incomes over £100,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement. [198168]

John Healey: Comprehensive information on additional full year yield/cost on income tax is available in the Library of the House. The information is based upon the Survey of Personal Incomes and excludes any estimate of behavioural response to the tax change.

Pension Funds (Dividend Taxation)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax has been collected since 1997 from taxation of dividends from UK pension fund holdings. [198339]

Mr. Timms: None. Pension funds are exempt from tax and have never been liable to pay tax on the dividends that they receive.

Pensioners

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pensioners are paying income tax at (a) the basic rate and (b) the higher rate; and if he will make a statement. [198166]

John Healey: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) on 4 November 2004, Official Report, column 413W.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193975]

Mr. Boateng: Office accommodation at 1 Horse Guards Road was refurbished under a PFI scheme by Exchequer Partnership plc. For details of costs, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by the former Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) on 5 February 2002, Official Report, column 837W.

Road Traffic Accidents

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries occurred in the UK as a result of incorrect servicing and repair of motor vehicles in each of the last 30 years. [198816]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

Tax Credits

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals had not returned their tax credit renewal forms by the 30 September deadline; and what percentage this is of tax credit renewal forms sent out. [192800]

John Healey [holding answer 21 October 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General on 15 November 2004, Official Report, columns 946–48W to the hon. Members for Northavon (Mr. Webb) and for Yeovil (Mr. Laws).

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of families claiming new tax credits that (a) needed to provide details for finalising a 2003–04 award, and if appropriate renewing a claim for 2004–05, (b) responded on, or before the 30 September deadline and (c) had awards stopped as a result of not responding by the 30 September deadline. [193663]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General on 15 November 2004, Official Report, columns 946–48W.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls were made to the child and working tax credit helpline in each month since August 2003; and how many and what percentage of calls (a) were handled within 20 seconds, (b) were handled in more than 20 seconds, (c) reached an engaged tone and (d) were abandoned. [193924]

John Healey: The following figures cover the tax credit contact centres in Great Britain.

Anne Picking: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many overpayments of working families tax credit have been made; and how many of these payments the Tax Credit Office has admitted liability for. [195909]

John Healey: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General on 15 November 2004, Official Report, columns 946–48W to the hon. Members for Northavon (Mr. Webb) and for Yeovil (Mr. Laws)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how long the period was, on average, between a claimant submitting a completed tax credit application form and their (a) being advised of the outcome of their claim and (b) receiving their first payment, in the latest period for which figures are available. [198085]

John Healey: The Inland Revenue aim to decide 55 per cent. of all tax credit claims and change of circumstances in five working days and 95 per cent. in 30 working days.

The Inland Revenue published its progress against Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets in the Inland Revenue Spring Departmental Report May 2004 which is available on the Internet at http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/about.dept-report04.pdf.

Payments are made automatically on the first scheduled payment date after a claim is decided.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many cases involving the overpayment of tax credits have been due to errors by the Inland Revenue (a) in 2004–05 and (b) in total since the start of the scheme. [199131]

(2) how many people were overpaid tax credits in the most recent year for which awards have been finalised; what proportion of these were due to error by the Inland Revenue; and in what proportion of the cases the Inland Revenue has attempted to recover overpayments. [197545]

John Healey: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given by the Paymaster General to the hon. Members for Northavon (Mr. Webb) and for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 15 November 2004, Official Report, columns 946–948W.

Chris Bryant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in each ward of the Rhondda claim (a) pension credit and (b) working tax credit. [198300]

John Healey: I understand from the Department for Work and Pensions that the numbers of recipients of pension credit at 30 September 2004 were as follows:

Ward	Households in receipt of pension credit
Cwm Clydach	215
Cymmer	455
Ferndale	275
Llwyn-y-pia	185
Maerdy	270
Pentre	375

Estimates of the number of in-work families in each constituency receiving tax credits are published in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses. January 2004". This can be found on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Estimates for December 2004 will be published on 23 December 2004. Estimates for smaller areas are not currently available.

Unemployment

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the unemployment rate in Newcastle-under-Lyme was in each year since 1997; [198533]

(2) how many unemployed people there have been in Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since 1997. [198582]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Paul Farrelly, dated 17 November 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about unemployment in the Newcastle-under-Lyme Parliamentary Constituency since 1997. (198533, 198582)

Table 1 provides the information requested in the Newcastle-under-Lyme Parliamentary Constituency for the twelve-month periods ending in February each year from 1997 to 2004.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for local areas including parliamentary constituencies. Table 2 gives the annual average number of people resident in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency claiming Jobseeker's Allowance benefits for each year from 1997 to 2003, together with the proportion of the resident working age population this represents.

Table 1: Unemployment Newcastle-under-Lyme 12 months ending February each year—total unemployment

	Level (000s)	Rate (percentage)[1]
1997	2	5.7
1998	3	6.2
1999	2	5.5
2000	2	4.8
2001	2	4.2
2002	1	2.2

[1] Unemployed people as percentage of economically active population (i.e. employed plus unemployed).

Note:

Estimates are based on small sample sizes and are therefore subject to a higher than usual degree of sampling variability. They should therefore be treated with caution and, in particular, changes from year to year should not be used in isolation from the figures for a run of years.

Table 2: JSA claimants resident in the Newcastle-under-Lyme parliamentary constituency—annual averages

Yasser Arafat

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department will identify whether bank and other accounts held by the late Yasser Arafat in the United Kingdom are holding overseas aid money; and if he will make a statement. [199033]

Mr. Timms: The late Yasser Arafat's banking arrangements are a matter between his executors and his bankers who would be expected to comply with all legal requirements to ensure proper receipt and administration of any public money.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Charging Initiative

Mr. Allen: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make it her policy to encourage local Crown Prosecution Service prosecutors to meet local police officers informally to improve the working of the charging initiative. [196231]

The Solicitor-General: The policy of the charging scheme is early consultation between police officers and duty prosecutors, encouraging a prosecution team approach towards the common goal of bringing offenders to justice.

Information about local performance and effectiveness is available from the central ACPO/Crown Prosecution service team, and is shared with the local Crown Prosecution Service and police teams. This information is then jointly discussed so that lessons can be learned and issues and training needs identified. This process of constant review enables the local prosecution team to consider together whether changes need to be made to their local systems and arrangements.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Franked Envelopes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if she will take steps to arrange for second class franked parliamentary envelopes in formats other than window envelopes to be made available to hon. Members. [197846]

Dame Marion Roe: Second class post-paid envelopes were introduced in 1998, in addition to the first class post-paid envelopes available to Members, following a decision of the Administration Committee. I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to contact the hon. Member on the specific issue of the format of envelopes.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

House of Commons Library

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff were employed in the Library (a) in 1974, (b) in 2000 and (c) at the latest date for which figures are available. [198879]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Numbers of staff employed in the Department of the Library have been as follows:

	Number
1979[1]	[2,3]90
2000	[3]200.5

[1] No published data is available before this date. The figure is taken from the first Annual Report of the Commission.

[2] Excludes 26 staff in the Vote and Sales Office, which has since transferred to the Department of the Clerk of the House.

Official Report

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many hardback copies of the Official Report have been (a) produced and (b) distributed to hon. Members in each year since 1980; [197868]

(2) how many hardback copies of the Official Report have been returned by hon. Members to the House authorities for disposal in each year since 1980; and what percentage of these have been disposed of by (a) burial in landfill site, (b) incineration and (c) recycling; [197869]

(3) what the total cost per day is of producing hardback copies of the Official Report, broken down by cost (a) per copy, (b) per hundred, (c) per thousand and (d) in total; [197870]

(4) where hardback copies of the House of Commons Official Report are produced; what method is used for their transportation from the publisher to the parliamentary estate; and how many deliveries this necessitates per (a) month and (b) year. [197871]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Bound volume text of the Official Report is the corrected text of debates (including Westminster Hall debates), Ministerial Statements and Written Answers produced for record purposes. Each issue now covers three sitting weeks. Hon. Members who have asked to receive them continue to do so for the duration of their membership of the House or until they request that supply should cease.

Information about production and distribution is not available for the period, or in the form, requested. The following data about production quantities, which include copies produced for sale, have been extracted from the printer's records.

Period	Number of copies per issue
1996 to June 1999	785
July 1999 to October 2000	680
November 2000 to April 2002	650
May 2002 to November 2002	600
December 2002 to present	540

In financial year 2003–04, 249 copies of each issue were distributed to hon. Members.

The House of Commons Commission is only responsible for meeting the cost of producing up to 350 bound volume copies for use by hon. Members and House Departments. For the last complete financial year, 2003–04, the total spent on printing and binding bound volume copies (18 issues) was approximately £895,000. This is equivalent to approximately £50,000 per issue, and £140 per copy. Internal staff and other costs are not associated with individual documents and are not included.

Bound volume copies of the Official Report are printed at the Parliamentary press in Southwark, case bound by the printer's sub-contractors in Stevenage and returned by road transport to the distributor's warehouse in Nine Elms. Copies are subsequently despatched by Royal Mail or courier to individual recipients except for a small number of copies carried directly to the Parliamentary Estate by the distributor's routine daily delivery van service.

The House of Commons Commission has no responsibility for disposal of bound volume copies of the Official Report, which belong to hon. Members to whom they have been supplied.

Temporary Secondments

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what plans there are for temporary secondments of staff of the House to work in the offices of hon. Members. [198880]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: There are no plans for temporary secondments of staff of the House to work in the offices of hon. Members.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Iraq

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his reply of 8 November to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkstone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), Official Report, column 572, if he will list reconstruction programmes in (a) Samarra and (b) Najaf, broken down by (i) type and (ii) amount; how many (A) Iraqi and (B) foreign workers are expected to participate; and what the source of funding will be in each case. [197898]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In and around Samarra, the interim Iraqi Government (IIG) is carrying out 75 projects worth $25 million, in the sectors of healthcare, education, and infrastructure. The main activities include: building new primary and secondary schools; rehabilitating hospitals; restoring historical sites and recreational areas; expanding the telephone network; and repairing the water and sewage system.

United States agencies (the Project and Contracting Office, USAID and military reconstruction teams) report that they have 48 construction projects and three non-construction projects in progress in Samarra worth $8.9 million, broken down by sector into: civil sector (14), education (14), electricity (3), health (4), transport (5), water and sanitation (9), governance (1), and agriculture (1). Plans and activities include reconstructing 43 primary and secondary schools and 11 mosques, improvements to a local veterinary clinic, and the donation of medical books. Most of these projects will generate jobs for local Iraqis. The US reports that a further 51 projects are scheduled to take place over December 2004 and January 2005, totalling $5 million.

In Najaf, the interim Iraqi Government is undertaking an extensive programme of reconstruction. The Ministry of Municipalities and Public Works has reported that it will spend nearly $650 million on water and sanitation, especially in the old part of the city. Other IIG announcements include plans to spend $55 million on Government buildings in the area, and the Ministry of Telecommunications has signed a contract with a foreign company to build a new communications centre and supply equipment. Plans are also underway to assist hotel owners as the city is visited by thousands of pilgrims monthly and this is central to the local economy.

United States agencies, working with the Iraqi Ministry of Planning and Development Cooperation and other central Ministries, report that they have 171 construction projects and 22 non-construction projects in progress in Najaf, totalling around $30 million. These projects can be broken down by sector into: education (110), electricity (3), health (10), humanitarian assistance (24), governance (23), transport (2), water and sanitation (10), agriculture (2), civil society (15), and economy (4). US funded activities include: the rehabilitation of Najaf main market; sewer and waterline repair; the installation of electrical poles; the purchase of garbage and street cleaning trucks; and the rehabilitation of health clinics.

It is not possible to list the numbers of foreign and Iraqi contractors participating in these projects, as there is currently no comprehensive database of information available. It is understood that the need for more extensive reporting of projects and contractors will be discussed at a forthcoming IIG/donor coordination meeting.

Afghanistan

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Government of Afghanistan and (b) the United Nations on the production of heroin in Afghanistan. [197802]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Opium poppy cultivation is a growing and complex problem in Afghanistan. It is widely expected that the United Nations Office of Drug Control and Crime (UNODC) 2004 poppy survey will show a substantial increase in poppy cultivation and opium production from the previous year. Many Afghan farmers are locked into growing opium poppy as the only means of repaying debts, accessing land, earning cash income and providing security for themselves and their families. To promote the availability of alternative livelihoods and rural development in Afghanistan, DFID is supporting a number of initiatives through individual funded projects and support for Afghan Government and United Nations programmes.

The UK is lead nation on counter-narcotics and we provide significant support to the Afghan National Drug Control Strategy. DFID has lead responsibility for the alternative livelihoods component and plan to increase our commitment from the current level of £5.5 million per year to £20 million in 2005–06. The support of the international community and strong ownership and lead from the Afghan Government will be crucial to achieving future reductions in opium poppy cultivation.

DFID continues to participate in discussions with the Government of Afghanistan on the institutional arrangements for implementing the National Drug Control Strategy, including the establishment of a Counter-narcotics Ministry, an accelerated programme to pilot comprehensive development and counter-narcotics law enforcement in key provinces, tackling the opium debt problem and on how to make national development more effective in creating sustainable and attractive alternative livelihood opportunities.

An example of the key role DFID is playing is the way we are working with the Afghan Government and International donor community to help communities develop their own livelihoods through the Afghan National Solidarity Programme. To date, the programme has provided US$36 million to 3,775 village development projects. In the Yakdharu village in the Badakhshan province, for example, democratically elected development councils agreed to spend the grant provided through the National Solidarity Programme on establishing micro-hydro electric power from the village stream. As a result the villagers now have an asset that provides sustainable electricity to the whole community and a surplus to supply surrounding villages, generating an additional income for the community. The success of this project has encouraged the community to invest their own money into other infrastructure projects and a seed bank using the community development council mechanism. DFID has committed £13 million to the National Solidarity Programme, which is planned to cover all 20,000 villages in Afghanistan by 2007.

To ensure the Afghan Government can effectively manage development in the province, DFID has provided £20 million funding to the Afghanistan Stabilisation Programme, which is developing links between the central Government and the provinces as well as strengthening the capacity of provincial and district public administration.

We are in regular contact with the United Nations Office of Drug Control and Crime, who are also engaged in discussions on ensuring that counter-narcotics issues are addressed in Afghan Government and donor programmes and provincial piloting. DFID has recently approved an Alternative Agricultural Livelihoods Programme with the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) budgeted at £3.8 million over 2.5 years, and we are also in regular dialogue with the FAO on the implementation of this programme. DFID is also in contact with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Office of Project Services (UNOPS), and the International Labour Organisation (ILO), all of which have programmes related to alternative livelihoods, for example through labour-intensive public works or private sector development. DFID has regular contacts with the United Nations Assistance Mission to Afghanistan (UNAMA) on a number of issues, including drug production.

Aid Programmes

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of aid programmes involving the supply of animals and the infrastructure to support them for transport and trading produce purposes in remote areas of the developing world; what support the Department is giving to such programmes; and if he will make a statement. [197555]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is currently supporting initiatives in excess of £500,000 to improve the marketing of food crops through appropriate transport for poor farmers in Uganda and Kenya. Local forms of transport that are distributed to farmers' groups include oxen, ox-carts, donkeys, donkey-carts and bicycles.

In 2002, DFID funded an assessment of local transport solutions for the rural poor that highlighted lessons arising from the World Bank's experience in Sub-Saharan Africa. A key conclusion of the assessment is the need to place greater emphasis on local transport solutions, which have wider benefits for the poor living in remote rural areas, particularly those based on animal traction.

DFID has continued to fund programmes associated with this study; for example the International Forum for Rural Transport and Development, which promotes improvements in mobility and accessibility for poor people. I have arranged for a copy of the document entitled 'Local Transport Solutions for Rural Development' to be placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195620]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: None.

Conditional Aid

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on his Department's recent discussions with the World Bank on the reassessment of conditional aid to third world countries. [198329]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: At this year's annual meetings in October 2004, the World Bank agreed it would review its policy and practice on lending conditions and report back at next year's annual meetings. The UK also launched its own draft policy paper on aid conditions at the meetings in order to begin a period of consultation with the World Bank and a range of other stakeholders.

DFID is now in discussion with the World Bank on how best to take its review forward. DFID believes the review should result in a comprehensive policy statement on the Bank's use of conditions, followed by clear guidelines to staff on the implications of the new policy for day-to-day World Bank operations. DFID considers that the review represents a good opportunity to explore challenging issues central to the debate over Bank conditions, particularly in relation to sensitive policy reforms such as privatisation and trade liberalisation.

DFID and World Bank staff have been exchanging views on the review at a number of levels. The UK is continuing to consult a range of stakeholders regarding its own policy paper on effective partnerships and aid conditions and will finalise this paper in early 2005.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much expenditure his Department has incurred in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 to date on employing external consultants; and if he will make a statement. [196385]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Expenditure in the last three financial years on all contracted experts including consultants was as follows.

2001-02	364.100
2002-03	406.490
2003-04	414.913

Côte d'Ivoire

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the humanitarian situation in Côte d'Ivoire. [198778]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is in close contact with agencies monitoring the humanitarian situation on the ground in Cote d'Ivoire. Their current concerns are principally for the security of their staff. DFID will consider any proposals they put to us as the situation develops. During 2004, we have provided £1.55 million in humanitarian assistance.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197305]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: It is not possible to separate the costs of (a) creative work or (b) media spend from overall advertising costs as records are not held centrally. Advertising costs over the last three years was as follows:

31-3-02	910,942
31-3-03	973,443
31-3-04	559,295

The cost of administering advertising activity was as follows:

31-3-02	13,400
31-3-03	13,900
31-3-04	14,400

The advertising contractor for all three years was Barkers.

Information prior to 2001–2 could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Renewable Energy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of his Department's budget is spent on providing renewable energy projects in the developing world; and if he will make a statement. [198056]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Since 1997, DFID has commissioned and completed about £2.25 million of applied-research on renewable energy, covering all the main renewable energy technologies.

As was recognised at the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD), access to affordable and reliable energy services is important to economic growth and social development. In promoting improved access to services, we encourage consideration of the full range of appropriate technologies, including renewable energy.

As a follow-up to the WSSD, DFID is working with several international networks to promote improved access to energy services, including the Global Village Energy Partnership and the EU Energy Initiative. These networks involve dialogue with developing countries about their energy needs in support of their poverty reduction objectives. Most countries possess a range of indigenous natural resources that may help meet requirements such cooking, heating, lighting and water pumping. Where they are practical and financially feasible, renewable energy resources may have an important role to play.

In addition, we are participating in an international financing and policy study with the World Bank about increasing the role of renewable energy in meeting the energy needs of developing countries. This is expected to report its findings in March 2005.

Debt Relief

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how the increased funding provided to writing off debt in the developing world will affect other projects under his Department's remit. [198057]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The increased funding provided to writing off debt will be additional to funding provided for DFID's other projects. The UK Government's recent 2004 Spending Review announced that total UK aid would rise to nearly £6.5 billion a year in 2007–08, a real terms increase of 140 per cent. since 1997. Part of the increase announced in the 2004 Spending Review was earmarked for the provision of further debt relief.

Land Mine Clearance

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding has been made available to help countries that are affected by landmines to meet their mine clearance obligations under the Ottawa Treaty. [198802]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: During the last three complete financial years (2001–03), in support of our obligations under the Mine Ban Treaty, DFID has provided a total sum of £39.7 million for global humanitarian demining.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197778]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Select committee reports are given very careful consideration by the Department's Ministers. Since June 2001 several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which the Department of International Development is responsible. Select committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

Water Facilities

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken to co-ordinate his Department's Water Action Plan with the ACP-EU Water Facility. [197575]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The preparation of the ACP-EU Water Facility by the European Commission as part of the 9th European Development Fund (EOF) has involved consultation with member states, NGOs and other interested parties. The Department for International Development has been involved in this consultation process and has taken the lead on the Finance Working Group that has raised issues related to the regulations for spending the ACP-EU Water Facility corresponding to the criteria set out in the UK's Water Action Plan. These include ensuring a fundamental focus on the needs of the poor and the sustainability of the programme funded. The first call for proposals can be accessed through www.euwi.net or http://europa.eu.int/comm/europeaid/cqi/frame12.pl and provides detailed information on how such funds are to be spent.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

CAFCASS

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff were employed in each CAFCASS region on 1 April (i) 2001, (ii) 2002, (iii) 2003 and (iv) 2004. [197136]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS was established on 1 April 2001. Before 1 April 2003, CAFCASS collected data on the total numbers of staff, but they were not broken down between full-time and part-time staff or between each region and Wales. The total numbers of staff (full-time and part-time) employed at 1 April 2001 and 1 April 2002 were as follows:

(i) 1 April 2001

	Number
Employed staff in post	1257
Self-employed practitioners	695
Total staff	1952

(ii) 1 April 2002

In addition, there were 441 self-employed CAFCASS practitioners on 1 April 2004. This figure cannot be broken down by region and Wales.

Note:

The discrepancy between the total figures given here (1884 and 1918) and those quoted in the CAFCASS 2003–04 Annual Report (1879 and 1932) is because CAFCASS subsequently undertook a data cleansing exercise of its management information systems and redefined the criteria used for employed staff. Furthermore, CAFCASS had included Board members and agency staff in its historical data.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff skilled in mediation are employed by CAFCASS. [198345]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS does not collect information that identifies which of its practitioners are skilled in mediation. However, CAFCASS practitioners are skilled and qualified social workers, and many of them will have undertaken further training in dispute resolution and conflict resolution. CAFCASS is aware that some of its practitioners will have undertaken specific training in order to become accredited mediators.

In addition, CAFCASS refers families who might benefit from mediation services to an accredited mediation scheme.

CAFCASS practitioners also receive appropriate training to enable them to undertake dispute resolution work. Dispute resolution is one of the training modules that CAFCASS has commissioned for its practitioners from Royal Holloway College.

Education Provision (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of public funding per pupil in the Easington constituency was in the last seven years. [198131]

Mr. Miliband: The information is produced according to local education authority areas rather than districts within an area. Easington is a district of Durham Local Education Authority. The following table shows total funding per pupil aged 3 to 19 in Durham since 1997–98 in real terms.

Durham Local Education Authority

	£ per pupil
1997–98	2,730
1998–99	2,810
1999–2000	2,950
2000–01	3,210

6. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average class size of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in the Easington constituency was in each of the last five years. [198132]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools[1]: average size of classes taught by one teacher[2]—January 2004

Education Finance (Staffordshire)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on changes to the level of funding for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) Staffordshire and (ii) Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198669]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is produced according to local education authority areas rather than districts within an area. Newcastle-under-Lyme is a district of Staffordshire Local Education Authority. The following table shows how the level of funding in Staffordshire, on a per pupil basis, has increased since 1997–98 in primary and secondary schools.

Total funding per primary and secondary pupil aged 3–10 and 11–15 in real terms in 1997–98 and 2004–05 for Staffordshire

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the total funding for schools has changed in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198678]

Mr. Miliband: :The information requested is produced according to local education authority areas rather than districts within an area. Newcastle-under-Lyme is a district of Staffordshire local education authority. Total funding for all pupils aged 3–19 in Staffordshire was £338.4 million in 1997–98 and £459.0 million in 2004–05 in real terms—an increase of 36 per cent. This includes funding via Education Formula Spending/Standard Spending Assessment and Grants, and excludes the pensions transfer to EPS and the Learning and Skills Council. Total funding per pupil aged 3–19 for schools in Staffordshire has increased from £2,600 in 1997–98 to £3,410 in 2004–05, an increase of 31 per cent. in real terms.

Education Finance (Selby)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding per head for secondary school pupils in the Selby constituency (a) was in 1997 and (b) is in 2004. [198790]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is produced according to local education authority areas rather than districts within an area. The Selby constituency includes parts of both York and North Yorkshire local education authorities. The following table sets out the figures.

	1997–98(£)	2004–05(£)	Percentage increase from 1997–98 to 2004–05

Computers

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the computer to pupil ratio in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools was in Greater London in 1997. [196711]

Mr. Miliband: The information is not available in the form requested.

Figures for England, which were derived from a sample of schools, are shown in the table. Figures at sub-national level are not available as the sample was not large enough to provide reliable estimates.

Average number of pupils[1] per computer (used solely or mainly for teaching and learning purposes) by type of school

	England
Year end March	Maintained primary	Maintained secondary
1997	n/a	n/a
1998	17.6	8.7
2004[2]	7.5	4.9

n/a = not available
Note:
Figures for 1997 are not available as the survey was biennial until 1998.

The latest information on ICT in schools was published in the Statistical First Release "Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2004", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Family Law Cases

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many of the family law cases in which it was unclear, at the time of the Association of Directors of Social Services survey in July, whether there was serious disagreement between medical practitioners as to the causes of harm to children, it is now clear that such disagreement is present. [195175]

Margaret Hodge: We do not have this information, in the form that is requested. However I am confident that the courts and local social services will have regard to the recent court judgments in their consideration of cases. Where courts have made recent determinations in cases, these will have reflected the advice given to civil courts in the family Appeal Court cases of Re LB and Re LU, following the judgment in the criminal Appeal Court case of R. v. Cannings , on how to approach the evidence given by medical expert witnesses in family proceedings.

I would like also to draw my hon. and learned Friend's attention to my reply to her question 194996, and to the completion of the second stage survey of the review of children's cases, who were already the subject of a care or related order. The results of this further survey, carried out by the Association of Directors of Social Services, have been placed in the Library.

Integrated Children's System

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the relationship will be between the proposed Integrated Children's System and the databases proposed in the Children Bill. [195290]

Margaret Hodge: The Integrated Children's System (ICS) will be quite different from the information database(s). The ICS is a national framework for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities (CSSRs) to support their work with children in need and their families. It provides a single approach for assessment, planning, intervention and reviewing based on an understanding of children's developmental needs in the context of their families and communities. It is designed to improve outcomes for children in need. The information gathered in the course of working with children and their families is recorded by social services. These records have traditionally been paper-based although a growing number of councils have electronic record keeping systems in place. As part of implementing the Integrated Children's System, social service records will all be kept electronically, replacing paper-based systems. This will provide a more effective way of keeping and accessing records relating to social services work with children and families than exists at present.

The information database(s) provided for by the Children Bill will not contain detailed case information such as this. The information sharing databases will be broader in their coverage than the ICS (they will cover all children in England, whereas the Integrated Children's System will record information about the 4 per cent. of children in need known to social services at any one time), but narrower in terms of the information they will hold about the child. They will contain basic information about all children and the contact details of practitioners working with them across the board. This will be a valuable tool in aiding a wide range of practitioners in working together to meet children's needs.

There is no explicit relationship between the IT system which supports the use of the Integrated Children's System and the information databases. The IT system for the Integrated Children's System is designed to hold information about children in need and their families, who are in receipt of services from social services. It is, therefore, a specialist system for holding case based data.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provisions are being made to allow children who would not be on the Child Protection Register to be placed on the Integrated Children's System. [195321]

Margaret Hodge: By December 2005, information on all children referred to local authorities with social services responsibilities as potential children in need, regardless of whether their names are on the child protection register, will be being recorded on the IT system which supports use of the Integrated Children's System.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which children will be listed on the Integrated Children's Register; [195322]

(2) when the Integrated Children's System will be implemented. [195336]

Margaret Hodge: By December 2005, information on all children referred to local authorities with social services responsibilities will be being recorded on the IT system which supports use of the Integrated Children's System.

The Integrated Children's System (ICS) will be quite different from the information database(s). The ICS is a framework for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities (CSSRs) to help in their work with children in need and their families. It provides a single approach for assessment, planning, intervention and reviewing based on an understanding of children's developmental needs in the context of their families and communities. It is designed to improve outcomes for children in need. The information gathered in the course of working with children and their families must be recorded by social services. These records have traditionally been paper-based although a growing number of councils have electronic record keeping systems in place. As part of implementing the integrated children's system, social service records will all be kept electronically, replacing paper-based systems. The ICS is simply a better way to maintain and meet existing record keeping requirements and, therefore, requires no legislative provision.

The ICS will provide a more effective way of keeping and accessing records relating to social services work with children and families than exists at present. This will help improve standards of service to children and families.

The information database(s) provided for by the Children Bill will not contain detailed case information such as this. The information sharing databases will be broader in their coverage than the ICS (they will cover all children in England, whereas the ICS will record information about the 4 per cent. of children in need known to social services at any one time), but narrower in terms of the information they will hold about the child. They will contain basic information about all children and the contact details of practitioners working with them across the board. This will be a new and valuable tool in aiding a wide range of practitioners in working together to meet children's needs.

There is no explicit relationship between the IT system which supports the use of the ICS and the information databases. The IT system which CSSRs purchase for the ICS are designed to hold information about children in need and their families, who are in receipt of services from social services. It is, therefore, a specialist system for holding case based data.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what ways the Integrated Children's Register is different from the Child Protection Register. [195323]

Margaret Hodge: A child protection register is a central register which is maintained for each area covered by a social services department. The register should list all the children resident in the area (including those who have been placed there by another local authority or agency) who are considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm, and for whom there is a child protection plan.

Working Together to Safeguard Children (1999) sets out that the principal purpose of the register is to make agencies and professionals aware of those children who are judged to be at continuing risk of significant harm and in need of active safeguarding. Agencies and professionals who have concerns about a child are able to make inquiries of the register. It is essential, therefore, that both police and health professionals have access to the register through the custodian of the register both in and outside office hours.

The Integrated Children's System provides a single approach to undertaking the key processes of assessment, planning, intervention and review based on an understanding of children's developmental needs in the context of their families and communities. The Integrated Children's System is for use by social services, in collaboration with other agencies with responsibility for children in need under the Children Act 1989.

The Government explained, in Keeping Children Safe (2003), its response to the Victoria Climbié report that we will phase out the child protection register as the ICS is introduced. The ICS will hold all the necessary information about the child, including whether any child protection inquires under section 47 of the Children Act 1989 have ever been undertaken about the child, whether they are considered to be in ongoing need of protection, and whether they have a child protection plan. As a result, the child protection register will become unnecessary.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the purpose is of the Integrated Children's System. [195338]

Margaret Hodge: The Integrated Children's System is intended to improve outcomes for children in need. The ICS is a national framework for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities (CSSRs) to support their work with children in need and their families that provides a single approach for assessment, planning, intervention and reviewing based on an understanding of children's developmental needs in the context of their families and communities. The information gathered in the course of working with children and their families is recorded by social services. These records have traditionally been paper-based although a growing number of councils have electronic record keeping systems in place. As part of implementing the integrated children's system, social service records will all be kept electronically, replacing paper-based systems. The ability to record, retrieve and analyse information contained within electronic social services records will enable better assessments and more effective interventions for children in need than exists at present. It will also ensure consistent and comprehensive case records kept on individual children.

Education Funding (Manchester)

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding was spent per pupil in Manchester, Withington in each of the last seven years. [197877]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is submitted to the Department according to local education authority areas, rather than districts within an LEA. The figures provided are for Manchester LEA and are shown in the following table:

Combined LEA and school based expenditure[1,2] per pupil[3] (1996–97 to 2002–03)[4,5]

	Combined LEA and school based expenditure per pupil in Manchester LEA (£)
1996–97	2,850
1997–98	2,810
1998–99	3,020
1999–2000	3,090
2000–01	3,360
2001–02	3,840
2002–03	3,820

Notes:

1. The combined LEA and school based expenditure includes all expenditure on the education of children in LEA maintained establishments and pupils educated by the LEA other than in maintained establishments. This includes both school based expenditure and all elements of central LEA expenditure except youth and community and capital expenditure from revenue (CERA).
2. 1999–2000 saw a change in data source when the data collection moved from the RO1 form collected by the ODPM to the Section 52 form from the DfES. 2002–03 saw a further break in the time series following the introduction of Consistent Financial Reporting (CFR) and the associated restructuring of the outturn tables. The change in sources is shown by the dotted line. In 2002–03 the combined LEA and school based expenditure is calculated by Section 52 Outturn Table A line 51 net current expenditure (NCE) plus line 60 NCE (with adjustments to income to take account of School Standards Grant and Standards Fund scored here) plus lines 61 to 74 NCE. For 2001–02 and earlier years the expenditure is calculated as line 27 NCE after recharges for columns (b) to (f) and (h) plus line 15 from the remaining continuing education columns (g, i and j). This is taken from Section 52 Outturn Table 3 for 1999–2000 to 2001–02 and from the RO1 form previously.
3. Pupil figures include all pre-primary pupils, including those under 5s funded by the LEA and being educated in private settings, pupils educated in maintained mainstream schools and other LEA maintained pupils. The pupil data for pupils attending maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools are taken from the DfES Annual Schools Census. Private voluntary and independent (PVI) under 5 pupil numbers are taken from the Early Years census but are only included for 1999–2000 onwards. Other LEA maintained pupils are also included in the pupil count and this includes all pupils attending schools not maintained by the Authority for whom the Authority is paying full tuition fees, or educated otherwise than in schools and pupil referral units under arrangements made by the Authority drawn from the Form 8b submitted to the DfES. Also included as other LEA maintained pupils are all pupils attending pupil referral units who are not registered at a maintained mainstream school drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census. All pupil numbers are adjusted to be on a financial year basis.
4. Spending in 1997–98 reflects the transfer of moneys from local government to central government for the nursery vouchers scheme. These were returned to local government from 1998–99. The 1999–2000 figures reflect the return of GM schools to local authority maintenance.
5. In 2002–03 the combined LEA and school based unit cost for England showed a cash terms increase of 5 per cent. compared with a 10 per cent. increase in 2001–02. This is in part due to known misreporting of funding by some LEAs which had the estimated effect of reducing the 2002–03 England unit cost by around 50 per pupil (in cash terms). Manchester was one of the LEAs who had suspected funding in their income column and consequently it is likely that the true figure for 2002–03 will be higher than the £3,820 quoted here.
6. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.
7. Data are a reported in cash terms as submitted by the LEA on their section 52 statement.

Schools (Hendon)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in Hendon (a) had outside toilets, (b) did not have computer suites and (c) did not have interactive whiteboards (i) at 1 May 1997 and (ii) at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [197597]

Mr. Miliband: The only available information relates to interactive whiteboards and is shown in the table.

Percentage of schools with electronic interactive whiteboards in England—Position at 31 March each year

Maintained primary schools	28	48	63
Maintained secondary schools	65	82	92
Maintained special schools	35	53	71

ICT in Schools Survey

The increased numbers of schools with interactive whiteboards demonstrate the priority that schools are giving to this technology, which research shows can improve the pace of lessons and increase pupil motivation.

The latest information on information and communications technology in schools was published in Statistical First Release 27/2004 "Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2004", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

My Department does not keep records of the numbers of outside toilets in schools. However, the Department ran a capital programme bidding round under New Deal for Schools to remove outdoor toilets and improve energy management over two years, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, at a cost of about £70 million. The programme replaced a large proportion of the outside toilets in England. It is our understanding that the majority of outside toilets in English schools were replaced by indoor provision as a result of this bidding round.

DEFENCE

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what condolences he has offered to the surviving family members of Iraqi civilians killed as a result of military action taken by British forces in Iraq since 19 March 2003; what estimate has been made of the number of orphans created by civilian adults killed by British forces in Iraq; and what economic assistance has been offered by the United Kingdom to Iraqi families who have suffered the (a) loss of their main income earner and (b) long-term disablement of the main income earner as a result of United Kingdom military action in Iraq. [197617]

Mr. Hoon: There are no reliable or comprehensive figures for civilian fatalities. United Kingdom forces report all confirmed fatalities of which they are aware arising from incidents in which they are involved. During military engagements in Iraq however, civilian casualties are often taken away before British forces can determine numbers or identities.

Iraqi civilians alleging negligence against the Ministry of Defence may submit a compensation claim to the Department's Area Claims Officer based at Basra. When such claims are submitted, they are considered on the basis of whether or not the Ministry of Defence has a legal liability to pay compensation. Where there is a legal liability to pay compensation, we do so. Any amount payable is determined case by case, taking into account the specific circumstances of the injured party.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 10 November 2004, Official Report, column 716W, on Iraq, what criteria were used to determine which of the 3,000 pages of supporting documents were of potential weapons of mass destruction significance. [199036]

Mr. Hoon: A team of translators and a team of weapons of mass destruction experts worked alongside each other full-time to translate the Iraqi Declaration. Each page was reviewed by a translator and a WMD expert working together. Any page containing words or phrases that might have had relevance to WMD programmes was translated for comprehensive analysis.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the number of civilian casualties in Iraq since the invasion of Iraq in 2003. [195954]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

There are no figures for Iraqi civilian casualties that are wholly reliable and cover the whole period since military action began. The Iraqi Ministry of Health has been collating figures from hospital admissions since April 2004, which show that just under 4,000 civilians have been killed in the last six months. We regard this figure as the most reliable available.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are in place to monitor civilian casualties in Iraq. [195986]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

The Iraqi Ministry of Health began collating figures from hospital admissions in April 2004. These figures show that just under 4,000 civilians have been killed in the last six months.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the armed forces first sought authority from the Defence Crisis Management Organisation to initiate mobilisation measures for deployment to Iraq; [198427]

(2) when the armed forces first sought authority to initiate training for reservists for deployment to Iraq. [198428]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Authority to mobilise reserves and commence preparatory training for deployment to Iraq was formally sought on 2 January and granted by Ministers on 7 January 2003 once it became appropriate to do so in order to further military preparations.

Bribery

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from which (a) companies and (b) organisations the Ministry of Defence has requested (i) information and (ii) co-operation with regard to investigations relating to the enforcement of anti-bribery legislation since 2000. [184167]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 July 2004]: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Contractors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures are in place for reviewing contracts with a sole supplier for fabric and garments; and if he will make a statement. [197660]

Mr. Ingram: All clothing contracts placed by the Ministry of Defence are continually reviewed to ensure contractors' delivery and quality performance is satisfactory.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what criteria his Department's recent tender process for the provision of cloth, fabric and garments was decided; for what reason past experience of contracting with his Department was eliminated as a criteria from the tender process; and if he will make a statement. [197661]

Mr. Ingram: Under EU public procurement regulations we may only consider factors directly relevant to the nature of the items or services to be supplied in order to apply the principles of most economically advantageous tender.

The published award criteria in accordance with the public procurement regulations were technical compliance, cost of acquisition, soft issues (to determine partnering capability), and delivery.

Contractors' past performance was included in the pre-contract award evaluation process.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the number of UK-based companies contracted by his Department to provide garments and clothing in the last 10 years whose primary source of contractual work is with his Department; and if he will make a statement. [197665]

Mr. Ingram: Records are not maintained of companies whose primary source of contractual work has been with the Ministry of Defence in the last 10 years. It is estimated that the number is small and mainly in niche areas of the clothing range, particularly ceremonial items. The MOD encourages its contractors to have a diverse customer base to preclude dependency on one source of business.

Fishery Protection Squadron

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the HQ role of the Fishery Protection Squadron is; and what plans he has to change this role. [197708]

Mr. Ingram: The HQ role of the Fishery Protection Squadron is the provision of clear guidance, leadership, support and direction to units under its authority.

There are currently no plans to change the role of the Fishery Protection Squadron.

HMCS Chicoutimi

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's contribution will be to the investigation by the Defence Committee of the Canadian House of Commons into HMCS Chicoutimi. [197906]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has been asked for some background information to be used to inform the Standing Committee on National Defence and Veterans Affairs of the Canadian Parliament with respect to a study on the Acquisition of Submarines for the Canadian Forces. We understand the Committee's inquiry continues and no further requests for assistance have been received.

Naval Navigational Aids

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's expenditure on naval navigational aids was in each of the last 10 years for (a) Northern Ireland, (b) England and Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) each military port in the UK. [197349]

Mr. Ingram: The future provision of Marine Services is the subject of a PPP/PFI acquisition programme. Work relating to the provision of naval navigation aids forms part of the range of services, which is included in the invitation to negotiate. To divulge details of current expenditure could prejudice the fairness of the competition, and the potential for gaining best value for money, by giving industry the advantage of knowing part of the current the Ministry of Defence costs. It would also disadvantage the current in-house provider, the Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service, who are also competing for this part of the future work. I am therefore withholding this information under Exemption 7 (effective management and operations of the public service) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

RAF St. Mawgan

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with (a) individuals and (b) organisations from Cornwall relating to the continuing use of RAF St. Mawgan for civilian aviation use. [197469]

Mr. Ingram: Ministry of Defence officials have written to Cornwall county council and will be meeting local authority officers shortly. I have also agreed that officials should brief the hon. Member for North Cornwall (Mr. Tyler). I would be happy for them to brief my hon. Friend.

Submarines

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department made of the level of maintenance required for Upholder Class submarines to maintain their seaworthiness prior to their sale to the Canadian Government; what recommendations were made to increase spending to maintain seaworthiness; and if he will make a statement. [197909]

Mr. Ingram: After the Upholder Class submarines were taken out of Royal Navy service, the vessels were maintained to a standard to ensure that reactivation remained a cost-effective option. Following the agreement with the Canadian Government, on the lease to buy of the submarines, the Ministry of Defence identified the scope of the work required to meet the acceptance standards of the Royal Navy and made provision to fund a contract with BAE Systems for this work, including additional maintenance, to be undertaken.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of employing the US General Dynamics Electric Boat Division to assist with the construction of the Astute class submarines; and what the reasons were for their involvement in the construction process. [197962]

Mr. Ingram: General Dynamics Electric Boat is employed on the Astute programme to bring proven expertise notably from its current Virginia Class attack submarine programme. The United States Department of Defense has facilitated this via a Government to Government Foreign Military Sale. Electric Boat support takes the form of specialist draughtsman support and management assistance to BAE Systems at Barrow. This assistance is ongoing and the Foreign Military Sale allows for up to $98 million on this facility. This assistance is aimed at reducing risk and ensuring good value for the taxpayer.

HMS Grafton

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates were received for the refit of HMS Grafton prior to the decision to decommission her. [197709]

Mr. Ingram: No estimates were sought or received for the next refit of HMS Grafton, which was due in mid 2006 and would have been the subject of competition nearer the time.

Territorial Army

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether Territorial Army soldiers deployed to Iraq were required to achieve a skilled grade in their weapon test; [196885]

(2) how many Territorial Army soldiers deployed in Iraq since March 2003 have accidentally discharged weapons; [196880]

(3) whether his Department has received notifications of concern from military units deployed in Iraq about inadequate training in personal weapons by members of the Territorial Army who had been passed as average by the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre; [196881]

(4) how many Territorial Army soldiers deployed to Iraq since March 2003 arrived with notes cautioning the receiving unit that they were a high safety risk due to having been passed as average by the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre; [196882]

(5) whether his Department has been notified of concerns by the staff at the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre about the deployment of reservists to Iraq since March 2003 who had been graded average in their weapons test; [196884]

(6) what measures his Department is taking to rectify the failures in training for reservists identified at the court martial of Lance Corporal Ian Blaymire; [197194]

(7) who within his Department was responsible for the failures identified at the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre in the trial of Lance Corporal Ian Blaymire; [197195]

(8) if he will make a statement on the allegation by Mr. Paul Camp, Assistant Judge Advocate, that the Army had lied in an attempt to prevent the exposure of the very poor training and very poor leadership to which reservists who had been sent to Iraq received. [197198]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 2004]: A clear policy on the standards required of reservists before deployment on operations was and is in place. This policy directs that all Territorial Army (TA) soldiers deployed on operations to Iraq are required to achieve an overall skilled pass in their Individual Training Directive (ITD1(A))—weapons handling test (WHT)—for their personal weapon prior to their deployment. ITD1(A) comprises seven components. Component 1 is the safety assessment and is marked at pass or fail. The other components relate primarily to skill at arms and can be assessed as skilled, average or fail.

Analysis of our records has so far established that three individuals who have failed the safety test have deployed to Iraq, but none was equipped with a weapon. All three were employed in a field hospital: one a surgeon; one a chef; and one a medical technician.

Evidence given at the recent court martial of Lance Corporal Blaymire suggests that during the mobilisation for earlier deployments to Iraq a decision was taken at the Reserve Training and Mobilisation Centre (RTMC) that for two elements of the ITD(A) (loading a magazine and wind tables—neither of which is related to safety) performance at average would be sufficient for the then operational requirement. While this did not accord strictly with the stated standards required, this decision reflected professional military judgment at the time.

Since 4 October 2004 RTMC has directed that stated policy be followed. We are identifying those deployed in Iraq who passed the two modules at average and will judge the need, if any, for additional in-theatre training. I am assured that, at no time, has safety been compromised. This is borne out by our Operation Telic "Lessons Identified" records which contain no comments from operational commanders about safety deficiency with regard to personal weapon handling among deployed TA personnel.

The media have reported a number of allegations in relation to the evidence given at the court martial. We take all these allegations seriously and when we have received the transcript of the court's proceedings we will examine the evidence in detail. In the meantime, we have set up a Learning Account and an Army Board of Inquiry has been convened. We shall be as open as possible in making the findings of both public.

Information on the number of TA soldiers who have negligently discharged their weapon is not held centrally. Neither are we able to differentiate between regular and reservist personnel once deployed on operations. I shall in due course provide details of the number of cases where disciplinary action has been taken as a result of a Royal Military Police investigation into such incidents.

Since the start of operations in Iraq we have mobilised over 9,000 Army Reservists who have performed with distinction and great professionalism. As reported by the House of Commons Defence Committee, the vast majority of demobilising reservists who responded to a questionnaire in September 2003 believed that they had been either "very well" or "well" prepared for their deployment.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Equal Pay

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what representations she has received from women's organisations on equal pay for equal work. [197078]

Ms Hewitt: I host regular meetings with the Trades Union Congress (TUC) Women's Committee, at which the subject of equal pay is discussed. Recently, I announced the funding by the Government of the Equal Pay Panel of Experts, developed by the TUC, which will give free advice/guidance sessions to organisations looking to investigate or undertake an equal pay review in partnership with unions

We are working with the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC), Opportunity Now, trade unions and employers to meet our target of 45 per cent. of organisations having conducted equal pay reviews by 2008. Recently, I announced the Government's Plan to tackle occupational segregation, which grew out of the EOC's timely investigation into occupational segregation, one of the causes of the gender pay gap

WALES

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195663]

Mr. Touhig: There is minimal use of Open Source Software (OSS) within the Wales Office.

There are no immediate plans to increase usage of OSS in the Wales Office at present.

Our future use of open source software will follow the Government's open source software policy published on 28 October 2004. The draft policy document is available to view at www.govtalk.gov.uk

Departmental Staff

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the staff in his Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196124]

Mr. Touhig: The figures are as follows:

(a) 5 per cent.

(b) 4 per cent.

Health Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the National Assembly regarding the delivery of health services in rural areas in Wales. [197077]

Mr. Touhig: The National Assembly has responsibility for managing the National Health Service across Wales. At a local level, Local Health Boards (LHBs) are responsible for commissioning health services based on the needs of the people who live in their area, including rural communities. Powys LHB has the largest rural area and also provides community services to its population.

I regularly meet the National Assembly's Health Minister to discuss the provision of healthcare in Wales, including services provided in rural areas.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191439]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office was established from 1 July 1999, and information before April 2000 would only be available at disproportionate cost.

The Wales Office provided:

4 mobile phones for Ministers and Special Advisers and 11 for officials in 2000–01;

4 mobile phones for Ministers and Special Advisers and 13 for officials in 2001–02;

4 mobile phones for Ministers and Special Advisers and 14 for officials in 2002–03

4 mobile phones for Ministers and Special Advisers and 15 for officials in 2003–04

I refer the hon. Member to the answer previously given to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) on 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 323W. The total cost of providing mobile phones in 2003–04 was £7,259. This includes the costs of rental and calls. Records indicate that only one handset was reported lost and there was no cost.

Quangos

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with his Welsh Assembly colleagues on the role of quangos in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [197813]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with Assembly Ministers on a wide range of issues of mutual interest, including the work of the various assembly sponsored public bodies.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Archaeologists

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many professional archaeologists are employed (a) directly in her Department and (b) in agencies for which her Department is responsible. [198847]

Mr. Caborn: The Department does not directly employ any archaeologists. Our statutory advisers on archaeological matters are English Heritage, and they employ a total of 306 archaeologists.

Free TV Licences

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioners in Newcastle-under-Lyme receive a free television licence. [198686]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The information on the numbers of households in receipt of free TV licences is not available by constituency. The number of households with at least one resident aged 75 or over in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency in each year since 2002–03 is in the table. Each of these households would therefore be eligible for a free TV licence. Household information relating to earlier years is not available.

	Households with someone aged 75 or over
2002–03	5,565
2003–04	5,640

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Winter fuel payment data 2002–03 and 2003–04.
3. Any residence found to have four or more occupants aged 60 and over is not included in the household figures as it is assumed to be RCNH (Residential Care/Nursing Home).
4. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households are in receipt of a free television licence in the Wansbeck constituency. [198694]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

The information on the numbers of households in receipt of free television licences is not available by constituency. The number of households with at least one resident aged 75 or over in the Wansbeck constituency is 5,265. Each of these households would therefore be eligible for a free TV licence.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Winter fuel payment data 2003–04.
3. Any residence found to have four or more occupants aged 60 and over is not included in the household figures as it is assumed to be RCNH (Residential Care/Nursing Home).
4. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

Lottery Funding

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the contribution of the National Lottery to reducing poverty in deprived areas of the UK. [198671]

Estelle Morris: Since its launch in November 1994 the National Lottery has raised more than £16 billion for the good causes, with over 180,000 projects benefiting from awards across the UK. Although it can be difficult to determine precisely the extent of their contribution to reducing poverty, a significant number of Lottery-funded projects have helped to regenerate inner cities, create employment and strengthen communities.

This is supported by the conclusions of an independent report commissioned by Camelot and published in November 2004 by the Henley Centre. It concluded that there was "consistent and clear evidence" of improved economic and/or social outcomes; and that "the vast majority of awards are inclusive in their effort". Henley Centre comments that this trend has become marked since 1998, when Lottery distributing bodies were required to address more strongly social and regional projects.

Sri Guru Granth Sahab ji

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) direction and (b) advice she has given to (i) libraries and (ii) the British Library, about the treatment of Sri Guru Granth Sahab ji. [198850]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend Secretary of State has not given any direction or advice to public libraries and the British Library about the treatment of the Sri Guru Granth Sahab ji. Public libraries and the British Library operate independently from Government and are responsible for seeking advice on the treatment of their manuscripts from appropriate sources.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Service Sports Council

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the relationship of the Civil Service Sports Council is to the UK Civil Service. [197853]

Ruth Kelly: The Civil Service Sports Council Limited is a company registered under the Industrial and Provident Society Acts. It is owned by its members who pay a membership subscription. Membership is open to employees in Civil Service Departments or Agencies, Royal Mail, British Telecommunications and other public bodies such as museums, research councils or companies carrying out ex-civil service work.

CSSC Ltd. receives an annual grant from the Cabinet Office to encourage and co-ordinate the pursuit of all forms of sport and recreation throughout the Civil Service.

The range of activities organised by CSSC can be seen on their website at www.cssc.co.uk. Most activities are run by volunteers.

Contingency plans

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what advice has been issued regarding stockpiling provisions in the case of an enforced quarantine following a terrorist attack. [195854]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

We advise that people are prepared for emergencies including making sure they have some provisions available in case of power loss or if services were disrupted—whatever the cause.

This advice can be found at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/terrorism/

We do not advise stockpiling provisions. If people did need to be kept away from others because they had an infectious disease, or had not been decontaminated they would have to be cared for and supplied with provisions as necessary.

Copyright

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) if she will make a statement on the reproduction of items which are copyright of HMSO by political parties; [198065]

(2) what permissions have been granted to political parties by (a) the Controller of HMSO, (b) the Queen's Printer for Scotland and (c) for Crown copyright material to be reproduced, since 1997; [198066]

(3) what guidance has been issued to the Government Information Service about the reproduction of Central Office of Information material by political parties; and if she will make a statement. [198067]

Ruth Kelly: The responsibility for the management of Crown copyright material produced by Government Departments in England, Wales and Northern Ireland rests with the Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office (HMSO). The Queen's Printer for Scotland is an office holder within the Scottish Administration and so is not answerable to the UK Parliament. The Controller of HMSO is not responsible for copyrights owned by the Stationery Office Limited or any other private sector company.

Most Crown copyright material can be re-used under an on-line licence known as the Click-Use Licence. Under the Click-Use Licence holders may re-use a range of core Government information without needing to obtain specific permission for each item. Details of licence holders, including political parties that hold licences, can be found on HMSOnline at: http://www.click-use.hmso.gov.uk/online/pLogin.asp.

The terms of the Click-Use Licence, which can also be viewed on HMSOnline at: http://www.hmso.gov.uk/copyright/licences/core/c_terms.htm, sets out the conditions of re-use. Political parties are treated in the same way as any other re-user.

External Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how much his office has spent on external consultants to deal with press and media affairs since he took office; and if he will make a statement; [199203]

(2) pursuant to his Answer of 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 855W, on consultants, how much his office has spent on external consultants excluding press and media since he took office. [199204]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the response given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) to the hon. Member on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 855W.

IT costs

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent on information technology in his office in this financial year. [195950]

Mr. Milburn: The costs of appointing a separate Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be met from the existing Cabinet Office budget, and will be accounted for in the 2004–05 Cabinet Office Annual Report and Resource Accounts, which will include the spend on information technology for my office.

Ministerial Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many press releases he has issued in his ministerial capacity since he took office. [199202]

Mr. Milburn: I have issued one press release, dated 10 November 2004, since my appointment.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the meetings with (a) individuals and (b) organisations external to the Government that he has attended in his official capacity as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster since his appointment to the post, broken down by (i) date and (ii) subject of the meeting. [197530]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 720W to the hon. and learned Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier) and on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 620W, to the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Rosindell).

Strategy Unit

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the Strategy Unit's progress with the Countries at Risk of Instability project. [195976]

Mr. Milburn: The Strategy Unit's Countries at Risk of Instability programme was launched in January 2004. Work on the project is still continuing.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Armenian Genocide

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is towards the (a) scale of, (b) responsibility for and (c) recognition of the Armenian genocide. [198403]

Mr. MacShane: The Government understands the strength of feeling about this terrible episode of history. The massacres of 1915–16 were condemned in explicit terms by the British Government of the day. We fully endorse that view. Historians disagree as to whether the Armenian massacres constitute genocide as defined by the 1948 UN Convention on Genocide.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether recognition of the Armenian genocide is one of the political criteria that Turkey will be required to meet before EU accession. [198404]

Mr. MacShane: No.

Burma

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what criteria were applied for a state-owned enterprise's inclusion in Annex II of the Council Common Position on Burma 2004/730/CFSP and Annex IV of Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004, as inserted by Article 1(3) of Council Regulation (EC) No 1853/2004; [198383]

(2) for what reason Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise was excluded from Annex II of the Council Common Position on Burma 2004/730/CFSP and Annex IV of Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004, as inserted by Article 1(3) of Council Regulation (EC) No 1853/2004. [198384]

Mr. Straw: The UK worked hard to get the strongest possible measures in the EU Common Position on Burma with the aim of highlighting the role of the military in continuing human rights abuses and political stalemate in Burma, while targeting the measures to minimise that impact on the poor.

The EU therefore chose to target the two military owned companies. Union of Myanmar Economic Holdings Ltd. (UMEHL) and the Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC), their subsidiaries and joint ventures. UMEHL and MEC have sought in recent years to monopolise foreign investment. The profits directly benefit the military.

Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise is not a military owned company.

The decision amending the EU Common Position was made by unanimity.

China

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Chinese Government on the subject of discrimination against religious minorities, with particular reference to Christians. [198069]

Mr. Rammell: I raised the ratification of the International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights with the Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui during my visit to China in July. We have made clear that harassment of religious groups is unacceptable and not in keeping with the provisions of the International Covenant.

Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials raised several concerns about religious freedom in China with Wang Zuo'an, Deputy Director General for the State Administration for Religious Affairs, during the latter's visit to the UK in September.

We also discuss human rights issues in depth during our biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities on their policy of repatriating North Korean refugees; and if he will urge them to admit the UNHCR to the border area between the two countries. [198072]

Mr. Rammell: I personally raised this issue with Vice Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui during my visit to China in July.

We also raise the issue of North Korean asylum seekers in China during our biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue, the last round of which was held in May. We continue to urge the Chinese to observe their obligations under the 1951 convention and allow the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees access to the China/North Korea border region.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Foreign Ministers of other European Union countries for the maintaining of the EU's embargo on the sale of armaments to the People's Republic of China. [198881]

Mr. Rammell: The Government supports the decision of the European Council in December 2003 to review the EU Arms Embargo on China. This review is on-going—it was last discussed by EU Foreign Ministers at the 11 October General Affairs and External Relations Council. The Government does not wish to exclude any options for the review, nor to pre-empt the conclusion of the review.

The Government continues to implement the Arms Embargo as set out by the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the late Derek Fatchett, in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 240–41.

Correspondence

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to correspondence from the hon. Member for Hull, North regarding Mr. Ken Bigley. [197129]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean replied on 5 November 2004.

Côte d'Ivoire

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of recent progress in delivering peace and political stability in Côte d'Ivoire. [198777]

Mr. Mullin: The situation in Côte d'Ivoire remains volatile and the immediate future is uncertain.

We remain convinced that a political solution remains the best way forward for the country. We therefore welcome the efforts of the African Union to bring about a political settlement at the Abuja summit of 14 November. We also welcome the unanimous adoption of UN Security Council 1572 on 15 November, which, among other things, urges all sides including President Gbagbo to begin implementing immediately all the commitments they have made.

Dr. Amer Al-Saddi

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received in respect of the detention of Dr. Amer Al-Saddi, the former scientific adviser to the Iraqi Government, by the United States; and whether he has asked his United States counterpart why former Iraqi officials held in detention by the United States have not been charged or released. [194874]

Mr. Rammell: I cannot provide details on individuals held by the United States. Dr. Amer Al-Saddi's case will be reviewed by the Detainee Review Committee in the same way as all other cases.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what contingency plans were drawn up by his Department (a) unilaterally, (b) with other Government departments and (c) with other foreign countries, for the evacuation of British nationals and others from Equatorial Guinea immediately prior to the attempted coup earlier this year; [198219]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 631W, when his Department informed the authorities in Equatorial Guinea of the alleged coup plot; [198227]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 631W, what information on the attempted coup plot was made available to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [198228]

Mr. Straw: In late January 2004 reports of a coup plot were circulating in the media. The first media report of which officials were aware was in the Spanish newspaper El Mundo on 30 January. At the same time similar allegations were contained in confidential information received by the Government. In accordance with exemption 1*(c)* of Part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, we do not provide details of confidential diplomatic exchanges.

We were sceptical about the reports, as there had been a number of coup rumours in the media previously, including October 2003. In so far as we could, given the sources of our report, we attempted to establish whether there was any more truth to this particular allegation. We took action to try to establish whether any UK companies were involved and to underline our opposition to involvement by any UK company in such activities. As we were not able to establish any definitive evidence which could add significantly to the reports which had already appeared in the media we took no further action with other African governments. But we did review and update our civil contingency plan.

It has been the consistent policy of Her Majesty's Government never to condone or to support the actions of those who seek to overthrow sovereign governments by military coup or any other undemocratic means.

EU (Applicant States)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is his Department's policy that all applicant countries for EU membership should recognise all existing member states. [198632]

Mr. MacShane: Article 49 of the Treaty on European Union provides that any European state which respects the EU's fundamental principles can apply for membership. The European Council set out the criteria for membership at its meeting in Copenhagen in 1993 Of these, the political criteria must be met befor starting negotiations. There is no requirement or applicant countries which relates to recognition, but it i inconceivable that an applicant country could becom an EU member state without normal diplomatic relations with other EU member states.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the procedure is for resolution of disputes regarding EU association agreements; and what the role of the European Court of Justice is. [198631]

Mr. MacShane: Disputes regarding association agreements may arise in several ways. Disputes between the EC and its member states on the one hand and the other party or parties to the agreement on the other will typically be addressed within the institutional framework established by the agreement. This will usually include an Association Council and a Committee of Ministers.

Disputes among the EC member states or between them and the Commission will usually be addressed within the Council at working group level, at the Permanent Representatives Council (COREPER) or if necessary in the Council itself.

The European Court of Justice may have jurisdiction in relation to a dispute concerning an association agreement. This will depend on the nature of the dispute and the parties involved. In the past the Court has, for example, often been asked to interpret provisions of association agreements under the procedure in Article 234 TEC (Treaty establishing the European Community). Article 234 TEC states that "The Court of Justice shall have jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings concerning:

> (a) the interpretation of this Treaty;
> (b) the validity and interpretation of acts of the institutions of the Community and of the European Central Bank;
> (c) the interpretation of the statutes of bodies established by an act of the Council, where those statutes so provide.

Where such a question is raised by any court or tribunal of a member state, that court or tribunal may, if it considers that a question is necessary to enable it to give judgement, request the Court of Justice to give a ruling thereon."

Georgia

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Georgia. [198740]

Mr. Rammell: Since he came to power following elections in January 2004, President Saakashvili has put priority on reform, the fight against corruption and the re-establishment of Georgian authority over all of Georgia's regions. We have welcomed the reform measures so far undertaken, and maintain a bilateral assistance programme in support of further reform. We aim to spend £15 million over the next three years, mainly focused on poverty reduction, governance and capacity building.

The situation in Georgia's two separatist regions is tense. Relative calm has been restored in South Ossetia since the crisis over the summer, but there are still regular occurrences of sniping. In Abkhazia, a stand-off persists between the two main candidates for the 'presidential' elections held on 3 October, with the losing candidate refusing to accept the judgment of the Abkhaz Supreme Court. With supporters of both candidates taking to the streets the situation is threatening to turn violent.

Through our membership of the Friends of the United Nations Secretary General, the OSCE and the work of the UK's Special Representative for the South Caucasus, Sir Brian Fall, we are active in urging all involved parties to work co-operatively and prudently towards resolution of the issues. In this context we have consistently made clear our concern that the territorial integrity of Georgia should be respected.

Indonesia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to propose that the UN review the Act of Free Choice in West Papua; and if he will make a statement. [197710]

Mr. Alexander: The UK has no plans to make such a proposal. In November 1969 the UN General Assembly discussed the report of the special representative who oversaw the implementation of the Act of Free Choice. A resolution was adopted to take note of the report and the fulfilment of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the 1962 Dutch/Indonesian agreement. 84 member states voted in favour, none against and 30 abstained. Any re-evaluation of the status of Papua is a matter to be resolved peacefully between the Indonesian Government and the people of Papua.

The British Government, together with other members of the international community, stress to the Indonesian authorities the need to fully implement the 2001 Special Autonomy law for Papua. This law allows for the establishment of a Truth and Reconciliation Committee to look at the incorporation of Papua into Indonesia in the 1960s.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Indonesia concerning their treatment of the people of West Papua; and if he will make a statement. [197711]

Mr. Alexander: Together with our European partners, we regularly raise our concerns about the situation in Papua. On 28 October EU ministerial representatives visited Indonesia and met with the newly elected President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono and the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Hasan Wirayuda. Both expressed their belief that the full implementation of special autonomy would help resolve the problems in Papua. In his inaugural speech on 20 October, President Yudhoyono identified the resolution of the problems in Papua as one of his key concerns.

Iran

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Iranian Government regarding the arrest of Ms Mahboobeh Abbasgholizadeh on 1 November. [198779]

Mr. Rammell: Official Iranian media have recently reported the arrest of several journalists and NGO staff, including Ms Mahboobeh Abbasgholizadeh. We have serious concerns about the increasing harassment of journalists and NGO staff in Iran. With our full support, the EU Presidency intends to raise the issue with the Iranian authorities soon.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what provisions for verification are contained in the draft agreement between the Governments of the USA, France, Germany and the United Kingdom with the Government of Iran. [197952]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The agreement between the Governments of France, Germany and the UK, with the support of the High Representative of the European Union, on the one hand, and the Government of Iran, on the other, was published on 15 November. It commits Iran to suspend work on the enrichment of uranium and on the reprocessing of nuclear fuel; to meet all its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and to allow full and unrestricted access by International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors to its nuclear facilities in accordance with its nuclear safeguards agreement with the Agency. This latter requirement will enable independent verification of the extent of Iran's nuclear activities.

The Government of the United States is not a party to the agreement.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date his Department (a) completed its analysis of Iraq's declaration to the United Nations of December 2002 and (b) communicated to the UN its view that there were omissions in the declaration; what omissions were indicated; whether such omissions are considered to be the case now; and if he will make a statement. [190229]

Mr. MacShane: The analysis of the text of the Iraqi declaration was completed on 21 December 2002 and our observations on the declaration were passed to the United Nations at that time. The declaration was compared against previous declarations made by Iraq, and against the outstanding disarmament questions raised by the final report of UNSCOM, produced in 1999. Any discrepancies uncovered in this process were indicated to the United Nations. The Government continues to believe that there were omissions in the Iraqi declaration, and this has been borne out by reports from UNMOVIC at the time of the resumption of inspections in 2002–03 and, subsequently by the Iraq Survey Group.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the new Iraqi constitution. [198753]

Mr. Rammell: According to the Transitional Administrative Law, the Transitional National Assembly, which will be elected in January next year, shall write a draft of the permanent constitution by no later than 15 August 2005. UN Security Council Resolution 1546 envisages a leading role for the UN in promoting national discussion and consensus building on the drafts of the constitution. The draft shall be presented to the Iraqi people for approval in a general referendum to be held no later than 15 October 2005. The general referendum will be successful and the draft constitution ratified if a majority of the voters in Iraq approve and if two-thirds of the voters in three or more governorates do not reject it.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ask the US authorities in Iraq to provide immediate assistance to the International Committee of the Red Cross to enable it to have full and free access to Falluja. [199136]

Mr. Rammell: The Iraqi Interim Government are in the lead in improving the humanitarian situation in Fallujah. We understand that the Iraq Ministry of Health, supported by the Multi-National Force, is currently doing all it can to facilitate Red Cross and Red Crescent assistance to Falluja and the surrounding areas.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 756W, on the Iraq Survey Group, if he will list the source references for the material now made public to which the Prime Minister referred on 28 January 2004, Official Report, column 304, as unpublished pending the Iraq Survey Group report. [197045]

Mr. MacShane: All the relevant information was submitted either to the Iraq Survey Group or to the Butler review or, in some cases, to both. Their respective reports published as much information as it was possible to do without prejudice to national security.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the interim Government of Iraq about attacks on Iraqi Christians and their places of worship; and if he will make a statement. [197754]

Mr. Rammell: British officials in Iraq regularly meet with members of the Christian communities. We have raised concerns about attacks by extremists on Iraqi Christians and their places of worship with the Iraqi authorities, who, I should stress, share our concerns and remain committed to the protection of minorities as set out in the Transitional Administrative Law. Our missions in Iraq will continue to monitor the situation and make representations as appropriate.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 520W, on Iraq, on the basis of what criteria the Government decided whether to share the intelligence on the claim that Iraq sought to procure uranium from Africa with the (a) Iraq Survey Group and (b) Butler Committee. [198833]

Mr. Straw: All relevant material was passed to the Butler review. In the case of the Iraq Survey Group, the normal rule applied which requires that information received from allied intelligence and security agencies cannot be disseminated further without the consent of the originator.

Ivory Coast

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between the Government and (a) France and (b) the UN regarding hostilities within Ivory Coast between northern rebels and government forces. [198254]

Mr. Mullin: We have been in constant contact with both the French and the UN about the situation in the Ivory Coast.

On 15 November the UN Security Council unanimously adopted Resolution 1572. This condemns the Government of Côte d'Ivoire's air-strikes; reiterates support for French and UN action on the ground; emphasises the need for a political solution; and imposes an arms embargo on Côte d'Ivoire with immediate effect. It also agrees to impose a travel ban and assets freeze on those blocking the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire should there have been no progress on implementing the Accra III Peace Agreement by 15 December.

Jamaica

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to assist Jamaica in fighting gun and drug culture, with particular reference to (a) funding and (b) counter narcotics and weapons expertise; and if he will make a statement. [198274]

Mr. Rammell: We continue to support Jamaica's efforts to counter drugs and crime problems.

Included in our assistance is support worth around £3.6 million for the Caribbean Security Sector in 2003–04. Of this, at least £850,000 was spent on projects in Jamaica tackling gun and drugs crime.

We are working closely with the Jamaican Constabulary Force (JCF) on targeting individuals trying to smuggle drugs through airports. We are funding courses to train the JCF in using firearms safely and properly, and providing assistance in investigating high profile crimes. The Department for International Development is assisting in the reform and modernisation of the JCF. Our police officers in the UK are working closely with the Jamaicans while dealing with drugs and crime problems in the UK, and supporting their new anti-crime operation "Kingfish". We have conducted joint operations with the Jamaican Defence Force and other international parties, and a number of Royal Navy and Auxiliary fleet ships have been in the region supporting the efforts being made on maritime interdiction.

Legal Base (EU)

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is in respect of choice of legal base for EU measures; whether preference is given to bases requiring unanimity rather than qualified majority voting; and at what point in the decision-making process it is the policy of the UK to refer disputes over legal base and voting method to the European Court of Justice. [198128]

Mr. MacShane: The legal basis of a proposed measure is not a question of member state preference. It has to be determined by an analysis of the aim and content of the measure in question in the light of the provisions of the EC Treaty establishing the Community's power to act in the relevant area. The point at which the Government would consider referring a dispute about the legal basis of a measure to the ECJ similarly is determined by the relevant provisions of the Treaty, in particular. Article 230 TEC and the Statute and rules of Procedure of the Court.

Libya

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has raised the case of Mr. Fathi al Jehmi and his treatment by the Libyan Government with the Libyan Government. [198154]

Mr. Rammell: The Government are aware of the case of Fathi al Jehmi and is monitoring developments. The Government continue to have and to raise concerns about Libya's human rights record, including restrictions on freedom of expression and assembly, the treatment of political prisoners, arbitrary detention and on conditions in Libyan prisons.

The Government welcomed Amnesty International's visit to Libya in February—the first since 1988—and their report "Time to Make Human Rights a Reality". The report included the case of Fathi al Jehmi. The Government have been speaking to the Libyan authorities about this report and will continue to look for ways in which we can work with the Libyan authorities to improve the human rights situation there. This has included a number of visits to the United Kingdom by Libyan human rights groups, and a Foreign and Commonwealth Office-funded project to work with the Libyan authorities to improve the management of their prisons.

Macedonia

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to recognise the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia as The Republic of Macedonia in international fora. [198269]

Mr. MacShane: The Government uses the constitutional name "Republic of Macedonia" in bilateral relations. Along with the majority of our partners and allies, we use the designation 'the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia' in certain international fora.

Somalia

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking in conjunction with the international community to foster political stability in Somalia. [198265]

Mr. Mullin: The UK is fully committed to the establishment of a Transitional Federal Government for Somalia which represents an important opportunity to build political stability. We are supporting this process politically, working with other international partners, and providing financial assistance bilaterally and through the EU.

Student Visas

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons student visas issued to overseas nationals coming to the UK do not cover the full length of their courses. [198843]

Mr. Mullin: Overseas students who have been issued entry clearance to the United Kingdom to pursue a course of longer than twelve months are issued with a visa for the full duration of their course. If the course finishes in summer they are granted leave to enter until 31 October in the year in which they complete their course. For courses that do not follow the standard autumn to summer pattern an additional two months leave is added to the end of the course date. Postgraduate students are given four months beyond the end of their course irrespective of when it finishes. This allows postgraduate students the necessary time to make any corrections or redrafts to their thesis.

Sudan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding the progress of the Inter-governmental Authority on Development talks in Sudan. [198264]

Mr. Mullin: At the latest round of the IGAD-led talks on the comprehensive peace agreement, which took place in Kenya from 7–30 October, steady progress was made, including on permanent ceasefire arrangements and implementation modalities for the agreement. These talks are due to resume at the technical level on 26 November, and the principals, First Vice President Taha and Sudan People's Liberation Movement (SPLM) Chairman Garang, will reconvene on 11 December to address any remaining political issues. We continue to press both the Government of Sudan and the SPLM to fulfil their commitment to conclude the talks by the end of the year.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government have provided to the African Union troops in the Darfur region of Sudan, in terms of (a) funding, (b) equipment, (c) training and (d) transportation logistics. [198263]

Mr. Mullin: In May the UK contributed £2 million to help jump-start the African Union (AU) mission in Darfur. In August we helped fund the airlift of 150 Nigerian troops into Darfur, and, through the British Peace Support Team in Kenya, we provided logistics advice for the 150 Rwandan troops that joined the mission. We have also donated rations packs and maps, and provided technical planning expertise for the AU, as well as seconding a British monitor to the mission.

As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced in Addis Ababa on 7 October, we will also play our part in supporting the expansion of the AU force. We have set aside a further £12 million for this purpose. We are working hard to ensure that the extra troops can be deployed quickly, including by providing vehicles. We have informed the AU that we will consider requests for additional support as required, including training.

China

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Chinese counterpart about the imprisonment of Tenzin Deleg Rinpoche. [198289]

Mr. Rammell: We and our EU partners have raised in a series of demarches with the Chinese authorities our serious concerns about the way in which the trial of Tenzin Deleg Rinpoche was conducted and the lack of transparency. The most recent EU demarche took place on 4 February 2004. I raised the case bilaterally with Assistant Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui in December 2003.

I raised general Tibet issues with Assistant Foreign Minister Li Hui during my visit to China in October. We raised the case most recently during the UK China Human Rights Dialogue in May, when FCO officials asked for confirmation that the authorities would not carry out the death sentence. We also expressed concern at the judicial process and requested a re-trial. This case has also been included on our list of individual cases of concern for the November 2004 UK China Human Rights Dialogue round.

UK Detainees (United States)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens detained by the United States authorities in each of the last five years have subsequently been released from custody. [197362]

Mr. Mullin: We have kept records of the number of British nationals detained and subsequently released (including those detained for short periods without charge) by the US authorities since 2002. The relevant statistics are:

	Number
2002	[1]948
2003	1364
2004	[2]1044

[1] Excludes last quarter of the year for which figures are not available.

[2] Up to 30 June.

In addition, five British nationals who were detained by the US authorities at Guantanamo Bay were released in March 2004.

UN Reform

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with UN Secretary General Kofi Annan on reforming the UN with particular reference to processes for dealing with international terrorism. [198739]

Mr. MacShane: The Government at all levels, including my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, frequently discusses the international effort to combat terrorism with the UN and other member states. At present there are numerous initiatives under way at the UN, including the Secretary General's High Level Panel, the follow up to Security Council Resolutions 1535 and 1566 and negotiations on resolutions and conventions in the General Assembly.

British Indian Ocean Territory

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial arrangement exists with the United States with regard to its presence on (a) Diego Garcia and (b) other parts of the British Indian Ocean Territory; and when each arrangement is due to expire. [198784]

Mr. Rammell: There is no lease of Diego Garcia or any other part of the British Indian Ocean Territory (BIOT) to the United States, and they make no payment in respect of their presence there. Under the initial agreement of December 1966 between the UK and the US on the use of BIOT, the whole territory is to remain available for the defence needs of the two countries for an initial period of 50 years from 1966, and thereafter for a further period of 20 years unless either party has given prior notice to terminate it. A further agreement concluded in 1976, which has been supplemented by various other agreements, regulates the establishment and functioning of a United States Defence Facility in Diego Garcia and related matters.

Visa Costs

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the charge in pounds sterling is for a visitor's visa to the UK in (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Sri Lanka and (d) Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement. [198188]

Mr. Mullin: Our visa fees are set on a worldwide basis and are the same irrespective of the country in which an application is made. Our standard visit visa is valid for multiple entries for a six-month period. The fee is currently set at £36 payable in local currency. Longer visit visas are available allowing multiple entries providing no one visit exceeds a six-month duration. One, two, five and 10 year visit visa fees are £60, £70, £88 and £150 respectively.

Visa fees are set at a level to ensure that the full cost of providing the entry clearance service worldwide is met from fee income and that the UK taxpayer does not have to meet any of the costs. Visa fees are non-refundable. This information is on the UKvisas website www.ukvisas.gov.uk. Further information on the fees in local currency for the countries in question can be obtained from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website www.fco.gov.uk.

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the extension of the UN Mission for the Referendum on Western Sahara (MINURSO) plan for the Western Sahara until 30 April 2005; and what support the British Government are giving to MINURSO. [197911]

Mr. Rammell: The UK supported UN Security Council resolution 1570 adopted on 28 October, which extended the mandate of the UN Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) until 30 April 2005. By doing so, we reaffirmed our commitment to assist the parties in achieving a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution to the dispute, that provides for the self-determination of the people of the Western Sahara. The UK contributed over £1.5 million to MINURSO in 2003–04, and expects to contribute over £1.4 million in 2004–05.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with Saharwi activists on their appeal to the UN to enforce Chapter 7 of the UN Charter, with reference to fulfilling UN resolutions on Western Sahara. [197912]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with Saharan activists on their appeal to the UN to enforce Chapter 7 of the UN Charter. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met representatives of the Polisario Front in London in September 2004, when UN enforcement of Chapter 7 of the UN Charter in relation to the Western Sahara dispute was discussed.

UK policy is to support UN efforts to resolve the conflict in the Western Sahara and we urge all parties to work towards a mutually acceptable solution that provides the people of the Western Sahara with an opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the political situation in Western Sahara since June. [198275]

Mr. Rammell: United Nations Security Council resolution 1570, which was adopted unanimously on 28 October 2004, extended the mandate of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) until 30 April 2005. The resolution calls upon the parties and States of the region to continue to co-operate fully with the United Nations (UN) to end the current impasse and to achieve progress towards a political solution.

The Government continues to seek a just, lasting and mutually acceptable solution to the Western Sahara dispute that provides the people of the Western Sahara with an opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination. The Government believes UN efforts to find a solution to the dispute should be maintained.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between the Government and Botswana regarding the political situation in Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [198261]

Mr. Mullin: We remain in regular contact with Botswana and other countries in the region, about Zimbabwe, through our diplomatic missions and high-level visits.

I discussed the matter with President Mogae during the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in December 2003.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195628]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested is as follows:

2004

Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc) Act, section 26

Community Legal Services

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what proportion of calls received by Community Legal Services in the last period for which figures are available were attributable to each of the areas of advice covered by the service. [198522]

Mr. Lammy: Since the launch of Community Legal Service Direct advisers have answered calls in the following proportions:

	Percentage
Debt	53
Welfare Benefits	24
Education	13
Employment	4
Housing	4

The remaining 2 per cent. of calls went to lines which take in more than one category of law, and so it is not possible to determine which category each call concerned.

Debt, Education and Welfare Benefits law advice is available across England and Wales. Housing and Employment advice is available only in selected regions at present.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many advisers work for Community Legal Service Direct. [198523]

Mr. Lammy: As at 11 November 2004, the total number of full-time equivalent advisers working for Community Legal Service Direct was 53.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many callers have been eligible for legal aid and have received free telephone advice since the launch of Community Legal Services Direct in July. [198524]

Mr. Lammy: For the period 1 July 2004 to 30 September 2004, 4,972 cases have been reported by Community Legal Service Direct advice contractors. Of these, 1,325 (27 per cent.) were matters for clients who passed an eligibility test for legal aid, whilst 489 (10 per cent.) were for clients shown to be ineligible.

Any caller to Community Legal Service Direct can receive up to 30 minutes of advice and/or help finding an alternative source of advice.

The majority of matters reported so far have been cases in which the eligibility of the client was not tested (3,159 or 63 per cent.) because the problem could be dealt within the 30 minute time frame.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many calls have been handled by telephone advisers since the launch of Community Legal Services Direct in July. [198526]

Mr. Lammy: As at 11 November 2004, the total number of calls answered by Community Legal Service Direct specialist advisers since the service was launched on 14 July was 15,142.

Compensation Culture

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the evidential basis is for his statement on 10 November that there is a compensation culture in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [198411]

Mr. Lammy: The contents of the Government's statement reflected the evidence presented in the Better Regulation Task Force report "Better Routes to Redress", and the report's key finding that, despite widespread perceptions, it is a myth that society has suddenly become far more litigious and that claims for compensation are spiralling out of control. But the report also recognised that it is a damaging myth and it needs to be tackled. The Government's statement sets out how we intend to tackle it.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197304]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Constitutional Affairs was created in June 2003. Since its inception, my Department has conducted two advertising campaigns:

(i) poster advertising on buses to promote the recruitment of magistrates;

(ii) radio and press and ambient-media advertising targeting court fine defaulters (code-named Operation Payback 1 and 2)

Total spending on these campaigns was £966,000.

The creative and administration costs incurred by advertising agencies cannot be itemised separately as agencies do not charge separately for this work.

Similarly, my Department cannot separately identify its own administrative costs associated with advertising, as departmental administrative staff do not work exclusively on such campaigns.

Department for Constitutional Affairs advertising spend, 2003–04 to 2004–05

	Campaign	Contractor	Spend £
2003–04	Magistrates recruitment	Viacom Outdoor	342,000
	Fine defaulters	Barkers	230,000
2004–05	Magistrates recruitment	Viacom Outdoor	102,000
	Fine defaulters	Barkers	292,000
Total spend	—	—	966,000

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196601]

Mr. Lammy: The Government made a commitment to disclose details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 in Departmental Annual Reports. My Department's 2004 Annual Report was published on 30 April 2004. Copies are available in the Library of the House. However, no funding was received from outside commercial bodies for the threshold mentioned.

Jury Verdicts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will seek to amend section 8 of the Contempt of Court Act 1981 to allow parallel juries to facilitate research into the reasons behind jury verdicts. [198378]

Mr. Leslie: Section 8 of the Contempt of Court Act does not prohibit the use of parallel juries to facilitate research. On 11 September 2003 the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs and Lord Chancellor announced that he would be publishing a consultation paper on research into real jury deliberations. We intend to publish the paper later this year.

Legal Aid

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of the population was entitled to civil legal aid in each of the last seven calendar years. [198521]

Mr. Lammy: We do not have precise annual data. Given the complex rules for assessing financial eligibility for civil legal aid and changing income levels (including from state benefits and tax credits), individual analysis would need to be undertaken to identify the eligible percentage of the population, depending on whether the eligibility is being calculated of adults, children or households.

In an analysis of eligibility in 2000 we estimated that in 1997 about 52 per cent. of the adult population in England and Wales were financially eligible for civil legal aid (either on a "free" or contributory basis). This fell to about 51 per cent. in 1999 and 50 per cent. in 2000. A separate analysis by the Legal Services Research Centre estimated that about 48 per cent. of "benefit units" were eligible in 1997–98, compared with 47 per cent. in 2001–02. Given that financial eligibility is assessed on income and capital, the percentage of children eligible will be very much higher.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans the Department has to exclude ownership of property from the means testing for eligibility for (a) civil and (b) criminal legal aid. [198896]

Mr. Lammy: Consultation recently closed on a package of reforms to the civil legal aid scheme, including the removal of the current rule which disregards 100k of equity in an applicant's home, when assessing financial eligibility for legal aid. There will of course be exemptions in place for those on passported benefits or on the lowest incomes. We will announce the way forward in due course.

The draft Criminal Defence Service Bill, transfers the grant of criminal public funding from the courts to the Legal Services Commission and re-introduces the means test for criminal public funding. The three models proposed in the original consultation paper took account of income alone. Revised proposals will be published shortly.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the current financial threshold is for eligibility for civil legal aid. [198897]

Mr. Lammy: Those in receipt of Income support, income based Jobseeker's Allowance, or guaranteed state pension credit, automatically qualify financially for legal representation. Legal representation is available on a "free" or non-contributory basis, for people with a gross monthly income of less than £2,288, a disposable monthly income below £267 and disposable capital of £3,000 or less. If their monthly disposable income is between £267 and £707, or disposable capital between £3,000 and £8,000, they will be offered funding on the basis that they agree to pay contributions towards their legal costs.

Legal Help, which provides for basic advice and assistance, is available free for anyone in receipt of the above benefits or for those with a gross monthly income of less than £2,288, a disposable monthly income of less than £621, and disposable capital of £3,000 or less.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what plans the Department has to reduce the (a) criminal and (b) civil legal aid budget; [198898]

(2) what plans the Department has to reduce the overspend on the criminal legal aid budget. [198951]

Mr. Lammy: The information is as follows:

Civil Legal Aid

Consultation has recently closed on a package of changes to the scope and eligibility of civil legal aid. The proposals included measure to: remove legal aid from cases where private money might be used; avoid unnecessary litigation; and encourage early resolution of disputes. The package is designed to focus expenditure on areas where it is most needed. We will announce the way forward in due course.

Criminal Legal Aid

A scheme to introduce individual case contracts in very high cost criminal cases (VHCCCs) should provide significant savings over the next three years.

In addition, the Criminal Defence Service Bill is being prepared for introduction in the next session of Parliament. The Bill will re-introduce the means test for criminal public funding in order to help bring the cost of legal aid under better control and focus the limited resources available for funding more closely on the people who need them most.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the change has been in the civil legal aid budget over the last four years; and what the reasons are for the change. [198952]

Mr. Lammy: Prior to 2000–01 no formal budget was set for civil legal aid. Funding for civil legal aid was available from the total legal aid budget. However, under section 5(6) of the Access to Justice Act 1999, the Lord Chancellor is required to set an overall budget for the Community Legal Service Fund (civil legal aid). This is done by direction at the start of each financial year and by subsequent amendment to meet changing priorities. For the last four years the final budgets set were:

	£million
2000–01	810
2001–02	740
2002–03	782
2003–04	912

These budgets were set to accommodate the demand for civil legal aid in each year. For example, the initial budget for 2000–01 was increased to accommodate the rise in asylum applications, the faster processing of initial decisions and legal aid becoming available for representation in asylum appeals.

The figures given are stated in cash terms and represent budgets set rather than expenditure in each year.

Magistrates Court (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions are taking place to safeguard the future of the magistrates court in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198609]

Mr. Leslie: The future of Newcastle-under-Lyme magistrates court has been the subject of a detailed consultation by the Staffordshire Magistrates' Courts Committee (MCC). On 29 October 2003, the MCC determined that the Courthouse should be closed when a new Courthouse is established to serve the whole of North Staffordshire.

The Staffordshire county council lodged an appeal against the determination on 21 November 2003, and discussions are currently ongoing, between the Staffordshire county council, the Stoke-on-Trent city council, my Department and the MCC with the view to considering suitable alternative sites for a new replacement Courthouse.

Payments into Court

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the value of unclaimed payments into court was in each of the last 10 years. [196110]

Mr. Lammy: The Court Funds Office (CFO) only receives unclaimed moneys into Court by way of statutory deposits under various Acts such as the Trustee Act 1925. However funds already in court can be transferred to the Unclaimed Balances Account if they meet certain criteria and attempts to trace the beneficiaries prove unsuccessful. The balance held on the UB account for the previous 10 years is as follows:

Unclaimed balances figure for financial years 1994–95 to 2003–04

Financial year	Year ended February:	Amount
1994–95	1995	31,500,000.00
1995–96	1996	32,000,000.00
1996–97	1997	31,433,000.00
1997–98	1998	33,130,000.00
1998–99	1999	32,864,990.00
1999–2000	2000	32,302,053.00
2000–01	2001	32,072,993.00
2001–02	2002	32,028,577.00
2002–03	2003	34,746,873.00
2003–04	2004	40,994,967.00

Note:
The above figures are net of payments to and from the account.

Personal Injury Claims

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of conditional fees in personal injury cases on (a) the setting-up of specialist personal injury solicitors firms to pursue claims and (b) the willingness of claims-handling businesses to pursue claims; and if he will make a statement. [198410]

Mr. Lammy: In 1998 we commissioned KPMG to construct a business case showing whether a move from legal aid to Conditional Fee Agreements (CFAs) in a range of personal injury cases could result over a 10 year period in financial viability. The work suggested all law firms could maintain their business using CFAs subject to their management skills and that firms might do well if they specialised. Since then we have focused our research on the outcome for consumers of using CFAs as a form of litigation funding and a new report by Professor Fenn, Dr. Gray and Dr. Rickman is due in early 2005.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the Law Society, (b) the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers, (c) the Bar, (d) the Association of British Insurers and (e) others over the pursuit of unmeritorious personal injury claims; and if he will make a statement. [198412]

Mr. Lammy: Discussions have taken place with a range of bodies in formulating the Government's response to the Better Regulations Task Force (BRTF) report, and will continue as work is taken forward.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the evidential basis was for his statement on 10 November that (a) personal injury solicitors and (b) claims-handling businesses are improperly pursuing personal injury cases lacking in merit; and if he will make a statement. [198413]

Mr. Lammy: The contents of the Government's statement reflected the evidence presented in the Better Regulation Task Force (BRTF) report.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what consideration he has given to regulating advertising for personal injury cases by (a) claims-handling businesses and (b) solicitors; and if he will make a statement. [198414]

Mr. Lammy: The Government believes that there is no place for advertising that raises false expectations or promotes the bringing of frivolous claims. We believe that the Advertising Standards Authority and OFCOM advertising codes and the Law Society publicity code must be adhered to rigorously and will support any further action needed to help achieve this.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what consideration he has given to regulating claims-handling businesses, in relation to personal injury claims; and if he will make a statement. [198415]

Mr. Lammy: The Government wants to see the claims management sector regulated properly, and the sector has a last opportunity to do so itself. If it does not do this, the Government will consider how new formal regulation could be introduced, taking into account the recommendations of Sir David Clementi's review of the legal services regulatory framework.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps he proposes to take to inform the public on the correct legal principles behind personal injury claims; and if he will make a statement. [198416]

Mr. Lammy: How best to provide information of this sort will be taken forward in consultation with the various sectors, and is an issue which we will be asking the proposed Action Group of stakeholders to consider.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Graffiti Removal Notices

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many graffiti removal notices have been served under the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003; [197240]

(2) what assessment he has made of the efficacy of graffiti removal notices; [197241]

(3) what duties are incumbent on local authorities to remove graffiti from local authority owned premises and facilities; and what steps local communities can take to enforce such action. [197242]

Ms Blears: Graffiti is a serious issue that makes areas look run down and can often lead to an increase in crime and the fear of crime.

That is why we introduced Graffiti Removal Notices in the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 to ensure rapid removal of graffiti on street furniture, educational institutes and statutory undertakers' property. These provisions are being piloted in 12 sites in England. No notices have been served to date since strong and effective partnership arrangements have been established between local authorities and the telecommunications industry and others making the sanction of notices unnecessary to date. We are currently undertaking a Regulatory Impact Assessment to determine the impact and cost of improved graffiti removal arrangements with the partners in the pilots and are seeking comments up until 31 December 2004. After that date we will determine the efficacy of the scheme.

There is no specific duty on local authorities to remove graffiti from all of their properties. However, many already remove it speedily because of the negative messages uncleaned graffiti sends out to a community. Local authorities typically require the removal of graffiti through their cleansing contracts and normally respond to racist, homophobic and other offensive graffiti within 24 hours of reports being received.

Local communities have a vital role to play in ensuring local authorities respond to a range of antisocial behaviour priorities. However, since there is currently no requirement on local authorities to remove graffiti, active engagement with the local Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership and relevant functions at the local authority is the best way for local communities to register concerns about graffiti.

Anglia Water

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been received from probation areas in respect of Anglia Water Group's contract for approved premises over the past 18 months. [194320]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 28 October 2004]: There have been 1,853 complaints in the 18 months between April 2003 and September 2004. This averages just over one complaint per month per premise. However, the level of complaints has been falling consistently following the introduction of an improvement plan.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he makes of the percentage of animals bred for possible experimentation purposes which are subsequently not used for these purposes. [197888]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The Home Office does not collect this information centrally.

However, the Animal Procedures Committee has recently investigated the production of conventional animals for use in scientific procedures, focussing specifically on rats, mice, dogs, cats and non-human primates, all of which are listed in schedule two of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and are required to be obtained from designated breeding or supplying establishments. The Committee published its report in September 2004 as Annex G to its Annual Report for 2003 (HC 1017). Their review was based on surveys carried out by the Laboratory Animals Science Association. The Committee concluded that overbreeding of conventional animals is not a significant problem. This conclusion is supported by the observations of Home Office Inspectors who visit designated breeding establishments.

Anti-crime Measures (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community support officers and (b) street wardens have been introduced in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198585]

Ms Blears: I am informed by the Chief Constable of Staffordshire Police that there are six Community Support Officers and two street wardens currently deployed in Newcastle-under-Lyme.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to increase the numbers of special constables assisting the police. [198587]

Ms Blears: The White Paper "Building Communities, Beating Crime" reaffirms the Government's commitment to increasing the number and the effectiveness of special constables.

The Home Office announced in December 2003 the provision of funding of up to £70,000 for each of the 43 police forces in England and Wales under the Special Constabulary Capacity Building Scheme for dedicated staff and/or initiatives. The funding will assist forces implement good practice, improving the recruitment, management and deployment of specials.

In addition, the Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) have brought out Good Practice Guidance designed to help all forces attract and hold on to specials, ensuring their time and skills are properly valued and used to best effect.

In February this year we launched the "Could You Volunteer?" advertising campaign to raise awareness of the Special Constabulary and generate interest in their voluntary work. There followed a significant increase in expressions of interest in the specials.

The campaign was timed to coincide with the second annual "National Specials Weekend" held on 28–29 February 2004, with all 43 Forces in England and Wales working to raise the profile of the Special Constabulary. We are planning to hold another such weekend in 2005.

We are working with businesses to encourage their support for specials in their employment and establish crime reduction partnerships with the police. For instance, the Shopwatch scheme originally launched by the Metropolitan police in Camden was recently extended to include Oxford Street and Regent Street.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government have taken to (a) punish and (b) rehabilitate persistent offenders in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198589]

Paul Goggins: The Newcastle-under-Lyme Prolific Offenders project was set up in 1997 and was one of the first such projects in the country. It focused on those offenders known or believed to be committing large amounts of crime, and in particular burglary, in order to fund Class A drug dependencies. The project team comprises both police and probation officers and has access to an NHS specialist drugs nurse. The supervision by the probation officer includes home visits, support with finding accommodation or employment, developing support networks and drug testing.

An evaluation undertaken by Keele University praised the strong multi-agency working arrangements which had developed and were a very strong factor in the success of the project. The project represented the UK at the European Crime Prevention Awards in 2001, where it finished runner-up.

The project is one of many that contributed to the Government's national Persistent Offender Scheme in 2003–04 and the Prolific and other Priority Offender (PPO) Strategy that succeeded it in September 2004. The aims of these initiatives included a strong focus on catching and convicting persistent and prolific offenders and applying multi-agency interventions to rehabilitate them. The PPO strategy also includes a "Prevent and Deter" strand aimed to prevent young people at risk from developing into the prolific offenders of the future.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 187W, how many of the persons given a custodial sentence for breach of an antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) (a) received a custodial sentence for other offences on the same appearance, (b) received a consecutive sentence of custody for breach of an ASBO when being dealt with for other offences on the same court appearance and (c) were being dealt with for breach of an ASBO alone. [196603]

Ms Blears: Information held on the Home Office Court Proceedings Database shows that, of the 152 persons given a custodial sentence for breach of an antisocial behaviour order (ASBO); (a) the number of custodial sentences given for other offences on the same court appearance is 88, (b) the number of consecutive sentences of custody for breach of an ASBO when being dealt with for other offences on the same court appearance is 76, and (c) the number of cases which were dealt with for breach of an ASBO alone is 44. In 56 cases the defendant received a consecutive custodial sentence for breach of an ASBO and a custodial sentence for one or more other offences on the same court appearance. Hence these cases are counted under both (a) and (b).

Armley Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the percentage of prisoners in Armley Prison with (a) drug-related problems, (b) alcohol-related problems and (c) mental illness. [189944]

Paul Goggins: Routine data collection at Leeds prison states that 72 per cent. of prisoners report drug related problems at reception. A needs analysis undertaken by the Prison Service in April 2004 estimates that in Leeds prison 25 per cent. of prisoners have alcohol related problems. On 12 October 2004, 14 per cent. of prisoners in Leeds prison had a diagnosed mental health problem.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications have been awaiting an initial decision for more than (a) three and (b) six months. [193251]

Mr. Browne: The level of initial decisions has continued to exceed the level of applications in recent quarters, hence the number of cases awaiting initial decision has continued to fall, to 13,300 at the end of June 2004 (compared with 31,400 at the end of June 2003) and the lowest level for a decade. Of this total, 4,900 cases were work in progress (i.e. the application had been outstanding for six months or less), so a total of 8,900 cases had been awaiting an initial decision for more than six months. Similarly 9,200 cases had been awaiting an initial decision for more than three months.

Eighty-two per cent. of new substantive applications received in 2003–04 had initial decisions reached and served within two months compared with 75 per cent. in 2002–03. For applications received in 2002–03, the figures were 85 per cent. within four months and 88 per cent. within six months. For April to December 2003, the corresponding figures were 90 per cent. within four months and 93 per cent. within six months.

Information on the number of cases awaiting initial decisions, and on the timeliness of case processing, is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have arrived at UK (a) airports and (b) ports without any or any proper documentation and subsequently claimed asylum in each of the last 12 months. [195469]

Mr. Browne: Precise information on how many people have arrived at UK airports or ports undocumented and subsequently claimed asylum is unavailable. However, management information indicates that, during July 2003 and June 2004, undocumented arrivals (which may include dependants) was equivalent to around 70 per cent. of the number of port principal asylum applicants. A breakdown by type of port, and on how many subsequently claimed asylum, is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Information on asylum applications is published on a quarterly and annual basis. The publication covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) was published on 16 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that local authorities are fully reimbursed by the Government for (a) costs arising from the discharge of their responsibilities towards the children of asylum seekers and (b) consequent resource costs borne by local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [196095]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 4 November 2004]: Local authorities have a wide range of responsibilities towards children in their area. This applies to children of asylum seekers in the same way as to other children, and the funding mechanisms in place reflect this.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of asylum seekers arriving at UK ports did not have an immigration document establishing identity and nationality or citizenship since section 2 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004 came into force; how many such people have been prosecuted; how many of those (a) pleaded guilty, (b) were convicted after pleading not guilty, (c) were legally represented and (d) were given a custodial sentence; how many received a custodial sentence in excess of three months; and what estimate he has made of the average cost to public funds per month per person of keeping them in custody. [196858]

Mr. Browne: Precise information on how many people have arrived at UK airports or ports undocumented and subsequently claimed asylum is unavailable. However, management information indicates that, between July 2003 and June 2004, undocumented arrivals (which may include dependants) was equivalent to around 70 per cent. of the number of port principal asylum applicants. A breakdown by type of port, and on how many subsequently claimed asylum, is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Since section 2 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004 came into force on 22 September 2004.

> Eighty-two people have been charged under this section
> Of these 24 pleaded guilty and 58 pleaded not guilty. There has been insufficient time for any of those pleading not guilty to have their cases heard at a Crown court.
> All charged are entitled to legal representation, however there are no figures collated regarding how many were represented.
> There have been 19 custodial sentences and all of these were in excess of three months. Five other pleading guilty are awaiting sentencing.

These figures represent the position as at the close of the courts on Wednesday 3 November.

All figures are locally collated management information and are therefore subject to change.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list local authority net current expenditure on asylum seekers for each local authority in England in each year since 1991–92. [197246]

Mr. Browne: The information is not available in the format requested. The Home Office took responsibility for payment of grants to local authorities supporting asylum seekers on 1 April 1999. Local authorities are able to claim grant from the Home Office within specified criteria to meet their costs of supporting asylum seekers.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in Wales, broken down by local authority area. [197420]

Mr. Browne: Information on the number of asylum seekers (including dependants) supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) in Wales, as at the end of June 2004, is presented in the following table. Corresponding figures for those not in receipt of NASS support are not available.

Asylum seekers in receipt of NASS support, as at end of June 2004

	Number of applicants (including dependants)
Local authority	Subsistence only support	Accommodation support	Total
Blaenau Gwent	5	0	5

Figures are rounded to the nearest five and therefore may not sum due to rounding.

* equals 1 or 2. Figures are provisional.

Accommodation support includes those receiving "accommodation only" support and those receiving "accommodation and subsistence" support.

Information on the number of asylum seekers supported by NASS is published quarterly. The publication covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) was published on 16 November 2004 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate web site at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the costs of support for asylum seekers in Reading was borne by the local authority in the last financial year. [197549]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 11 November 2004]: The information is not available. Local authorities are able to claim grant from the Home Office within specified criteria to meet their costs of supporting asylum seekers.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vehicles have been supplied to asylum seekers to facilitate their transport; at what cost; what the nationalities were of those concerned; what checks were made on the driving permits of those concerned; whether nationals of the countries of origin concerned in possession of these permits have an automatic right to drive in the UK; whether the asylum applications of the individuals involved was delayed by the lack of other documents; and if he will make a statement. [197920]

Mr. Browne: The National Asylum Support Service does not provide cars to asylum seekers it is supporting. Asylum seekers, like any other person from abroad are expected to meet the requirements laid down by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency if they wish to drive here.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the London local authorities which are supporting asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [198186]

Mr. Browne: The following London boroughs are providing support to asylum seekers:

Barking and Dagenham, Barnet, Bexley, Brent, Bromley, Camden, Corporation of London, Croydon, Ealing, Enfield, Greenwich, Hackney, Hammersmith and Fulham, Haringey, Harrow, Havering, Hillingdon, Hounslow, Islington, Kensington and Chelsea, Kingston-upon-Thames, Lambeth, Lewisham, Merton, Newham, Redbridge, Richmond-upon-Thames, Southwark, Sutton, Tower Hamlets, Waltham Forest, Wandsworth and Westminster.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many entrants to the country who have arrived at John Lennon Airport, Liverpool in the last three years and been asked to report to immigration control have subsequently absconded or not reported back. [193866]

Mr. Browne: Information on the number of entrants at individual ports who have absconded or not reported back is only available by examination of individual case files at disproportionate cost.

Biometrics

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the results from the UK Passport Service trial of biometrics will be published. [196629]

Mr. Browne: The enrolment of volunteers on the UK Passport Service Biometrics Trial is reaching its conclusion. To ensure engagement with a wide cross-section of the public, the trial will continue working with the disabled community into December. This will be followed by evaluation and quality assurance of the results, with the findings being released as soon as possible thereafter.

Charities Bill

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the draft Charities Bill; and when the Government plan to introduce the Charities Bill. [196301]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The draft Charities Bill was published on 27 May 2004 and has undergone pre-legislative scrutiny by a Joint Committee. The Joint Committee reported on 30 September. The Government are considering their response to that report.

The Government plan to introduce the Bill as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Charnwood Cohesion Project

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been given to the Charnwood Community Cohesion Pathfinder project in each of the last three years; and what plans he has for future funding. [197430]

Fiona Mactaggart: A total of £285,000 was provided to the Charnwood Community Cohesion Pathfinder between February 2003 and September 2004. Of this, a total of £150,000 was allocated to Charnwood borough council, £90,000 to the Community and Voluntary Sector (CVS) and £45,000 to fund Young Community Champions (YCC), a programme targeting young people. In the financial year 2002–03 a total of £90,000 was allocated to the programme, in the financial year 2003–04 £135,000 was allocated and the figure in the financial year 2004–05 was £60,000.

The Pathfinder Programme was developed to provide local authorities with an opportunity to explore what works in building community cohesion over an 18 month period. Local authorities are then expected to mainstream the findings of what works into their core service delivery functions. No further funding will be allocated under the provisions of this programme.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Charnwood Community Cohesion Pathfinder project; and if he will make a statement. [197431]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Charnwood Community Cohesion Pathfinder is currently completing a self assessment process that will inform the Home Office about the impact of the programme in Charnwood and what the key measures in building community cohesion in Charnwood have been. In addition, Charnwood borough council will be conducting their own evaluation of their programme in January 2005 and will be advising the Home Office of the results of this evaluation in February 2005.

Child Abuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the proportion of (a) sex offenders and (b) the general population who have been victims of sexual or physical abuse as children. [195482]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database. No information on the circumstances of individual cases or the histories of those appearing before the courts is collected.

A Home Office Police Research Series Paper published in 1998 ("Sex offending against children: Understanding the risk"—number 99) reviewed a number of studies in relation to sex offending against children and found differing percentages of sex offenders who had experienced childhood sexual abuse. There is no known source of this information in relation to the general population.

The information requested in relation to the general population is not available centrally.

Citizenship Applications

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for citizenship were rejected in 2003. [196360]

Mr. Browne: 10,680 applications for citizenship were refused in 2003.

Further information on all areas of citizenship can be found in the statistical bulletin "Persons Granted British Citizenship United Kingdom, 2003". This publication can be found on the Home Office website at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Civil Servants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of continuous service for civil servants within the Department is. [194409]

Fiona Mactaggart: The latest figures for the average length of continuous service for civil servants in the department and its agencies (where known) as at 1 April 2004 have been placed in the Library.

Community Safety Wardens

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the terms under which police authorities may access additional resources to fund police community safety wardens; and what the timetable is for implementation of the process. [197234]

Ms Blears: Our target is to deliver 24,000 Community Support Officers (CSOs) by 2008 as a key part of our strategy to boost neighbourhood policing and tackle antisocial behaviour. The first phase of the Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) will provide £50 million to enable police forces to recruit an additional 1,500 CSOs by the end of March 2005 and to support salary and related costs in 2005–06. Forces will be notified shortly of their allocations under this round of the NPF.

We will shortly begin discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers and with the Association of Police Authorities on how the NPF will achieve the next phase of growth in CSO numbers.

Coroner/Death Certification Services

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the reform of the coroner and death certification services. [196632]

Paul Goggins: The timetable for reform of the coroner service was set out in the position paper "Reforming the Coroner and Death Certification Service" which was published in March 2004.

Work on reform is progressing well and I expect a White Paper to be published, as promised, in spring 2005.

Counter-terrorism

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the (a) Metropolitan Police and (b) British Transport Police to take delivery of high standard chemical and biological suits for counter-terrorism duties; when he expects each force to have similar standard suits available for joint operations; and if he will make a statement. [196487]

Mr. Blunkett: UK police forces are equipped with military-style police personal protective equipment. To meet civilian requirements UK police forces including the Metropolitan Police are being trained and equipped in the new generation personal protective equipment, the CR1 suit. This began in April this year and is due to finish in April 2006.

British Transport Police are trained and equipped with the military-style police personal protective equipment and they have developed an additional capability for specialist staff to use gastight suits and self-contained breathing apparatus to provide a response to incidents in the London underground and elsewhere.

Joint exercises using the respective personal protective equipment take place routinely.

Crime/Sentencing Statistics

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the ratio of crimes committed to police officer numbers is in Barnet; what the ratio in (a) outer London boroughs and (b) England and Wales is; and if he will make a statement. [196410]

Ms Blears: The information is set out in the following table.

Area	Number of crimes per officer[1]
Barnet	27.6
Outer London (2)	21.0
England and Wales	17.5

[1] Calculation is based on the number of crimes for the six key offence groups: violence against the person, sexual offences, robbery, burglary, theft of a motor vehicle and theft from a motor vehicle. It does not include fraud and forgery, criminal damage or drugs and other offences categories of crime.

[2] The Metropolitan Police advise that the outer London boroughs are, Barking and Dagenham, Barnet, Bexley, Bromley, Croydon, Enfield, Havering, Harrow, Hillingdon, Kingston-upon-Thames, Redbridge, Richmond-upon-Thames and Sutton.

The deployment of police officers to Barnet Operational Command Units (OCU) and the other London borough OCUs is a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (Sir John Stevens).

I understand that the London borough of Barnet Operational Command Unit had 541 police officers at the end of March 2004. Only one of the 13 outer London boroughs had a higher number of police officers.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders placed on the home detention curfew scheme were (a) cautioned and (b) convicted in each year since 1999; and how many are awaiting prosecution. [190930]

Paul Goggins: As of 30 September 2004, 100,345 prisoners have been placed on the home detention curfew scheme since the scheme was introduced in January 1999. Up to 30 September 2004, 2,075 of those prisoners have been reported to the Home Office as having been cautioned, convicted or awaiting prosecution for an offence committed whilst they were subject to the scheme. This represents 2 per cent. of the offenders placed on the scheme.

Criminal Justice Act

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has determined the date for the commencement for sections 145 and 146 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 to come into force; and if he will make a statement. [196384]

Paul Goggins: Sections 145 and 146 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 relate to hate crime; these provide for courts to treat motivation by racial or religious prejudice, or prejudice related to disability or sexual orientation, as an aggravating factor for any criminal offence. These sections are not yet in force, but section 145 is a re-enactment of existing legislation contained in section 153 of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 that is in force. The commencement date for these sections of the 2003 Act is currently under consideration and will be announced in due course.

Criminal Penalties Harmonisation

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is in respect of EU proposals to harmonise criminal penalties. [197601]

Caroline Flint: The Government do not believe that there is any justification for general harmonisation of criminal penalties. We support some agreement on criminal penalty levels but only where it focuses on tackling common threats posed by serious cross border and organised crime, for example in respect of trafficking in drugs and human beings and sexual exploitation of children. This view is reflected in the Hague Programme on Strengthening Freedom, Security and Justice in the European Union.

Criminal Record Checks

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place (a) to check the criminal records of civil servants in his Department and agencies responsible to his Department who have access to computer databases containing confidential information on the public and (b) to ensure that there can be no improper use of computer databases containing confidential information on the public; and if he will make a statement. [194601]

Mr. Blunkett: On recruitment to the Home Office and its agencies all civil servants are subject to the satisfactory completion of a criminal records check before they are allowed access to computer databases containing confidential information on the public. All serving staff are also required to report any conviction for a criminal offence (except a traffic offence with a non-official vehicle for which the penalty has not included imprisonment or the suspension of their driving licence). All IT systems containing protectively marked information have security operating procedures which set out clear requirements for the secure handling of data. On a regular basis these are brought to the attention of staff and they are required to read them.

Cyber Crime

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State fo the Home Department what steps the Government ar taking to combat (a) cyber crime and (b) cybe terrorism, with particular reference to (i) credit car fraud and (ii) identity theft. [19806

Caroline Flint: The Government takes very seriousl the issue of cyber attack. It has in place a number o organisations to ensure that the electronic fabric o society is not under attack. Advice, from a variety o sources, is also available to the general public and computer users. There is a fine line between criminal acts against information systems (so called "e-crime") and what could be called a terrorist act. The damage or disruption to an electrical system can be the same irrespective of whether an attack is caused for "criminal" or "terrorist" reasons. Whatever the reason for an attack, action will be taken wherever possible against those responsible.

Despite the investigative challenges posed by the internet, law enforcement seeks to take effective action against fraud whatever mechanism is used to commit it. Where cases involve serious and organised computer enabled criminality at national and international levels the case may be dealt with by the National Hi-Tech Crime Unit (NHTCU) which we have set up within the National Crime Squad.

The internet provides criminals with new opportunities to commit a range of financial frauds including credit card fraud and identity fraud. Credit card fraud takes various forms including phishing (the practice of sending e-mails claiming to originate from banks which ask customers to re-register at a replica bank website with the aim of using that information to transfer money out of these accounts), and card not present (CNP) fraud where genuine card details are stolen and used to make purchases through a remote medium such as the internet. Identity fraud usually occurs when someone's personal information such as name, address or date of birth is captured without their knowledge and used by someone else to support criminal activity, which could involve deception, financial gain or obtaining other benefits and services.

The Home Office has established a cross public-private sector work programme to tackle identity theft and identity fraud. The programme co-ordinates existing activity in the public and private sectors and identifies new projects and initiatives to reduce identity fraud. On 14 July 2004 my hon. Friend Des Browne announced a website www.identitytheft.org.uk, which offers advice to consumers on how to protect themselves against identity theft and what to do if they think they have been victims of identity fraud.

Education is a key factor in dealing with fraud over the internet. A large amount of internet fraud can be prevented if organisations have proper fraud prevention measures in place. The public must also be educated about the dangers of internet fraud and how to avoid falling victim to it.

Government takes an active role in educating computer users about the risks of fraud committed by using the internet and the Home Office website provides advice on avoiding internet fraud. The Home Office has also created, and maintains the "e-tailing mini site", which forms part of the crime reduction website. The mini site provides information to help both businesses and consumers protect themselves specifically when using the internet.

We have published, jointly with the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) a leaflet on card safety which includes a section on using cards safely over the internet. The leaflet has been sent to all police forces in England and Wales, and to Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships. It is also available on the Home Office website and the e-tailing mini site, and APACS members (banks) will be sending a version of the leaflet to their cardholders.

The Home Office is represented on an industry-led Steering Group which aims to tackle CNP fraud. We support practical measures being introduced by the industry to increase levels of security for internet transactions: These include Address Verification Services (AVS) and Card Security Code (CSC), along with Mastercard Secure Code and Verified by Visa which require password verification for internet transactions. These initiatives are already making a significant impact on CNP Fraud. The work of the CNP Steering Group has also led to the production of a manual (Spot and Stop Card Fraud Retailer Pack) which aims to educate merchants on the dangers of CNP fraud and the steps which can be taken to prevent it.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 2001 to April 2002, (b) May 2002 to April 2003, (c) May 2003 to April 2004 and (d) May 2004 to the latest date for which information is available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed. [196893]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Department is unable to provide the level of detailed information sought on contracts. Records are not held centrally and to collate and to provide this information for the Home Office and its Executive Agencies would incur disproportionate costs. The Home Office is currently addressing the absence of centrally held information of this type through the implementation of new IT systems.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible in each of the past three years. [196895]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Department is unable to provide the level of detailed information sought on contracts. Records are not held centrally and to provide this information for the Home Office and its executive agencies would incur disproportionate costs. The Home Office is currently addressing the absence of centrally held information of this type through the implementation of new IT systems.

Departmental Efficiency

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department's spending plans are based on a continuing reduction in the number of asylum applications. [196589]

Mr. Browne: The Department's spending plans are based on an assessment of the likely future costs of the immigration and asylum system. We have more than halved the number of asylum applications since October 2002.

It is not possible to provide information for the 2000 as the District Command Unit structure was not established until 2001. Figures for Belfast South DCU are higher as it covers the main retail areas of Belfast City Centre.

Passive Smoking

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he collects regarding the number of people each year in the Province whose death is partly or wholly attributable to passive smoking. [198837]

Mr. Pearson: It is not possible to give figures on the number of deaths partly or wholly attributable to passive smoking from routinely collected mortality data.

Patient Death Investigations

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he plans to take to ensure that concerns raised by doctors regarding the deaths of patients are investigated. [198023]

Angela Smith: A Safety in Health and Social Care Steering Group established by the Department issued interim guidance (HSS (PPM) 06/04) to the HPSS and special agencies in July 2004 on the reporting and management of serious adverse incidents, including the death of patients.

The Department has also established a multi-agency group comprising departmental officials and representatives from the Police Service of Northern Ireland, the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), and the coroner service to develop a memorandum of understanding for the investigation of death and serious incidents in hospitals. This will take account of a recent memorandum of understanding issued for consultation in England and Wales: "Investigating patient safety incidents (unexpected death or serious untoward harm): a protocol for liaison and effective communications between the NHS, Association of Chief Police Officers and HSE". Work is also under way to reform the coroner and death certification service in Northern Ireland.

Police Ombudsman

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many investigations carried out by the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland have resulted in (a) successful prosecutions and (b) disciplinary charges being brought in each year of its operation. [188642]

Mr. Pearson: The Police Ombudsman has advised that as a result of her investigations:

(a) 28 recommendations have been made to the DPP for prosecution since 6 November 2000. DPP has directed prosecutions in 13 cases, no prosecutions in 10 cases and five cases await direction. DPP also directed prosecutions in three cases where Ombudsman had not recommended prosecution. Arising from those cases which have been through the courts there have been four convictions, all in 2004.

(b) the following disciplinary matters have been referred to the Chief Constable:

	Formal	Informal[1]

April 2004 to date	2	7

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a Police Service of Northern Ireland officer holds the post of wildlife officer. [191824]

Mr. Pearson: The post of Wildlife Liaison Officer was trawled within the Police Service of Northern Ireland, but none of the applicants was found suitable. As an interim measure, an officer within the Operational support Department has been appointed temporarily to carry out the functions of the Wildlife Liaison Officer.

The post will be re-advertised within the Police Service of Northern Ireland in the near future.

Police Station Security

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which police stations in Northern Ireland are due to have fortifications removed in the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [197017]

Mr. Pearson: It is planned that the following stations will be subject to softening works during the next 12 months:

Castlereagh
Holywood
Strandtown
Grosvenor Road
Comber
Magherafelt
Cookstown
Portglenone
Aughnacloy
Carrickfergus
Dungannon
Newtownabbey
Randalstown

Policing

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what overlap there is between the work of the district policing partnerships and that of the community safety partnerships. [194947]

Mr. Pearson: The Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000 as amended by the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2003 sets out the statutory basis for the establishment and functions of district policing partnerships.

Section 71 of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 makes provision for the establishment of a community safety strategy. The NIO Community Safety Strategy launched in 2003 recommended the formation of community safety partnerships in each district council area. Their main purpose is to bring together, at a local level, statutory bodies, service providers, voluntary and community organisations and public representatives with the aim of combining resources and views to enhance community safety in their districts.

The functions and membership of CSPs and DPPs therefore differ significantly, and their relationship is complementary rather than overlapping. The Government see no case for change at present. However, both partnership groupings are still at a relatively early stage of their development. The Northern Ireland Policing Board is currently undertaking a review of district policing partnerships, and community safety partnerships will also be subject to evaluation next year. The results of those reviews will of course be fully considered.

Racism

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the involvement of paramilitary organisations in racist attacks in Northern Ireland. [187416]

Mr. Pearson: Individual members and localised groupings affiliated to Loyalist paramilitary groups are believed to have been involved in attacks against ethnic minorities. However, these attacks do not appear to have been sanctioned by the leaderships of Loyalist paramilitary organisations.

Restorative Justice

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made by the Northern Ireland Office towards completion of protocols governing restorative justice schemes; and if he will make a statement. [198489]

Mr. Spellar: Government are continuing to work with criminal justice agencies in developing guidelines for the operation of schemes in dealing with low level crime, in line with the recommendations in the criminal justice review. This work is at an advanced stage.

Government recognise that schemes can have a part to play in helping to secure a normal society. As a condition for this, schemes need to work actively to uphold the human rights of all, be prepared to work with statutory agencies including the police, be willing to be accredited and to adhere to standards in all key areas.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths have been caused by fire in Northern Ireland in 2004; and in how many instances (a) no smoke alarm being fitted and (b) a faulty or non-working smoke alarm was a contributory factor. [198637]

Angela Smith: In the year to date (to 15 November 2004) there have been a total of 11 fire deaths in dwellings. Eight of these deaths have been deemed to be accidental. The cause of the remaining three is currently under investigation. Of the 11 dwelling fires, a total of six were fitted with a working smoke alarm. There was no functioning smoke alarm in the remaining five.

Speaker of the Northern Ireland Assembly

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current (a) status and (b) role of the Speaker of the Northern Ireland Assembly. [197014]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Office of the Speaker of the Northern Ireland Assembly has been vacant since the retirement of Lord Alderdice earlier this year. Any functions required to be exercised by the Speaker under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 may, in his absence, be exercised by a Deputy Speaker.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a special adviser is assigned to the Office of Speaker of the Northern Ireland Assembly. [197015]

Mr. Paul Murphy: An adviser, recruited as a full time member of Assembly staff is still assigned to the Office of the Speaker. He is currently carrying out work for other public sector organisations.

Special Needs

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on nursing provision in schools for children with special needs in the Province. [198153]

Angela Smith: Various arrangements are in place to provide nursing support in schools for children with special educational needs. School health services coordinate the health surveillance programme provided to school children. Community children's nursing and learning disability nursing also provide support to children, their families and school staff to enable individual needs to be met during the school day. In some instances, nurses are based within the special schools whereas in other cases nurses provide support through school visits.

An interdepartmental group for children with special needs has been established between the Departments of Health and Education. This group plans to review the outcome of the project assessing the health and care needs of children attending school, which was undertaken by the southern education and library board in collaboration with the southern health and social services board.

Stormont

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost has been of the Stormont Assembly in the last two years; and what the expected cost is in the next year if the Assembly does not sit and the Executive is not operational. [197667]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The cost of maintaining the Northern Ireland Assembly since suspension in October 2002 until 31 October this year has been £49.6 million. This comprises £21.6 million for costs relating to Members and political parties; £18.5 million for costs relating to Assembly secretariat wages; and £9.5 million for property, accommodation and business services costs.

Expected costs in the next year will be determined in light of the outcome of current political discussions aimed at securing a lasting settlement and restoration of the institutions.

Surveillance

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many authorisations he has given for intercepting (a) mail and (b) telephone calls of (i) members of the public and (ii) hon. Members in the past year. [199105]

Mr. Pearson: It is Government policy not to comment on intelligence matters and to neither confirm nor deny the existence of any covert operations.

Sustainable Energy

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions the Department of the Environment has had with the Energy Saving Trust on the establishment of a sustainable energy pilot centre in Northern Ireland. [199285]

Angela Smith: It has not been possible to answer the hon. Gentleman's question in this parliamentary session.

Tax Discs

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions in each year since 2000 the non-display of vehicle tax discs has been detected, broken down by district command unit. [199254]

Angela Smith: It has not been possible to answer the hon. Gentleman's question in this parliamentary session.

Terrorist Victims

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to meet locally elected representatives to discuss the problems facing victims of terrorism. [197022]

Angela Smith: I have been consulting with victims and survivors and their representative groups and have recently issued to them a summary of the views I gathered. My next step will be to draw up proposals for improvements in the arrangements for the planning, coordination and delivery of the services provided to victims to help address the problems they face. At the appropriate time I will consult with the locally elected representatives.

During this consultation process, many views were expressed to me on the matter of dealing with the past. These views, which I shared with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, will help inform the work he is doing in this area.

Traffic Wardens

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what discussions he has had with the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland about the future role of traffic wardens in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement; [199296]

(2) how many traffic wardens have been recruited in Northern Ireland in each year since 2000; and if he will make a statement on the recruitment policy for traffic wardens. [199297]

Mr. Pearson: It has not been possible to answer the hon. Lady's questions in this parliamentary session.

Victoria Square, Belfast

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on redeveloping Victoria Square, Belfast. [199258]

Mr. Spellar: The redevelopment of Victoria Square by AM Development is well under way. Another major step will be taken on 21 November 2004, when Churchill House, the former headquarters of the Department for Social Development is demolished in a controlled explosion. The 17-storey office block is the last building left on the site and its clearance means that major construction can begin. The new retail-led development is expected to open in 2007.

Walk-in Centre

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to establish a new NHS walk-in centre in the Province. [198650]

Angela Smith: The functions of NHS walk-in Centres, as established in Great Britain, will be provided in Northern Ireland by health and care centres, which bring together a range of primary and community-based care services into a 'one stop shop', and local hospitals, as defined in "Developing Better Services". Work is currently in progress on the building of two of these centres in Belfast. Plans for a network of similar centres across Northern Ireland are currently being developed by HSS boards and trusts.

Waste Directives

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the change in costs to Northern Ireland's farming industry as a result of the implementation of recent EU environmental and waste control directives. [197930]

Angela Smith: A mandatory part of the consultation process for the implementation of European Directives in the UK is the preparation of Regulatory Impact Assessments (RIAs) setting out the costs and benefits of implementation. RIAs are published as an integral part of consultation papers. All consultation papers produced by the Department of the Environment on the implementation of EU environmental Directives are made available on the DOE website at www.doeni.gov.uk.

The most recent consultation papers to be published by my Department which impact on agriculture concern implementation of the Nitrates Directive and the Water Framework Directive. Copies of these have been placed in the Library. A further consultation paper on implementation of the Nitrates Directive will issue shortly as will a paper containing proposals to extend existing waste management controls to agricultural waste. I will arrange for copies of these two papers to be placed in the Library.

West Tyrone

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the West Tyrone area plan will be published. [198282]

Angela Smith: In recent months the Planning Service has been reviewing the rapidly increasing and unprecedented workload pressures being faced by the Agency. After careful consideration of the available options, it has been decided to concentrate as much of the Agencies resources as possible for a period of time, initially for six months, on the operational side of the business, where there are clear legal obligations to meet.

The reallocation of staff will, however, have a knock-on effect on emerging area plans. Resources are available to permit continued work on those plans which are at an advanced stage in the preparation process. However, progress on the remaining area plans, including West Tyrone, will be slower then previously programmed

The importance of delivering full area plan coverage is recognised and the Planning Service will move forward with the area plan programme as quickly as is feasible. At this point in time it is not possible to say precisely when this will be. Much will depend on how quickly the pressure on the operational side can be reduced. An announcement on revised timescales for the Area Plan programme, including the West Tyrone Area Plan, will be made in due course.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the West Tyrone Area Plan will be published. [199217]

Angela Smith: It has not been possible to answer the hon. Member's question in this parliamentary Session.

Wheel-clamping

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review the law relating to private operators of wheel-clamping in Northern Ireland. [199253]

Angela Smith: It has not been possible to answer the hon. Gentleman's question in this parliamentary session.

Working Time Directive

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the costs resulting from the implementation of the European Working Time Directive on the working hours of (a) junior doctors, (b) senior doctors and (c) other health service personnel. [198649]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many poppy fields have been (a) identified and (b) destroyed by UK forces in Afghanistan since the fall of the Taliban. [196426]

Mr. Rammell: Eradication of opium poppy is not a task for UK or other international military forces in Afghanistan.

Eradication has been carried out by the Afghan Government in the three years (2002–04) since the fall of the Taliban. The Afghan authorities estimated that 17,300 hectares were destroyed in 2002 and 21,000 hectares in 2003, although there was no independent verification of these figures and we cannot therefore be satisfied as to their accuracy. Eradication in 2004 was carried out by the Afghan Government and the US-supported Central Poppy Eradication Force, where independent verification estimated that less than 4,000 hectares were eradicated.

The UK, as lead nation on Counter Narcotics in Afghanistan, is providing support to the Afghan Government on eradication, principally through the Central Eradication Planning Cell.

Al-Qaeda

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between the Government and West African countries regarding Islamic fundamentalism; and what assessment has been made of the number of Al-Qaeda cells operating in the region. [198273]

Mr. MacShane: We have had a number of discussions with Governments in the region about fundamentalism. We believe that some Al-Qaeda-related individuals may be present in West Africa.

Azerbaijan

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the Government's policy to support (a) the territorial integrity of Azerbaijan as including the former autonomous region of Nagorno Karabakh and (b) Azerbaijan's right to control its own borders; and if he will make a statement. [199104]

Mr. Rammell: We will support any mechanism for the resolution of the Nagorno Karabakh dispute that both parties can accept and which has a realistic chance of delivering a lasting political settlement. The framework for discussing such mechanisms is the OSCE Minsk Group, co-chaired by Russia, the US and France. While the UK is not a member of the Minsk Group, we support its work and remain in close touch through the UK Special Representative to the South Caucasus, Sir Brian Fall.

Bahá'í Community (Iran)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on the rights of the Bahá'í community in Iran to conduct social, educational and collective religious activities; and if he will make a statement. [199103]

Mr. Rammell: We continue to have serious concerns about the situation of the Bahái community in Iran. We are monitoring the situation, and are in close contact with Bahái representatives in the UK. They report that their co-religionists face increasing discrimination, including arbitrary arrest and detention, the denial of free worship, the disregard of property rights, the destruction of sites of religious importance, the closure of institutes of higher learning, the suspension of social, educational and community-related activities and the denial of employment, pensions and other benefits. Our EU partners and we have raised our concerns with the Iranian authorities on many occasions, and have urged them to respect and protect the human rights of Iran's religious minorities. Along with all other EU partners, we have co-sponsored a Canadian draft UN General Assembly resolution on the situation of human rights in Iran, including the rights of members of the Bahái community.

Burma

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether Article 8a of Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004, as inserted by Article 1 of Council Regulation (EC) No 1853/2004, will prevent persons resident in, or companies registered in, the EU from entering into joint venture partnerships with Burmese state-owned enterprises listed in Annex IV; [198385]

(2) whether Article 8a of Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004 will apply to Burmese-registered subsidiary companies, wholly-owned or otherwise, of companies registered in the EU; [198386]

(3) what is meant by the phrase 'the acquisition of a participation' in a Burmese state-owned enterprise within Article 8a(1)(b), of Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004. [198387]

Mr. Straw: I refer the hon. Gentleman to Articles 8a*(l)*, 8a(2) and 14 of the Council Regulation (EC) 798/2004 (Official Journal, L 125, 28.4.2004, p.4), as amended by Council Regulation (EC) No. 1853/2004 (Official Journal, L 323, 26.10.2004, p.11).

Paragraph 1 of Article 8a prohibits:

> "(a) the granting of any financial loan to Burmese state-owned enterprises as listed in Annex IV, or the acquisition of bonds, certificates of deposit, warrants or debentures, issued by these enterprises.
> (b) the acquisition or extension of a participation in Burmese state-owned enterprises as listed in Annex IV, including the acquisition in full of such enterprises and the acquisition of shares and securities of a participating nature."

Paragraph 2 of Article 8a provides that:

> "The participation, knowing and intentionally, in activities, the object or effect of which is, directly or indirectly, to circumvent the provisions of paragraph 1 shall be prohibited."

Article 14 provides that the Regulation shall apply:

> "(a) within the territory of the Community, including its airspace;
> (b) on board any aircraft or any vessel under the jurisdiction of a member state;
> (c) to any person inside or outside the territory of the Community who is a national of a member state;
> (d) to any legal person, group or entity which is incorporated or constituted under the law of a member state;
> (e) to any legal person, group or entity doing business within the Community."

The application of these and the other provisions of Council Regulation (EC) No. 798/2004 in any given case will depend on all the facts and circumstances, and persons who think they may be affected should seek independent legal advice. It would not be appropriate for the Government to attempt to interpret the EC legislation on their behalf.

Colombia

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings United Kingdom representatives in Colombia have had recently with (a) trade unions, (b) human rights groups, (c) universities and (d) opposition parties; and if he will make a statement. [157709]

Mr. Rammell: Our embassy in Bogota maintains regular contact with a wide range of organisations and individuals in Colombia, including representatives from the categories highlighted by my hon. Friend. These contacts encompass governmental and non-governmental figures, academics, trade unionists, NGOs, and other representatives of civil society, and a broad range of political parties both in government and opposition. For my part, I met representatives from these categories on 21 and 22 June during my second visit to Colombia, this time with Mr. Rory Murphy of the TUC. During my first visit in May 2003 I also met a wide range of Colombian NGOs, including representatives from a number of the categories mentioned. In addition I frequently meet Colombian visitors in London—both governmental and non-governmental—to brief me on the situation in their country. On 16 September I met a representative from a Colombian trade union in London. I also saw a Church representative on 18 October. Finally I hold regular meetings with British trades unionists about Colombia, most recently on 18 October. A further meeting with them is planned for 23 November. All the meetings are an important means of enhancing our understanding of the situation in Colombia.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement in relation to UK military aid to Colombia. [159607]

Mr. Rammell: We have always made it clear that we do provide, from time to time, military and security advice and assistance to the Colombian Government. UK military assistance focuses on Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) training and British military education.

Mines and other explosive devices are responsible for a significant proportion of deaths among the Colombian armed forces, and also have a devastating effect on the civilian population. Bomb disposal training, which forms the core of our military assistance programme, directly helps the Colombian armed forces to save civilian and military lives. We have also trained elements of the Colombian Authorities engaged in Counter-Narcotics work.

We have also assisted the Colombian military on human rights issues. For example, under the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Human Rights Project Fund we recently ran a project to raise awareness of the armed forces on their role in prevention of displacement and protection of the rights of internally displaced persons. We also have an ongoing project on human rights training for the military through the Colombian military justice school.

British military training and education introduces personnel to British defence concepts, including the importance of accountable and democratic control of the armed forces, and the use of Rules of Engagement. It improves the ability of the Colombian armed forces to provide security for the Colombian people in a professional manner that preserves democracy and respects human rights.

Cuba

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make enhanced intergovernmental contracts with Cuba contingent upon an improvement in human rights in that country. [199119]

Mr. Rammell: UK policy on Cuba is governed by the EU Common Position, which has human rights enshrined as one of its key principles. The EU regularly issues statements condemning the imprisonment of human rights activists and other political prisoners in Cuba. I have also raised our concerns on human rights with the Cuban ambassador in London, and the Cuban Deputy Foreign Minister at the UN General Assembly.

Cyprus

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it a condition of the United Kingdom's support for opening sea ports in northern Cyprus to EU trade that such ports adhere to (a) all existing and future European ports directives and (b) health and safety requirements; and how he expects such rules will be enforced. [199351]

Mr. MacShane: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation, for which I apologise.

Ditchley Park

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he applies to the use of Ditchley Park by outside organisations for conferences, seminars and meetings concerned with international issues. [196721]

Mr. Straw: Ditchley Park is an independent organisation. Neither the Foreign and Commonwealth Office nor any other Government Department is responsible for setting its criteria. Further information on Ditchley Park can be found at their website: www.ditchley.co.uk.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 631W, on Equatorial Guinea, from what source his Department learned of the attempted coup plot in Equatorial Guinea; to which foreign security agencies this information was passed, and when; and whether his Department informed authorities in Zimbabwe about the plot. [198323]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 16 November 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) on 17 November 2004 (UINs 198219, 198227 and 198228).

EU Arms Embargoes

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what plans there are for future EU arms embargoes to include provisions to turn off or degrade the Galileo positioning system signal to those subject to the embargo if the signal is used for military purposes; [197592]

(2) what assessment he has made of whether provision of Galileo positioning signals by the EU to a warring party would constitute a breach of neutrality in that armed conflict. [197593]

Mr. MacShane: Galileo is a civilian system under civilian control, as confirmed by successive EU Transport Councils.

As is currently the case with GPS, the Galileo Open Service will be freely available.

A decision to develop or use specific military applications for Galileo would, under the terms of the EU treaty, have to be taken by unanimous decision by all member states. The UK is opposed to the development of military applications for Galileo.

The Galileo Management Structures will be responsible for ensuring compliance of Galileo with international arms control regimes, acting on the guidance of member states through the Council.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for protection against the effects of the extra-territorial application of legislation adopted by a third country, and actions based thereon or resulting therefrom (anti-boycott) met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what issues were discussed; which of those were brought to the Committee's attention by the UK Government expert; what recommendations were made by the Committee; what actions were (a) proposed and (b) taken by the EU as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [192492]

Mr. Alexander: It was intended that a Committee for Protection Against the Effects of the Extraterritorial Application of Legislation Adopted by a Third Country and Actions Based Thereon or Resulting Therefrom (anti-boycott) would be established in Brussels to assist EU companies affected by extraterritorial jurisdiction by third countries, and in particular those affected by the extraterritorial aspects of the US trade sanctions against Cuba, Iran and Libya.

Thus far, the Committee has not been convened. UK companies are obliged to inform HMG and the European Commission of any extraterritorial action taken against them, but whilst it is clear who would be responsible for representing the UK at any meeting of the Committee, in these times of improved electronic communication, it has not been necessary in practice for it to meet.

In addition, as part of the 1997 Understanding between the EU and the US, the US undertook to exempt European individuals and companies from the extraterritorial aspects of US legislation drastically reducing the number of cases occurring, thus further reducing the need for the Committee to meet. In this case, the other questions about the Committee do not apply.

European Constitution

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what commitments were entered into by the Government of the United Kingdom in respect of the Solemn Declaration on European Union of 1983; by whom the declaration was signed on behalf of the Government; and which of those commitments (a) have already been fulfilled or discharged by existing treaties, and by which treaty provisions in each case, (b) will be implemented by the proposed European Constitution as published by the Government as CM 6289 and (c) remain for future action. [199284]

Mr. MacShane: The Solemn Declaration on European Union of 1983 was signed by the then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in the name of the UK Government. It was a non-binding commitment of the then 10 member states to reform the Community's institutions and to develop its policies in many areas. Much of it has since been implemented through the successive stages of evolution of the EU, through three further waves of accession, the Single European Act, the Maastricht Treaty on European Union, the Treaty of Amsterdam and the Treaty of Nice. The EU Constitutional Treaty would consolidate this process of reform.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place with the governments of (a) Argentina, (b) Chile, (c) Brazil and (d) Uruguay regarding flights to and from the Falkland Islands over their airspace; and if he will make a statement. [193466]

Mr. Rammell: The issue of flights to and from the Falkland Islands has been discussed recently between the UK and Argentina. It was mentioned briefly during the meeting between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the Argentine Foreign Minister Bielsa during the United Nations General Assembly on 22 September. It has also been discussed in on-going contacts at official level. The UK would like to see an arrangement reached with the Argentine Government that would allow charter flights to the Falkland Islands to resume. Any such agreement would have to be acceptable to the Falkland Islanders.

Discussions with the governments of Chile, Brazil and Uruguay take place as necessary.

Falluja (Journalists)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what precautions are in place to protect journalists reporting on the front line with troops in Falluja. [197820]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 16 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation, for which I apologise.

Foreign Prisons (UK Minors)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom minors are held in foreign prisons. [198915]

Mr. Mullin: We record the number of British nationals detained overseas who request consular assistance on a quarterly and annual basis. The age of the detainee is not recorded. But our consular staff are alerted quickly when a minor is arrested. We provide consular assistance with all due care and consideration to their age.

The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

G8 Summit

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support, including financial support, is to be provided to Perth and Kinross council to prepare for the G8 summit. [195120]

Mr. Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) does not have financial responsibilities for supporting Perth and Kinross council, as local authority funding in Scotland is a matter for the Scottish Executive, but is supporting them in other ways to maximise the benefits of the summit for the local area. The FCO is helping them to respond to residents' concerns about the summit's possible impact, for example by taking part in their key public meetings, and is working with them to help involve local people and businesses in the summit where possible.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether all Government buildings in his Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [199318]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has taken steps to ensure that FCO buildings within the Greater London area are as fully accessible to disabled people as is reasonably practicable, in line with the principals of the Disability Discrimination Act 1996. Where it has been found that access to certain areas is restricted, measures are in place to address these issues.

Grenada/Cayman Islands

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Governments of (a) Grenada and (b) the Cayman Islands formally asked his Department for financial and other help following the recent hurricanes. [199024]

Mr. Rammell: Sadly, Hurricane Ivan caused widespread damage in Grenada and in the Cayman Islands, making communications very difficult. We were, nevertheless, in very regular touch, in whatever ways were possible, with officials in Grenada and the Cayman Islands prior to and after Hurricane Ivan hit and so discussed their needs and requests for help as the situation developed.

As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development set out in his statement of 12 October 2004, Official Report, columns 14–20WS, we responded quickly to immediate needs including by sending two Royal Navy vessels to Grenada and the Cayman Islands immediately following the hurricane. Our assistance to the region following the hurricanes and storms in September amounts to almost £9.75 million.

Guantanamo Bay

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which (a) British nationals and (b) former British residents are detained by the US Administration in Guantanamo Bay; where each was first taken into custody by US forces; how long each has been detained; what efforts the Government have made to obtain visitation rights for the detainees' families; how many letters each has been allowed to send in the last 12 months; and whether detainees had been tortured. [198863]

Mr. Mullin: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation, for which I apologise.

Iran

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the evidence received from the International Atomic Energy Authority that Iran has (a) breached nuclear safeguards obligations and (b) failed to meet suspension commitments; where these breaches and failures occurred; and what plans the International Atomic Energy Authority has to pursue the issue. [198704]

Mr. MacShane: The latest report by the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) will be discussed by the IAEA's Board of Governors at their next meeting which is due to begin on 25 November. Until then, it remains confidential. Once the Board of Governors meeting is concluded, we expect the board to decide to release the report for publication, as has been the case with previous reports. The IAEA is continuing to investigate all unresolved issues relating to Iran's nuclear programme.

The Government are planning to produce a Command Paper containing the key documents on Iran's nuclear programme. This Command Paper will include all the reports of the Director-General and Resolutions on Iran adopted by the Board of Governors over the past two years.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of Iran's nuclear programme for (a) regional stability and (b) the Middle East peace process. [199023]

Mr. Rammell: The proliferation of nuclear weapons in the Middle East would pose a significant threat to stability and efforts to establish peace in the region. The UK, working closely with France and Germany and the Office of the EU High Representative, has encouraged Iran to take steps that would reassure the international community that its nuclear programme is exclusively for peaceful purposes. We welcome the agreement reached with Iran on 15 November.

Iraq

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on Iraq, with particular reference to the situation in Falluja. [199264]

(2) what emergency (a) medical supplies, (b) personnel and (c) equipment will be provided by the UK to assist those injured by coalition forces attacks upon Fallujah. [199265]

Mr. Mullin: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation, for which I apologise.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what methods are being used to examine the report in The Lancet on Iraqi civilian deaths; which personnel have been assigned to conduct the examination; and when the examination began. [197211]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made a written statement on The Lancet report on 17 November 2004, Official Report, columns 92–95WS). The estimate made in The Lancet article is at marked variance with the civilian death rate shown in figures compiled by Iraqi hospital staff since April. These figures, which report just under 4,000 Iraqi civilian casualties for the last 6 months, come from admissions to 182 hospitals.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whose control the main hospital in Fallujah is under. [199089]

Mr. Rammell: The Iraqi Security Forces recaptured Fallujah General Hospital on 7 November. The hospital remains under Iraqi Interim Government control.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in respect of information set out at paragraphs 91 and 92 of the Intelligence and Security Committee Report, Cm 5972, the Government have been informed as to when the US Federal Bureau of Intelligence investigation ordered by Senator Rockefeller in March 2003 into the source of the forged documents on an Iraq-Niger uranium deal is due to report. [183544]

Mr. MacShane: The investigation requested by Senator Rockefeller is continuing. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has not yet given an indication of when the investigation will be completed.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is with regard to the handing over to the Iraqi authorities of Iraqi detainees who could face the death penalty. [189326]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 16 September 2004]: Under CPA Memorandum 3, which applies to UK forces post 28 June, we are required to hand over apprehended persons suspected of having committed criminal acts to the Iraqi criminal justice system as soon as practically possible.

We have lobbied and will continue to lobby the Iraqi Government against the application of the death penalty in all cases.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when British officials first became aware of allegations of mistreatment of detainees at Abu Ghraib. [189800]

Mr. Rammell: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation, for which I apologise.

Ivory Coast

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the possibility of conflict in the Ivory Coast spreading to neighbouring West African countries; and what discussions have taken place with the African Union on preventing regional instability. [199041]

Mr. Mullin: We remain concerned at the possibility of the conflict spreading, and recent reports of refugees fleeing to Liberia. We have called on neighbouring countries in UN Security Council Resolutions 1528 and 1572, to co-operate on regional stability. We welcome the efforts of the African Union to end the violence and bring about a political settlement based on the Linas-Marcoussis Agreement.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to help prevent a full-scale conflict within the Ivory Coast between government forces and northern rebels; and what discussions have taken place between the Government and (a) the UN, (b) the Government of France and (c) the Cote D'Ivoire Government on resolving the situation. [199042]

Mr. Mullin: We have strongly condemned in the UN the resumption of violence in Cote d'Ivoire. The UN delivered a strong message to all the parties including the Government of the Cote d'Ivoire, through UN Security Council Resolution 1572, that they must implement immediately the Linas-Marcoussis Agreement. The Resolution also imposes an immediate arms embargo, and a travel ban and assets freeze on those who block the peace process. We fully support the action undertaken by French forces and the UN operation in Cote d'Ivoire. We remain in close contact with the Government of France on next steps.

Loos Battlefield

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Government of France regarding the preservation of Loos battlefield; and if he will make a statement. [198532]

Mr. MacShane: Her Majesty's consul general at Lille, and the Commonwealth War Graves Commission (CWGC) Director for Information, visited an area of the Loos Battlefields on 12 November and met the Mayor of Auchy les Mines and the landowner of a local landfill site. The consul general highlighted strong public concern in the UK following media reports that waste material was being deposited in an area where British soldiers fell during the 1915 Battle of Loos. At the end of the First World War, British authorities cleared the battlefield and soldiers' remains were interred in local CWGC cemeteries. The consul general reminded the local authorities of their obligation to treat any further remains of British and Commonwealth soldiers, should they be discovered, with dignity and respect, and CWGC have followed up in writing. The French authorities decided to cease this particular landfill operation from 17 November 2004. We will remain fully engaged with all British and Commonwealth War Grave issues throughout France and around the world.

Malaysia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with members of the Malaysian Government concerning their policy on illegal immigrants and the impact of that policy on the Rohingya refugees; and if he will make a statement. [199165]

Mr. Alexander: The British high commission in Kuala Lumpur continues to raise our concerns with the Malaysian Government over the issue of illegal immigrants and the status of Rohingya refugees.

We therefore welcome the recent announcement from the Prime Minister's office with regard to the status of the Rohingyas. The Malaysian Government have indicated that those Rohingyas who have been documented and given refugee status by the UN High Commission for Refugees will be issued with ID cards. This will entitle them to legal status in Malaysia, enabling them to find work and giving their children access to education.

Maldives

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations on the need to ensure the Maldives Government general election campaign is conducted to internationally accepted standards; and if he will make a statement. [198554]

Mr. Alexander: The parliamentary elections due in the Maldives on 31 December come at an important moment in the country's democratic reform process. We have already welcomed many of the reform proposals outlined by President Gayoom in June and his stated commitment to an open and inclusive reform process. The elections will enable the international community to judge whether President Gayoom and the Maldives Government are genuinely committed to reform. We look to the Government of the Maldives to ensure that the election process is free and fair and in accordance with international standards; that all who wish to stand for election are allowed to stand and campaign freely; that the electorate and the media are allowed to engage in open debate; and that state resources are not used to favour some candidates more than others. Without a free and fair election, the Maldives long-term stability and prosperity will be at risk. My officials and I will be raising these points with representatives of the Government. We welcome the Government of the Maldives invitation to the Commonwealth Secretariat to send an observer team.

Middle East

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the (a) Egyptian Government and (b) Palestinian Authority concerning freedom of religion in Gaza after the Israeli withdrawal; and if he will make a statement. [199106]

Mr. Mullin: We have not made any representations to the Egyptian Government or the Palestinian Authority concerning freedom of religion in Gaza after the Israeli withdrawal.

We will continue to press the Palestinian Authority to ensure they can demonstrate a commitment to the human rights of both Israelis and Palestinians.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the (a) Egyptian Government and (b) Palestinian Authority concerning women's rights in Gaza after the Israeli withdrawal; and if he will make a statement. [199107]

Mr. Mullin: We have not made any representations to the Egyptian Government or the Palestinian Authority concerning women's rights in Gaza after the Israeli withdrawal.

We will continue to press the Palestinian Authority to ensure they can demonstrate a commitment to the human rights of both Israelis and Palestinians.

Musilimot Adelodun Seriki-Rogers

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when appeal number LAG/488597 relating to Musilimot Adelodun Seriki-Rogers will be heard. [191216]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

The appeal of Miss Musilimot Adelodum Seriki-Rogers is listed for a preliminary hearing at the Immigration Appellate Authority hearing centre in Stoke-on-Trent on the 9 December 2004, with the substantive oral hearing listed at the same venue for the 4 January 2005.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current threat of nuclear accidents worldwide; and if he will make a statement. [198082]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 15 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the date was of the last meeting between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Electoral Commission to discuss the registration of overseas voters. [198864]

Mr. Mullin: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and the Electoral Commission last met on 10 November 2004. In the meeting we discussed how the FCO could further assist the Electoral Commission in its efforts to publicise overseas voter registration.

Palestinian Territories

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in policing in Palestinian Territories to maintain the rule of law and prevent violence as set out in the Road Map. [199022]

Mr. Mullin: Some progress has been made in policing the Occupied Territories, including the establishment of a Central Operations Room in Ramallah, which has resulted in a number of suicide bombings being prevented by the Palestinian Authority. A second Central Operations Room is due to be set up in Gaza.The UK is supporting the Palestinians in their efforts to improve security. We have offered advice, equipment and mentoring, through a senior UK police adviser in the Occupied Territories. We are also working with EU partners to prepare an assistance project for Palestinian civil policing.

We stand ready to work with the new Palestinian leadership to continue this work. There is much they still have to do. We look forward to a renewed effort to make the most of the changed landscape in the Middle East.

Peru

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's assessment is of the human rights situation in Peru; and what action his Department is taking to improve the situation. [198986]

Mr. Rammell: We constantly monitor the human rights situation in Peru. We have actively supported the efforts of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, set up to analyse, investigate and ascribe responsibility for past human rights abuses. This support has helped develop institutional capacity within the Commission in the regions most affected by the violence. With the mandate of the Commission now concluded, the Peruvian authorities are now in the process of implementing its recommendations. We are currently supporting the work of the Human Rights Ombudsman's Office and the National Co-ordinator for Human Rights in this aim. We continue to make representations to the Peruvian authorities in support of human rights and our embassy in Lima maintains close contact with the main organisations that promote and defend human rights in Peru.

Redundant Soldiers (Sierra Leone/Liberia)

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate has been made of the number of redundant fighters in (a) Sierra Leone and (b) Liberia; what assessment has been made of the possibility that these fighters may travel to the Ivory Coast to fight there; and what steps the Government have taken to facilitate alternative employment for soldiers in (i) Liberia and (ii) Sierra Leone. [199037]

Mr. Mullin: Estimates of numbers of ex-combatants in the region vary. However, 72,000 people in Sierra Leone, and 95,000 in Liberia, have participated in disarmament, demobilisation programmes. We remain concerned about the possibility of fighters moving to different conflicts; we have supported rehabilitation and reintegration programmes in both countries. I shall be visiting Sierra Leone and Liberia later this month to see the situation for myself.

Safety of Maritime Navigation Convention

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what amendments his Department has proposed to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation 1988. [189862]

Mr. Rammell: The UK has not proposed any amendments to this Convention. The US initiated the amendments in 2002. Our officials have been working with other International Maritime Organisation (IMO) Member States, and non-governmental organisations to achieve consensus on the draft texts. The amendments will provide a legal framework, based on the principal of prior flag state consent, for interdiction of ships on the high seas suspected of being involved in terrorism, including the illegal transportation of WMD. Good progress has been made in respect of the new terrorist offences, and general consensus has been achieved on many of the provisions of the boarding regime.

The IMO has met six times to exchange views on the draft texts. Further progress was made at the October meeting of the IMO Committee, and an IMO Diplomatic Conference to adopt the amendments is now scheduled for October 2005.

Sudan

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2004 by the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Official Report, column 696, on rebel attacks in Darfur on civilians and aid convoys, what the evidential basis is for the statement that the rebels are making more such attacks. [199216]

Mr. Mullin: The UN Secretary-General's report to the Security Council of 2 November states that:

> "Ceasefire violations continued throughout the month (of October). In fact, they increased on both sides . . . From African Union Ceasefire Commission and other reports it seems that the Sudan Liberation Movement/Army (SLM/A) was responsible for the greater number of violations in October".

This report goes on to say that > "the SLM/A are seeking to claim a wider area of Darfur as being under their control and have taken action leading to the closure of several routes of strategic importance. In what appears to be a deliberate campaign to strengthen their logistical and fighting capacity, SLM/A forces attacked a large number of police positions and so-called soft targets, capturing weapons and ammunition. They have captured vehicles from the police, but also taken them at gunpoint from humanitarian agencies."

We are pressing both the Government of Sudan and the rebels to respect the ceasefire and to abide by the terms of the Humanitarian and Security Protocols which they signed on 9 November.

Turkmenistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place between the Government and the Russian Federation on the regime in Turkmenistan. [199039]

Mr. Rammell: We have periodic consultations on all aspects of the situation in Turkmenistan with Russian officials in both Ashgabat and Moscow.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment has been made of the (a) political and (b) economic situation in Turkmenistan. [199040]

Mr. Rammell: We remain seriously concerned by the absence of democracy in Turkmenistan. Parliamentary elections have been scheduled for 19 December. However, although the Turkmen authorities have announced each seat will be contested by more than one candidate, Turkmenistan remains a one-party state. We believe that there is no prospect that the December elections will meet even minimal democratic standards. Parliament in any case has few genuine responsibilities in a country in which power is firmly held by President Niyazov.

We supported the tabling of resolutions at the 59th and 60th sessions of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in 2003 and spring 2004 and also at the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly in 2003. We are doing so again at this year's UN General Assembly. These have noted the limited positive steps by the Turkmen Government and have raised serious concerns about the human rights situation and the absence of democracy in Turkmenistan.

Turkmenistan has substantial reserves of natural gas and oil deposits. However, there are reasons to doubt whether this will underpin successful long-term economic development. Firstly, most of its gas exports have traditionally gone to countries in the former Soviet Union like Ukraine which pay well below world market prices. Secondly, there is little evidence that the revenues generated by the energy sector are effectively invested in areas—such as health and education—which would provide a basis for continuing growth prospects in the future. The distribution of wealth is very uneven; poverty is rife while the large profits of the energy sector are shared between a relatively small section of the population.

There has been little economic reform and no agreement concluded with the IMF. The Turkmen economy is highly reliant on the production of energy and cotton. Any hopes of significant diversification are hindered by the failure of the Turkmen Government's economic policies to promote a business environment which stimulates new investment.

United Nations Reform

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what research he has commissioned regarding reform of the United Nations; and if he will make a statement. [197807]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has not commissioned any recent research on the reform of the United Nations. Ministers and officials are, however, in close touch with many academics and practitioners who are engaged in the international debate on this subject. For example, I hosted a seminar on UN reform involving leading UK academics in June 2003 and followed this up with a round-table with academics in July 2003 on the same subject. I have also held a number of meetings with New York based academics during my regular visits to the United Nations.

We have been closely involved in discussions surrounding the work of the High Level Panel set up by the UN Secretary-General to make recommendations on improving the UN's work on peace and security. The Government's position on this and other aspects of UN reform was set out in the Command Paper "The United Kingdom in the United Nations" (Cm 6325) published in October.

West Papua

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Indonesia on the future of West Papua, with particular reference to the role of the security forces within the area. [198613]

Mr. Alexander: Together with our European partners, we regularly raise our concerns about the situation in Papua. On 28 October, EU ministerial representatives visited Indonesia and met with the newly elected President, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono and the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Hasan Wirayuda. Both expressed their view that two of the key issues for the new Indonesia Government were a resolution to the problems in Papua and the promotion and protection of human rights throughout Indonesia. We hope that this will lead to a peaceful and negotiated solution to the situation in Papua.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Children's Broadcasting

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact on children's broadcasting funded wholly or partly through advertising of the proposals set out in the Government's Public Health White Paper. [199235]

Estelle Morris: The Government's Public Health White Paper sets out a range of options for tightening the rules on broadcast advertising, sponsorship and promotion of foods to children. We recognise that some of these could have an impact on the funding of children's broadcasting and this is referred to in the Partial Regulatory Impact Assessment associated with the White Paper and on which comments are sought.

As the White Paper makes clear, the options to be pursued by Ofcom will be dependent on the nutritional profiling scheme being developed by the Department of Health and the Food Standards Agency. Ofcom will consult on proposed rule changes in due course and will, if they are likely to have a significant impact, undertake a full Regulatory Impact Assessment as required under the Communications Act 2003.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by her Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196599]

Mr. Caborn: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Digital Television

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to improve the reception of digital television signals in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198689]

Estelle Morris: The Government are committed to ensuring that at Digital Switchover everyone who can currently get the main public service broadcasting channels in analogue form (BBC1 and 2, ITV, Channel 4/S4C and Five) can receive them on digital systems.

At present around 73 per cent. of UK households can access Digital Terrestrial Television services. In Newcastle-under-Lyme as in other areas, the transmitters that broadcast the digital services have to be limited to avoid interference with the analogue signal. This situation will not change until switchover.

The 22 July statement made to the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State—indicated that while the broadcasters have not reached a full consensus on the optimum timetable, some—including the BBC—have suggested that 2012 may be the most appropriate date for the completion of switchover. This was reflected in the draft Digital Replacement Licences for commercial Public Service Broadcasters on which Ofcom recently consulted. A final decision on the timetable will be made in due course.

English Heritage

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans English Heritage have to retain the post of chief archaeologist; and if she will make a statement. [198846]

Mr. Caborn: As part of its modernisation programme, English Heritage has integrated its Archaeology and Historic Buildings and Areas departments. This will ensure a more holistic approach to the study and conservation of the historic environment. In this context, the chief archaeologist post has been replaced with a new post of Archaeological Adviser.

European Commission (Audiovisual Services)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received about the changes in responsibility for audiovisual services within the European Commission; and if she will make a statement. [198394]

Estelle Morris: None.

Football

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will investigate the BBC's acquisition of national radio rights to Premier League and FA Cup football matches to be broadcast on Five Live Sports Extra; whether this is in breach of the conditions laid down by the Secretary of State for the operation of the station; and whether the BBC requested that these rights be excluded from the packages of the rights that they acquired. [198390]

Estelle Morris: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Free TV Licences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households in Pendle receive the free television licence for the over 75s. [197034]

Estelle Morris: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the likely costs to her Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [199083]

Mr. Caborn: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gambling

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the overseas visits made by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department in relation to proposed changes to legislation on gambling; what the itinerary was for each visit; how long each visit lasted; which hotels were used; what the cost was in each case; and how each visit was funded. [194540]

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what contacts Mr. Elliot Grant of her Department has had with companies involved in the (a) British and (b) US gaming industry in the past 24 months; and whether he has undertaken fact-finding visits in the United States in the company of employees of the (i) British and (ii) US gaming industry; [195316]

(2) what contacts Mr. Gideon Hoffman of her Department has had with companies involved in the (a) British and (b) US gaming industry in the past 24 months; what contacts he has had with representatives of (i) Ladbrokes and (ii) the Hilton Group; what contacts he has had with Mr. Alan Ross, Managing Director of Ladbrokes; and whether he has undertaken fact-finding visits in the United States in the company of employees of the (A) British and (B) US gaming industry; [195317]

(3) whether she has visited (a) Las Vegas and (b) Atlantic City in her official capacity; [193903]

(4) what contacts Mr. Nicholas Bent in her Department has had with companies involved in the (a) British and (b) US gaming industry in the past 24 months; and whether he has undertaken fact-finding visits in the United States in the company of employees of the British or US gaming industry. [195318]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 1 November 2004]: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Library. Information on travel by officials is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code, copies of which are available in the Library.

I can confirm that I have visited neither Las Vegas nor Atlantic City in an official capacity, although my right hon. Friend the Minister for Media and Heritage has visited a number of places in the United States as well as South Africa with a view to ensuring that regulatory judgments are well founded.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the occasions on which (a) she, and (b) other ministers in her Department have met representatives of (i) US casino operators, (ii) British casino operators and (iii) casino operators from other countries to discuss gambling issues, broken down by date of meeting. [195076]

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many recent meetings she has had with representatives of (a) Sun International, (b) MGM Mirage, (c) Kerzner International, (d) Caesar's Entertainment and (e) the British Casino Association; when those meetings took place; and if she will list the representatives whom she met from each organisation; [193901]

(2) how many recent meetings (a) officials and (b) special advisers of her Department have had with representatives of (i) Sun International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) Kerzner International, (iv) Caesar's Entertainment and (v) the British Casino Association. [193902]

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings (a) she, (b) other Ministers in her Department and (c) officials have had in the last six months with (i) representatives of the gambling industry and (ii) organisations concerned about the possible harmful effects of increased gambling. [194113]

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which (a) UK and (b) international organisations have submitted written representations to the Department concerning the Government's proposals for changes to legislation on gambling; and on what dates each representation was (i) received and (ii) given a substantive response; [194510]

(2) on what dates (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department have held meetings with representatives of the UK gambling industry to discuss proposed changes to legislation on gambling; [194514]

(3) what meetings (a) she, (b) her departmental Ministers and (c) advisers and officials have held with representatives of (i) Sun City International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) Mandalay Resort Group, (iv) Kerzner International, (v) Las Vegas Sands, Inc., (vi) Harrah's Entertainment, (vii) Caesar's Entertainment and (viii) other foreign casino firms; what the (A) dates and (B) venues of the meetings were; and which individuals were present. [193798]

Tessa Jowell: Since the publication of the report of the Gambling Review Body (Cm 5206) in July 2001, the Department has undertaken a very extensive programme of consultations with interested bodies about options and proposals for changes to gambling law in Great Britain. There have been two formal public consultations, the first on the Review Body's report and the second on the draft clauses published for pre-legislative scrutiny in November 2003.

In addition to these consultations the relevant Government Departments have corresponded with and met individual companies (including those who have expressed an interest in trading in Great Britain as well as those already doing so), trade associations, charities and other bodies concerned with problem gambling or who benefit from lotteries, local authorities, trade unions, law enforcement agencies, academics and many other bodies and individuals, including members of the public, with an interest. These contacts, designed to ensure that the Government's policy proposals are sound and take full account of all relevant benefits, costs and risks, have involved both Ministers and officials. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Code.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether all Government buildings in her Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [199310]

Mr. Caborn: All DCMS buildings are fully accessible to disabled people. A full accessibility audit for the Disability Discrimination Act was carried out during the spring of 2004 and all reasonable alterations made to comply with the requirements of the Act. Access was already possible for wheelchairs and further work has been carried out to make plate glass doors more obvious, to add induction loops, fire warnings for the hearing impaired, to limit door pressures and improve and add tactile signage.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [198312]

Estelle Morris: There have been five DCMS Green Ministers.

Horseracing

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether she has received any representations to extend the life of the Horserace Betting Levy Board; [199050]

(2) what discussions she has had with the British Horseracing Board about the recent European Court of Justice decision concerning modernisation of British horseracing; and what the conclusions were; [199051]

(3) what assessment she has made of the impact the recent European Court of Justice ruling will have on the implementation of the Horserace Betting and Olympic Lottery Act 2004; [199052]

(4) what assessment she has made of the impact of the recent European Court of Justice ruling on the modernisation of British horseracing. [199053]

Mr. Caborn: Following the recent ruling of the European Court of Justice in relaxation to database rights the British Horseracing Board asked the Government to extend the Horserace Betting Levy. The Government is not currently persuaded that the ruling provides sufficient reason to suspend the planned timetable for the implementation of the Horserace Betting and Olympic Lottery Act; but I met the Chairman of the Board on 15 November to discuss the implications of the ruling. We agreed to meet again to discuss this issue further in the light of the full assessment, which the Board will now be undertaking.

Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195627]

Mr. Caborn: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Lottery Funding

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the annual Sports Lottery has distributed in grants since 1994. [198334]

Mr. Caborn: Information on Lottery distribution, in terms of the amounts authorised for payment out of the National Lottery Distribution Fund (NLDF) to the distributing bodies for payments to grant recipients, can be obtained from the National Lottery Distribution Fund Annual Accounts for the years 1994–95 to 2002–03 inclusive. In each year's Accounts, a table headed "Reconciliation of amounts available to distributing bodies" gives the amounts "Authorised for payment to distributing bodies". This equals the amount drawn down from the NLDF by the distributors. The aggregate amounts drawn down by the sports distributors in each financial year from 1994–95 are given in the following table. Copies of the full NLDF accounts are available in the House of Commons Library.

Total drawn down from the NLDF by sports Lottery distributing bodies

1994–95	1,830,056
1995–96	40,079,523
1996–97	104,059,408
1997–98	188,291,343
1998–99	397,379,272
1999–2000	316,688,360
2000–01	292,540,885
2001–02	359,233,902
2002–03	377,493,781

The NLDF Annual Accounts for 2003–04 are currently being audited prior to publication.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 8 November, Official Report, column 513W, on the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF), if she will issue general guidelines to the HLF to permit the trustees to support projects relating to the heritage of the UK but located overseas. [198337]

Mr. Caborn: The National Heritage Acts 1980 and 1997 do not exclude applications to the Heritage Lottery Fund from applicants incorporated abroad, or which relate to projects based abroad, nor do existing policy directions from the Secretary of State do so. However Trustees of the Fund have decided that, because of difficulties of public access and involvement in projects based abroad, these projects will continue to be a low priority.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much Heritage Lottery funding has been awarded on average to each unitary authority in England in each year since 1997. [198665]

Mr. Caborn: The information is in the following table:

National Lottery

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding the Heritage Lottery Fund has given to museums in each of the last three years; and what proportion of total Heritage Lottery Funding this constituted in each year. [R][199144]

Mr. Caborn: The information is in the following table:

Funding by the Heritage Lottery Fund for Museums and Galleries

	Amount (£million)	Proportion of total HLF funding
2001–02	107,419,163	34.7
2002–03	103,529,510	31.8
2003–04	73,831,797	25

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money was distributed to sport through the lottery in each of the last 10 years. [197457]

Estelle Morris [pursuant to her reply, 11 November 2004, Official Report, c. 838W]: The information given in the table contained in my answer was not correct. In fact, the closest approximation of the amount of lottery funding distributed to sport is the amount drawn down from the National Lottery Distribution Fund by the sports lottery distributing bodies to make grant payments to successful applicants. These figures, aggregating draw-down by the individual distributors, for each financial year since the inception of the national lottery, appear in the following table.

	Total drawn down from the NLDF by sports lottery distributing bodies (£)
1995–96	40,079,523
1996–97	104,059,408
1997–98	188,291,343
1998–99	397,379,272
1999–2000	316,688,360
2000–01	292,540,885
2001–02	359,233,902
2002–03	377,493,781

The NLDF annual accounts for 2003–04, which are currently being audited prior to publication, will give the figure for that year.

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will assess the merits of establishing a designated lottery fund for the maintenance of war memorials. [197269]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no such plans. However, the Heritage Lottery Fund will consider applications for the restoration of war memorials provided that they fulfil their criteria, and to date the HLF has awarded over £618,000 to 21 projects renovating war memorials. The Grants for War Memorials scheme co-funded by English Heritage and the Wolfson Foundation, but administered by the charity the Friends of War Memorials, also provides grants of up £10,000 to undertake any necessary restoration, essential maintenance or repair of war memorials.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 14 October 2004, Official Report, column 328W, on Lottery grants, what monitoring has been carried out to ensure that timber used in Lottery-funded projects is from legal and sustainable sources; and what sanctions can be applied where this is found not to be the case. [199221]

Estelle Morris: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Sports Councils

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1307W, on sports councils, what the annual Exchequer grants to the national governing bodies of sport were in each year from 1974 to 1996. [198332]

Mr. Caborn: As I stated in my answer of 27 October 2004, Official Report, column 1233W, to my hon. Friend the Department does not hold this information. We have contacted Sport England to see if they hold this information and they are currently checking to see if printed copies of the old Great Britain Sports Council's Annual Report and Accounts are available. I will write to my hon. Friend when it is determined whether the information is available.

Television

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that there is a competitive market in the provision of cable television to residential customers. [199205]

Estelle Morris: There is a competitive market in the provision of digital television services through the three platforms of digital terrestrial television, satellite and cable. It is a commercial decision for cable companies whether to provide a service to a geographic area, and there is no restriction on companies wishing to enter the market.

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that analogue cable television networks are converted to digital provision. [199207]

Estelle Morris: None. Analogue cable television is not affected by digital switchover and the extent to which operators convert their networks to digital is a commercial decision for them. We are however in regular contact with the cable companies to encourage digital provision. About 72 per cent. of cable TV customers use digital services.

Theatre

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding the Arts Council has given to theatre, in each of the last three years; and what proportion of total Arts Council funding this constituted in each year. [R] [199142]

Estelle Morris: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

TV Licence Payments

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether (a) her Department and (b) agencies responsible to her Department have conducted a recent analysis of the socio-economic groups which are more likely to pay for their television licence by direct debit. [198749]

Estelle Morris: Neither the Department for Culture, Media and Sport nor any agency responsible to the Department have carried out such an analysis recently.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the number of people in (a) Hemsworth constituency and (b) the UK who pay for their television licence in a single instalment. [198750]

Estelle Morris: TV Licensing, who administer the television licensing system as agents for the BBC, do not record the number of television licences issued by constituency. For the United Kingdom as a whole, approximately nine million licence payers currently pay for their licence in a single instalment.

VisitBritain Website

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the proposed VisitBritain online accommodation booking system on existing commercial accommodation booking agencies. [198978]

Mr. Caborn: The Government expects the impact of the EnglandNet information and booking system to be market-neutral. EnglandNet will carry a wide variety of information about attractions and events, as well as details of quality-graded accommodation. It is not designed to replicate the role performed by existing commercial booking agencies. Rather, it will provide such agencies with access to new online marketing opportunities, and make bookings much easier to receive and fulfil. In this, EnglandNet will provide commercial operators with access to the 11 million potential customers who visit VisitBritain's websites each year—a figure set to rise to 20 million by 2007.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has given to VisitBritain on standards for property which will be made available for booking on the VisitBritain website. [198979]

Mr. Caborn: The EnglandNet tourism information and e-commerce system is being developed by Networks for Tourism, a company owned by VisitBritain and all the Regional Tourist Boards in England. VisitBritain's shareholding was formerly held by the English Tourism Council.

Under an agreement between the Council and the Boards on the formation of the company, it is intended that EnglandNet will offer access to the providers of accommodation which has been subject to inspection under a recognised grading scheme. My Department supports that intention, as it will encourage the fullest possible co-ordination of the new marketing opportunities which EnglandNet will provide, with the consumer benefits of grading inspection—particularly in the light of the in-principle agreement to the adoption of common grading standards in England, announced by VisitBritain, the Automobile Association and the Royal Automobile Club in May 2004.

Visually Impaired

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what recent discussions her Department has had with Ofcom on the needs of the blind and the visually impaired; [198251]

(2) if she will make it her policy to ensure that Ofcom consults widely with the visually impaired. [198252]

Estelle Morris: The Department is in contact with Ofcom on these issues as necessary.

In particular, we recently asked Ofcom to review the statutory target for audio description on television and consider whether the 10 per cent. target should be raised. It will be doing this as part of the first review of the code setting out the requirements on broadcasters.

In drawing up this code, Ofcom has a specific statutory obligation to consult those representing the interests of persons who are blind or partially sighted.

More generally, Ofcom has statutory duties to establish and maintain effective arrangements for consultation; to have regard to the needs of persons with disabilities; to include among appointees to the Consumer Panel persons who are able to give informed advice about the interests of persons with disabilities; and to establish an advisory committee on elderly and disabled persons.

DEFENCE

Defence Industry Jobs

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs in the UK are (a) directly and (b) indirectly dependent on the UK defence industry, broken down by constituency. [198037]

Mr. Ingram: The latest estimate is that in 2002–03 there were 165,000 full-time equivalent jobs in the United Kingdom in those companies that receive contracts directly from the Ministry of Defence or for defence exports dependent on those contracts, and 140,000 indirectly dependent in the supply chain. More detailed figures separating those involved with employment on MOD equipment, MOD non-equipment, and defence exports are produced by the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) in Table 1.9, UK Defence Statistics 2004: this is available in the Library of the House. Figures are not available broken down by constituency and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers, excluding the Royal Irish Regiment, are serving in Northern Ireland. [198513]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The number of Army personnel, excluding from the Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service), stationed in Northern Ireland at the 30 September 2004 was 6,710.

The GOC NI also has under his command troops that are rear based in Great Britain that can be called forward to the Province as and when required. In addition, other troops can be made available to the GOC NI from Land Command if required, for example, during the marching season.

Redress Procedures

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with respect to (a) the Army, (b) the Naval Service and (c) the Royal Air Force how many personnel have initiated redress procedures since 1997; and in how many cases in (i) the Army, (ii) the Naval Service and (iii) the Royal Air Force the complainant has been successful. [198038]

Mr. Caplin: Information is not held in the form requested. The Services only maintain centrally statistics for the number of complaints considered by their Service Board. The Naval Service considered 50 complaints between 2001 and 2003, of which seven were upheld and three were partially upheld. The Army considered 197 complaints between 1999 and 2003, of which 49 were upheld and 14 were partially upheld. The RAF considered 349 complaints between 1997 and 2003 (230 of which arose in 2002 concerning the introduction of Pay 2000) and upheld 16; eight were partially upheld.

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) part-time and (b) full-time soldiers are serving with each of the home service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment. [198512]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2004]: As at 1 October 2004 the number of part-time and full-time trained officers and soldiers serving with the home service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment was:

	(a) Part-time	(b) Full-time
2nd Royal Irish Battalion	410	570
3rd Royal Irish Battalion	390	590
4th Royal Irish Battalion	440	540

Note:

All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

In addition to those personnel serving in the Home Service (HS) Battalions, there are less than 10 part-time and 380 full-time Royal Irish personnel serving with other units in Northern Ireland.

2-4-5-T

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from former servicemen who served in Malaysia concerning the long-term health effects of exposure to chemical 2–4-5-T; and if he will make a statement. [181167]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

40 Commando

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much notice 40 Commando would need to be deployed to the US controlled zone in Iraq. [193883]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Advisers/Consultants

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department and its agencies and non-departmental public bodies spent on (a) external consultants and (b) special advisers in each of the last three years. [172514]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces (Costs)

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) personnel and (b) equipment and maintenance costs of (i) an Armoured Infantry (Warrior) Battalion, (ii) an Airportable Infantry Battalion, (iii) a

Parachute Regiment Battalion and (iv) a Gurkha Regiment Battalion were in the last period for which figures are available. [198987]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected costs between 2008 and 2013 are of a (a) Heavy (Warrior) Battalion, with high-tech upgrade, (b) Medium (FRES) Battalion, with heavy-lift aircraft capability and (c) Light (Airportable) Battalion, with high-tech network-capable upgrade. [198988]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate the Department has made of the financial effects of the proposed restructuring process between 2008 and 2013. [198989]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Armed Forces (Procurement)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on planned procurement for the (a) Army, (b) Royal Air Force and (c) Royal Navy. [191742]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Armed Services (Voter Registration)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are registered to vote. [196096]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 8 November 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 4 November 2004, Official Report, column 374W, to the hon. Member for Chichester (Mr. Tyrie).

Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of (a) an armoured infantry (warrior) battalion, (b) an air-portable infantry battalion, (c) a parachute regiment battalion and (d) a Gurkha regiment battalion was in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by (i) personnel and (ii) equipment and maintenance. [199160]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the projected costs per annum of the proposed new (a) heavy (warrior) battalion with high-tech upgrade, (b) medium (future rapid effect system) battalion with heavy-lift aircraft capability and (c) light (air-portable) battalion with high-tech network capable upgrade; and what estimate the Department has made of possible savings to be made from the proposed restructuring process. [199161]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) soldiers and (b) officers have been (i) charged and (ii) disciplined for (A) bullying offences and (B) failing to investigate allegations of bullying since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [179877]

Mr. Caplin: There is no specific charge under the Army Act 1955 for bullying or failing to investigate allegations of bullying.

Army Medal Office

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed in the Army Medal Office; whether they are working overtime to clear the backlog of cases; and what the standard of service laid down for applicants is. [197051]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications have been received for General Service Medals in each of the last 12 months; and how long it is taking to process them on average. [197052]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Mr. A. Fairclough of Verwood, Dorset will receive the General Service Medal for his service in the Suez Canal Zone; and if he will make a statement. [197054]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Army Strength

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what period between operational tours is expected when there are 36 infantry battalions. [194390]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Army personnel and (b) civilians were working for the Army in July; and what the current total is. [196221]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Asbestos Contamination

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the principal areas covered by departmental files contaminated by asbestos. [199009]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many files contaminated with asbestos he estimates to be accessible to the public under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [199010]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effects asbestos contamination of his Department's files will have on access to those files under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [199011]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department discovered that certain of its files had become contaminated by asbestos; and what action was taken in response to enable those files to be used. [199012]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to decontaminate those of his Department's files which have become contaminated by asbestos; and what he estimates the cost of such decontamination to be. [199013]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Beer (Official Functions)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the serving of beer at official functions. [145779]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Black Watch

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers in 1st Battalion Black Watch have been fined by the Army since July; and on what grounds. [195042]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the level of pay for soldiers of 1st Battalion Black Watch involved in the redeployment in Iraq will be (a) higher and (b) lower than the level of pay before the redeployment. [195043]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which media outlets are attached to the Black Watch battle group in Iraq; and what security arrangements have been made for them. [198429]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The media groups attached to the Black Watch Battle Group include BBC News, Sky News, ITV News and Channel 4 News. The journalists are embedded with the Battle Group and remain with armed service personnel at all times. All embedded media personnel are required to wear helmets and body-armour, which are provided for them if they are unable to bring their own.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether a senior officer of the Black Watch expressed his concern in advance about the recent deployment of the regiment; and if he will make a statement. [198940]

Mr. Hoon: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Bullying

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what statistics are retained by the Special Investigation Branch of the Royal Military Police on completed investigations of allegations of bullying in the Army. [183381]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the barracks at which allegations of bullying have been investigated in the last year for which figures are available; and how many of these complaints (a) were unfounded, (b) were founded and (c) led to disciplinary or other action. [183382]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Cadet Units (Remembrance Sunday)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance was given to cadet units in the South East of England on carrying firearms on Remembrance Sunday; what role Ministers had in issuing guidance; and if he will make a statement. [199019]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Cheshire/QLR Regiments

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were recruited to (a) the Cheshire Regiment and (b) the Queen's Lancashire Regiment in the last 10 years. [188595]

Mr. Caplin: The following table shows the numbers of soldiers who joined the Cheshire Regiment and the Queens Lancashire Regiment on the completion of their training for the last four financial years (April to March). Statistics prior to this period are not available.

Financial year	Cheshire Regiment	Queen's Lancashire Regiment
2000–01	64	92
2001–02	75	78
2002–03	56	117
2003–04	72	104

Chinook Helicopters

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what testing procedures were carried out on the eight Chinook helicopters ordered in 1995 after they were received by his Department and prior to their active use by the armed forces. [174987]

Mr. Ingram: We have a complex and wide-ranging acceptance procedure, which includes independent third party advice, to ensure that the platform meets the performance standards contracted for and complies with United Kingdom safety standards. The Ministry of Defence has contracted with our independent advisers QinetiQ Boscombe Down to undertake this work.

Civilian/Enemy Deaths

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms the Army has in place to calculate the numbers of (a) civilian and (b) enemy dead in a prolonged conflict situation. [197366]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Colombian Army

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent UK military aid has been given to (a) the 1st Division of the Colombian Army and (b) the brigades and battalions that comprise that division; and which programmes this aid is funding. [192524]

Mr. Ingram: The Colombian Army 1st Division has recently received no specific British military assistance. UK military assistance provided to the Colombian Army is focused on specialist Explosive Ordnance Disposal units and the provision of British military education to selected individuals, such as at the Royal College of Defence Studies, which introduces British defence concepts, including human rights and democratic accountability of armed forces.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Colombian army units have received military (a) training and (b) assistance in each of the last five years; and what the financial value of each was in each year. [197631]

Mr. Ingram: United Kingdom military assistance provided to the Colombian army is focused on specialist Explosive Ordnance Disposal units and the provision of British military education to selected individuals, such as at the Royal College of Defence Studies, which introduces British Defence concepts, including human rights and democratic accountability of armed forces.

In financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05 the cost of military assistance provided by the UK to the Colombian armed forces was around £120,000 per year.

This information for previous years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Colonel Terrington

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether United States authorities have sought to interview Colonel Terrington. [193376]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Combat Wear

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what penalties apply to companies awarded contracts to supply combat wear to his Department where the specifications are not met. [198380]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has the right to reject any items, which do not meet the requirements of the specification. Should the contractor fail to rectify this failure the Department has the right to claim damages as allowable under law, purchase the items in default from an alternative source with the contractor paying any additional cost incurred by MOD and ultimately, should this failure continue, to terminate the contract.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195626]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Complaints

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what obstacles prevent the Army from (a) maintaining a central record of internal complaints and (b) establishing a database or other system of categorisation that would assist an annual audit of the (i) exercise of the duty of care and (ii) working of the disciplinary system. [183384]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Conferences

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) non-Ministerial staff and (b) special advisers in his Department attended conferences (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad in the year to 29 February; and what the cost of attending these conferences was, broken down by (A) travel costs, (B) food and drink, (C) accommodation and (D) miscellaneous costs. [161143]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 18 March 2004]: This information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All staff travel and attendance at conferences is undertaken in accordance with Service and civilian regulations.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many conferences were hosted by his Department in the year to 29 February; and what the cost of these conferences was, broken down by (a) travel costs, (b) food and drink, (c) accommodation and (d) miscellaneous costs. [161144]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 18 March 2004]: This information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Conferences and their associated costs are organised in accordance with departmental regulations.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many conferences (a) he and (b) other Ministers in his Department attended (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad in the year to 29 February; and what the cost of attending these conferences was, broken down by (A) travel costs, (B) food and drink, (C) accommodation and (D) miscellaneous costs. [161145]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 18 March 2004]: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2004, Official Report, column 466W, which covers ministerial travel overseas for 2003–04, to my hon. Friend the Member for West Bromwich East (Mr. Watson). All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) Major J.A. Kennedy's presentation, Real-time exchange of battlefield digital information, given at the SMI Conference Joint Battlespace Digitization on 20 May 2003, (b) Wing Commander Mike Longstaff and Squadron Leader R.K. Dyson's presentation, Flying Training, given at the SMI Conference Fighter Trainer on 2 June 2003, (c) Sym Taylor's presentation, Effective Management of Spares, given at the SMI Conference Military Spares and Inventory Management on 16 June 2003, (d) Lieutenant Colonel Chris Barkes and Wing Commander Chris Otley-Doe's presentation, Effective and Efficient Control of Material Flow, given at the SMI Conference Military Spares and Inventory Management on 16 June 2003 and (e) Lieutenant Commander Charles Jewitt's presentation on the Joint Modular Storage Concept given at the SMI Conference Military Spares and Inventory Management on 17 June 2003. [170425]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195464]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Contractors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he had with (a) trade union representatives, (b) hon. Members and (c) others relating to the recently completed tender process for single procurement of fabric and garments (i) relating specifically to the tender which Cookson and Clegg were part of and (ii) relating to the tender process in general; and if he will make a statement. [197662]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has had discussions with Members of both Houses of Parliament, trades unions, industry and the Department for Trade and Industry in relation to the recent contract award for Cut and Sewn Garments. The discussions have covered both the specific tender referred to and the tender process in general.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received (a) in the last 18 months and (b) since his Department's implementation of smart procurement from UK-based companies with which his Ministry has contracted for the provision of garments and clothing; and if he will make a statement. [197664]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has received letters from UK-based companies, either direct or through Members of both Houses of Parliament, regarding the provision of garments and clothing in the last 18 months. The letters have been related, in particular, to the recent contract award for Cut and Sewn Garments.

There has been similar correspondence since the implementation of smart procurement covering a range of clothing issues and items procured.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with (a) interested parties and (b) other Departments on the allocation of contracts for clothing and other garments; and if he will make a statement. [197666]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend has had discussions with a wide range of interested parties and other Departments regarding contracts for clothing and other garments, including members of both Houses of Parliament, trades unions, industry and the Department for Trade and Industry.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which elements of the Department's cut and sew contract with Cooneen, Watts and Stone Ltd. have been satisfied to date. [199147]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on operating penalties on contractors which fail to deliver on contracts due to (a) quality and (b) time. [199168]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Correspondence

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the letter from the hon. Member for Hereford dated 2 April, MC number 1674. [184837]

Mr. Ingram: I wrote to the hon. Member on 20 July 2004.

Criminal Trials

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers have been tried in the civilian courts since 1980 on criminal charges which have been previously dismissed as unfounded by military authorities. [194396]

Mr. Ingram: Records are not kept in such a way as to enable ready identification of specific instances where a civil trial has followed the dismissal of charges against a soldier by the chain of command. Although there is one such case currently directed for trial, I am not aware of this having occurred on any previous occasion in any Service.

Cyprus

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional duties have been placed upon UK forces serving (a) with the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and (b) along the border between the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus and the Eastern Sovereign Base Area as a result of changes to the treatment of the Green Line caused by the accession of Cyprus to the EU. [197585]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no additional security duties placed upon the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus due to the accession of Cyprus to the EU. Nor have there been any additional duties placed upon UK forces other than occasional patrols in support of Sovereign Base Area police and customs.

D Notices

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many D notices have been issued to the press requesting restriction of reporting on matters relating to Iraq in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [197514]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Data Protection

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures are in place (a) to check the criminal records of civil servants in his Department and agencies responsible to his Department who have access to computer databases containing confidential information on the public and (b) to ensure that there can be no improper use of computer databases containing confidential information on the public; and if he will make a statement. [194606]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Databases

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the fields of the (a) Force Structure database, (b) Procurement Plans database and (c) Defence Bills Authority databases. [176387]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Attachés

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 30 June 2004, Official Report, column 350W, on Defence Attachés, what the reasons are for the change in the amount of time devoted by Defence Attaches to supporting military exports from the 40 per cent. estimated in 1989 by the National Audit Office. [189485]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Crisis Management Organisation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of Human Rights Watch reports that British forces failed to secure containers filled with weapons near to the old airport in Basra in May 2003. [196585]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 November 2004]: The alleged incident occurred less than one week after the end of the war-fighting phase of Operation Telic. It would have been reasonable at that time for the Commanding Officer concerned to make the decision that his current operational commitments did not allow him to release forces for guarding Iraqi ammunition stores. Human Rights Watch reported at the time that the International Committee of the Red Cross had found at least 30 locations in Basrah, which contained abandoned munitions. It would not have been possible to provide site protection for all of these sites while carrying out all the other urgent tasks allocated to British forces at that time.

After the end of the conflict, British forces in south-eastern Iraq instituted information campaigns to educate the local population about the dangers of handling unexploded munitions. Explosive Ordnance Disposal teams also began the enormous task of clearing stockpiles such as the one reported by Human Rights Watch.

Defence Logistics

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in establishing a system of asset tracking for Defence logistics. [192369]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Procurement Agency

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms are in place in the Defence Procurement Agency for the passing of information and expertise between support groups and the integrated projects teams responsible for equipment procurement. [198930]

Mr. Ingram: There are 20 Support Groups within the Defence Procurement Agency (DPA) who are responsible for providing technical, financial and commercial policy advice to the Agency's Integrated Project Teams (IPTs). In addition to supporting the DPA IPTs, many Support Groups provide support to the wider Department and to industry.

Support Groups promulgate their advice and policy through the Department's Acquisition Management System (AMS) in the first instance. The AMS is a web-based system that provides a framework for more detailed guidance, often in the form of Joint Service

Publications or Defence Standards. The AMS is available via the internet and is used extensively by industry.

The individual Support Groups employ a variety of means for providing information and support directly to IPTs; these include bulletin boards, helplines, seminars and guidebooks. Where appropriate, individual Support Group personnel may become 'associate members' of IPTs.

Support Group personnel are involved in the delivery of training to IPTs and participate in a number of courses. Support Groups and IPTs also contribute to a process called 'Learning From Experience' where lessons learned are captured in a database for others to draw from.

Finally, the best way of sharing expertise between Support Groups and IPTs is for staff to move between them during their career. This assists in the development of policy and guidance that is aligned to the needs of IPTs.

Defence Projects

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) category A, (b) category B and (c) category C projects of his Department that have received (i) initial gate and (ii) main gate approval since 31 March 1997; and when approval was achieved. [170561]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Science and Technology Laboratories

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the European Commission's REACH chemical regulations on the work of the Defence Science and Technology Laboratories at Porton Down; and what representations he has made to the Commission. [153397]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Dentists

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-UK Commonwealth citizens practice as dentists in the (a) Army, (b) RAF and (c) Royal Navy. [198376]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Department Account Codes

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's account codes. [176383]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Advertising

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197298]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [192760]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies, since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196595]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to paragraph 65 of his Department's Annual Report and Accounts 2003–04, HC 1080, when his Department was first subject to a cash Departmental Expenditure Limit; and what that limit was; [196463]

(2) if he will list the cash demanding activities referred to in paragraph 65 of his Department's Annual Report and Accounts 2003–04, HC 1080, that were constrained in financial year 2003–04. [196465]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Heating

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) total energy use and (b) total cost has been of heating his Department's headquarters in Whitehall in each year since 1990. [192244]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to cut heat loss in his Department's headquarters in Whitehall; and if he will make a statement. [192245]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he takes to ensure that the buildings comprising his Department's headquarters in Whitehall are heated according to occupancy and climatic conditions rather than a standard date and time. [192246]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195659]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Lighting

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost of providing lighting for his Department's headquarters in Whitehall has been for each year since 1990. [192247]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his policy that lights within his Department's headquarters in Whitehall should remain on, irrespective of room occupancy. [192248]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of (a) decoration and (b) refurbishment of the London offices of the Department was in each of the last four years. [196152]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in his Department earn more than a whole-time equivalent salary of £57,485 per year. [195329]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 856W, by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the staff of the Department in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003 were people with disabilities. [196134]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 9 November 2004, Official Report, column 619W by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly).

E-business Strategy

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to produce his Department's e-business strategy. [162813]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Employment Costs

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the average employment cost of (a) an officer, (b) a member of other ranks, (c) a non-industrial civil servant and (d) an industrial civil servant in 2004–05. [181742]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Enhanced Combat Body Armour

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will write to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South as promised in his answer of 1 April 2004, Official Report, column 11W, on enhanced combat body armour. [189385]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when officials in his Department were first informed of the attempted coup plot in Equatorial Guinea; [198221]

(2) what contingency plans were drawn up by his Department (a) unilaterally and (b) in conjunction with other countries for the evacuation of British nationals and others from Equatorial Guinea immediately prior to the attempted coup earlier this year; [198218]

(3) which United Kingdom forces were within (a) 500 miles and (b) 1,000 miles of Equatorial Guinea (i) before and (ii) during the attempted coup earlier this year. [198220]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary about when the Government became aware of the alleged coup in Equatorial Guinea.

In this case no contingency planning was considered necessary because the majority of Entitled Personnel were covered by commercial evacuations plans, and the remainder would have been evacuated by the French under the updated civil contingency plan.

Throughout the period there were no operational UK forces in the Gulf of Guinea area other than British Military Training Teams in Ghana and Nigeria, and Defence Advisers/Attaches in Ghana, Nigeria and the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Equipment Contracts

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the date of contract signature for the (a) Support Vehicle, (b) Light Forces Anti-Tank Guided Weapon Systems, (c) Next Generation Anti-Armour Weapon and (d) Terrier projects are. [170554]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Falkland Islands (Landmines)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress the Government is making towards meeting its obligation under the Ottawa Treaty to clear landmines from the Falkland Islands by 2009. [198803]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 343W by the Secretary of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Family Liaison

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he has taken in the past year to improve communications between the Army and bereaved relatives of soldiers who have died while serving; and how many persons, of what rank, are employed in family liaison. [183383]

Mr. Caplin: We constantly review our procedures to ensure that they are sensitive to families' needs. A number of measures have been taken recently, including the formation of the Army Widows Association, to provide a focus for widows to share a common understanding of their circumstances, and the issue of a Guidance in Bereavement booklet, which offers help and guidance for families of servicemen or women who die while in Service. Also, much more robust arrangements for long-term contact through the Casualty Visiting Officer have been introduced.

A wide range of personnel are employed on family liaison but details are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information Act

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [198764]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The Ministry of Defence has made wide-ranging preparations for the full implementation of the Freedom of Information Act. The cost of compliance is being met from existing resources, and there has been no requirement to identify anticipated costs or to collate them centrally. To collect the necessary information now would involve disproportionate cost, and the final part of Exemption 9 (voluminous or vexatious requests) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information therefore applies.

Implementation of the Act principally involves staff who also have other duties. The effort which they devote to Freedom of Information issues in the first quarter of 2005 will depend on a range of factors, including the number of requests for information received in each area, the complexity of those requests, the ease with which it can be established whether relevant information is held, and the number of appeals lodged by dissatisfied requesters.

Funded Liability

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what the funded liability is for (a) officers and (b) other ranks in the Army in (i) each year since 1997, (ii) 2004–05 and (iii) 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [183344]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

General Election (Overseas Voters)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to ensure that the armed forces serving abroad are able to vote in a general election. [196736]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence issues a Defence Council Instruction explaining the procedures for electoral registration and notifies personnel of election announcements. Those overseas, or absent from their normal place of duty or home in the United Kingdom, have the option to appoint a proxy or elect for a postal vote.

General Security of Information Agreement

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date each amendment made in the last 30 years to the General Security of Information Agreement between the United Kingdom and United States, dated 14 April 1961, was made; and through which designated security authorities information under this agreement is channelled. [195409]

Mr. Hoon: The 1961 United Kingdom/United States General Security Agreement concerns the protection of any classified information exchanged between the parties and not just defence information. As the UK National Security Authority the Cabinet Office is the ultimate UK authority for this Agreement. Amendments were made to this Agreement on 5 July and 19 December 1983. In April 1984 the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and the US Department of Defense (DoD) negotiated a supplement to the Agreement covering an industrial security annex. This annex was reviewed and replaced last year when a new Security Implementing Arrangement for operations between the MoD and the DoD was signed on 27 January 2003. Information received by UK Government Departments under the 1961 Agreement is normally transmitted through Government channels and falls under the responsibility of the respective departmental security officer. Each UK Government Department has available to it guidance governing the handling of sensitive material generally, including that which is issued by international organisations or governed by international Agreements.

Geneva Convention

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those practices which are not specifically prohibited by the Geneva Convention but which he classifies as unacceptable and not to be followed by United Kingdom service personnel. [173002]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all government buildings in his Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [199313]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [197837]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Four.

Guantanamo Bay

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates representatives of his Department visited British nationals detained at Guantanamo Bay; whether he has received adverse reports on the welfare of detainees or allegations of ill-treatment; what representations he made on behalf of the prisoners; and what action he took to make his concerns known to relatives or legal representatives of those detained. [179815]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Gurkha Soldiers

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gurkha soldiers are serving in the British Army. [196724]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many payments under the ex gratia compensation scheme for former Far East prisoners of the Japanese have been made to former Gurkhas. [188576]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Harrier Aircraft

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will undertake an independent investigation into (a) delays and (b) difficulties encountered in repairing ZD402, ZD376, ZD470, ZD472, ZD408, ZD404 and ZD466 at RAF Cottesmore. [199352]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Hooding

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hoods (a) have been ordered by his Department and (b) are available to British troops for use after arrest and during detention of military combatants in Iraq. [178710]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Human Rights Abusers

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms are used to ensure that known human rights abusers do not receive military training or assistance from the UK Government. [197630]

Mr. Ingram: Where there have been concerns about a country's armed forces' human rights record, UK military defence assistance and training normally includes targeted security sector reform activity aimed at helping to ensure that the relevant armed forces operate in an accountable manner fully respecting human rights.

Hurricane Ivan

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department has offered to islands affected by Hurricane Ivan in the Caribbean; and what plans he has for providing further assistance. [190273]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

India

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) dates and (b) purpose of his recent visit to India were; who accompanied him; and how much the visit cost. [194111]

Mr. Hoon: I visited India and Pakistan from 4–8 October 2004. The primary purpose of the visit to India was to meet the new Indian Defence Minister, Shri Pranab Mukherjee. As set out in the Prime Ministers' Declaration of 20 September 2004, the United Kingdom has an important relationship with India; maintaining high-level contacts is a key strand of the defence element of the relationship.

I was accompanied to India by my wife, three Ministry of Defence officials (a Private Secretary, a policy official, and a telecommunications specialist), my special adviser and Metropolitan Police protection officers.

The total cost to the MOD of the visit was £78,503.

Infantry

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there has been (a) a cap and (b) a restriction on recruitment for the infantry in the last three years. [196217]

Mr. Caplin: There have been control measures placed on all levels of the Army, including the infantry, over the last three years to meet adjustments to funding allocations. However, recruiting has not ceased.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of infantry recruits from Scotland failed to complete their training courses in (a) each of the last five years during which Scottish infantry recruits were trained at Glencorse and (b) each year since their training has been carried out at Catterick. [198515]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Data is not held centrally on the historical percentages of infantry recruits from Scotland who failed to complete their training courses and will need to be collated from various sources. I will write to the hon. Member when the information has been collated and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Scottish infantry recruits committed suicide during their training (a) during the last 20 years during which their training was carried out at Glencorse and (b) during each year since their training has been carried out at Catterick. [198621]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) expected enrolment, (b) actual enrolment, (c) recruitment and (d) lost strength was for each infantry regiment in the latest year for which figures are available. [197914]

Mr. Caplin: The following table shows the numbers of soldiers enlisted, the enlistment target and phase 2 trained output for the three career employment groups (CEG) for the Infantry; the Guards, Line and Para and the corresponding outflow figure from the Field Army for financial year 2003–04, the last full year that figures are available.

Soldiers

Infantry	Enlistment target	Enlisted	Phase 2 trained output to the field army	Outflow from field army
Guards	530	700	530	470
Line	2,510	3,600	2,510	2,430
Para	190	450	190	300

Figures for officers for the corresponding period are as follows.

Officers

Infantry	RMAS output to the field army	Outflow from field army
Guards	35	20
Para	14	20

Information on targets and enlistments for soldiers to Infantry Regiments is not available in the format requested. The Army Training and Recruiting Agency is tasked to recruit to the three Infantry CEGs and not to Regiments, as capbadges for soldiers are only allocated by the Field Army on completion of training. For officers, the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst (RMAS) is given a target for commissioned officers to the Army generally and not to specific regiments. Officers are only allocated a capbadge in their third term.

Notes:

1. Figures include regular Army personnel only.
2. Outflow figures include absence without leave.
3. Figures do not include transfers from the Infantry into other arms/services.
4. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10 for presentational purposes.
5. For officers, the outflow figures exclude colonels and above.

Iran

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the written ministerial statement on the Shatt Al Arab incident, of 30 June 2004, Official Report, columns 12–13WS, whether ill-treatment, other than blindfolding, has been reported by British servicemen seized by the Iranian authorities. [182464]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the written ministerial statement on the Shatt Al Arab incident, of 30 June 2004, Official Report, columns 12–13WS, what assessment he has made of the likelihood of determining the position of the three boats at the time of seizure if the global positioning equipment on board is not returned. [182467]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Iraq

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British soldiers have been (a) killed and (b) injured in Iraq since the beginning of the conflict; and how many of these injuries were caused (i) by friendly fire, (ii) in accidents and (iii) in combat. [198095]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 15 November 2004]: 74 British service personnel have died while deployed in Iraq. This includes 49 who have been killed in action, of which seven were the result of blue-on-blue incidents. The remaining 25 died from other causes, including accidents, natural causes and incidents which are still under investigation.

Prior to August 2004, we did not hold centrally figures for the total number of injuries sustained by service personnel, or the causes of those injuries. Minor injuries or illnesses suffered by personnel who were treated in theatre and then returned to duty were not recorded other than on individual service records. Since August 2004, 65 injuries have been sustained as a result of hostile action. Statistics are not collected for injuries sustained for other reasons.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the maximum possible blast radius is of bombs available for use by United Kingdom troops in Iraq. [199088]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what roles Iraqi troops are undertaking in Iraq. [199330]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what papers he has submitted to Lord Butler's inquiry into intelligence on Iraq; and whether (a) officials and (b) Ministers have given oral evidence to the inquiry. [177068]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress that the NATO Training Implementation Mission in Iraq has made in the training of Iraqi security forces (a) inside and (b) outside Iraq. [189375]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1542W, whether the United Kingdom officer participated in the drafting of Combined Joint Task Force 7's counter-resistance and interrogation policy. [189797]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1543W, whether Colonel Terrington and Colonel Campbell-James were second in command to Major General Barbara Fast. [189798]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) Colonel Chris Terrington and (b) Colonel Campbell-James embedded within US military intelligence saw Interrogation and Counter-Resistance Policy documents produced by Combined Joint Task Force 7 (i) before and (ii) after it was issued. [189799]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when British service personnel first became aware of allegations of mistreatment of detainees at Abu Ghraib. [189801]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any British officer or official has been interviewed as part of the Taguba or Fay inquiries into detainee abuse. [189802]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1542W, on Iraq, what specific tasks the United Kingdom officer referred to undertook as part of Colonel Warren's team. [189872]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1542W, on Iraq, for how long the UK officer worked with Colonel Warren. [189875]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1542W, on Iraq, if he will give the name and rank of the UK officer who worked with Colonel Warren. [189877]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with (a) his United States counterpart and (b) the Chief of British Defence Forces in Iraq in respect of the need (i) to protect Iraqi nuclear sites from looters and (ii) to stop components from Iraqi nuclear sites being removed illegally from Iraq. [191665]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in each month since March 2003 British forces in Iraq (a) opened fire, (b) were fired upon and (c) were the subject of bomb attacks; how many casualties British forces (i) inflicted and (ii) sustained; and how many rounds of ammunition, including ammunition of a heavy calibre, British forces, including air units, expended in each month. [193164]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the right hon. and learned Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 64W, on Iraq, whether Colonel Terrington was aware that the investigation was of a disciplinary nature involving the conduct of US troops. [193433]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 64W, on Iraq, whether Colonel Terrington discussed the investigation with LTC Jordan. [193434]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 64W, on Iraq, whom Colonel Terrington informed about the investigation; and on what dates. [193435]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his reply of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 64W, on Iraq, when Colonel Terrington was made aware of the investigation; and by whom. [193436]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK service personnel have seen active service in Iraq since the beginning of hostilities; and how many have been issued with the aide memoire referred to in the answer to the hon. Member for Hull North (Mr. McNamara) on 4 October, Official Report, column 1879W. [194024]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 2004]: Around 87,000 service personnel were deployed in support of Operation Telic between 18 January 2003 and 31 August 2004. This figure includes sailors and airmen, many of whom were not directly involved in combat, around 54,500 soldiers were deployed during that time. During the first phase of Operation Telic from 18 January 2003 to 2 May 2003, which included the major combat operations, around 48,500 service personnel were deployed, of which around 29,000 were from the Army. A significant number of these would not have been directly involved in combat.

20,000 aide memoire cards were produced in the original print run between February and early March 2003. These were distributed as a priority to ground troops who were expected to be involved in combat, but were available to other units as well.

Since the end of the war-fighting phase of Operation Telic the responsibility for printing and distributing the cards has passed to individual units. Information on how many have been printed and distributed since the initial print run is not held centrally, and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Ministers were first provided with United States plans for the invasion of Iraq which contained references to P-day, A-day and G-day. [195303]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on UK troops liability to the Ottawa Treaty on landmines when acting (a) alone and (b) in association with US forces, with specific reference to Iraq. [198703]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his oral statement of 27 May, on Iraq, whether the Royal Military Police personnel assisting in training the Iraqi Police Service will assist in the training of the Iraqi Prison Service. [177503]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ask the US Administration to furnish him with information on the (a) numbers and (b) type of aerial attacks on Falluja between 1 and 15 November. [199135]

Mr. Hoon: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recent reports in The Lancet concerning the number of civilians killed since the invasion of Iraq. [195981]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary issued a written statement on 17 November 2004, Official Report, columns 92–95WS, concerning the report in The Lancet.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what definition of cause is used in assessing whether deaths and injuries of Iraqi civilians are caused by UK service personnel. [197345]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements will be put in place to protect refugees from the Fallujah area in the event of conflict there; how civilians will be distinguished from insurgents; what the role of the Black Watch will be in respect of (a) civilian refugees and (b) escaping insurgents; and if he will make a statement. [197378]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Coalition forces plan to keep a count of casualties arising from the possible conflict in the Falluja area of Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [197383]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many prisoners in British military custody have been transferred to US custody since September 2001, including those transferred under the auspices of the Coalition Provisional Authority in Iraq; and what assurances about their rights and treatment were sought from the US authorities. [184549]

Mr. Ingram [holding reply 19 July 2004]: 341 Prisoners of War taken by United Kingdom forces in Iraq were handed over to the US in April 2003. All but three were subsequently released. The cases of the remaining three are being considered by the Central Criminal Court of Iraq. We have also detained around 2,000 security internees since the end of the conflict. Between April 2003 and December 2003, they were held by the US. All but one of those individuals were either returned to UK custody or released.

The UK Government takes its responsibilities to safeguard individuals taken into custody by UK forces very seriously. In March 2003, the UK and US Governments agreed a Memorandum of Understanding which contains mutual assurances on the treatment of all transferred persons in Iraq and confirms that such persons are entitled to the full protection of the Geneva Conventions.

During the period from April 2003 to December 2003, when large numbers of UK-held persons were in US custody at Camp Bucca, their treatment was monitored continuously by a UK Prisoner Monitoring Team and Prisoner of War Registration Unit. The UK team were not aware of any incidents of deliberate detainee mistreatment at the Camp.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reports have been prepared on British-run military and civilian prisons in Iraq; how many have been sent to him; how many he has read and commented on; and if he will make a statement. [177240]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requests were made by his Department to the Department for International Development for staff to assist with the planning for post-conflict Iraq; and what the response was in each case. [150221]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development staff have worked closely together at all levels since before the Iraq conflict on the range of post-conflict planning issues.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what security clearance was given to civilians with expertise in infrastucture to enable them to attend military planning meetings, prior to the commencement of military operations in Iraq. [150224]

Mr. Ingram: All civilians involved in planning for Operation Telic possessed security clearances appropriate to their level of access to information.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the statement of 7 January, Official Report, column 138WH, on post-war Iraq, if he will list each unit involved in incidents of alleged or possible fatalities, broken down by (a) the number of cases recorded and (b) the state of investigation; how long the investigation has taken in each case; and what the outcome was of each completed investigation. [171624]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations the Government has made to the US Administration about treatment of Iraqi prisoners. [172997]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the right hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received about abuses of Iraqi prisoners at Umm Qasr prison; what part was played by UK armed forces, including interrogators; over what period these abuses took place; over what period UK forces were operating at the prison; when reports of abuses were (a) first and (b) subsequently communicated to UK personnel; how such reports of abuses at the prison were dealt with; how the political officer of the British Armed Forces dealt with this matter when it was reported to him on 1 April 2004; how his report on this was dealt with; when Ministers received (i) first and (ii) subsequent reports of abuse; and if he will make a statement. [173025]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases being made by Iraqi men or women against British military forces serving in Iraq are of alleged (a) deaths, (b) physical abuse and (c) unacceptable behaviour; how many of these complaints (i) have been investigated and (ii) are still under investigation; and if he will make a statement. [173076]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications his Department has had with other Arab nations regarding the allegations of abuse of Iraqi prisoners. [173228]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what strategy his Department will use to deal with the anti-Coalition sentiment stemming from the allegations of abuses of Iraqi prisoners. [173229]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his statement in reply to the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex, of 10 May 2004, Official Report, column 27, what prompted ministerial instructions that investigations should take place. [173259]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates the International Committee of the Red Cross approached the Coalition Provisional Authority in Iraq regarding the treatment of prisoners of war by Coalition forces in Iraq. [173901]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Joint Personnel Administration System

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many companies were invited to tender for the introduction of the Joint Personnel Administration system; on what basis the winner was chosen; how much weight was given to their previous record; what the original estimate was of the (a) cost and (b) expected in-service delivery date; what the current estimate is of each; and if he will make a statement. [197775]

Mr. Caplin: The Joint Personnel Administration (JPA) system is being introduced through an amendment to the service personnel administration contract won competitively by EDS Defence in 1997 that expires in 2009, when it will be re-competed.

The decision to introduce JPA via an amendment to the existing contract with EDS was made in February 2004 and took account of EDS's satisfactory performance to date on service personnel administration. The amended contract was subject to EDS completing £15 million of risk reduction work and to a satisfactory commercial agreement.

The estimated cost for EDS for build and transition to JPA was £122 million (from contract amendment onwards) with a full in-service date of April 2007.

The current estimate is that EDS costs for JPA build and transition will be around £112 million, with a full in-service date of November 2006. This cost to bring in JPA is in addition to the ongoing cost of providing personnel administration services.

Lance Corporal Ian Blaymire

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the transcript will be available of the court martial proceedings against Lance Corporal Ian Blaymire; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [197547]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Management Groups

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the responsibilities of the (a) Defence Estates, (b) Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Commitments), (c) Director Special Forces, (d) Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency, (e) Veterans Agency, (f) Surgeon General, (g) Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Personnel), (h) Defence Secondary Care Agency and (i) Defence Dental Agency management groups. [181746]

Mr. Caplin: Most defence activity takes place outside the Ministry of Defence Head Office and is managed through 12 Top Level Budget (TLB) holders and five Trading Funds. The Permanent Secretary grants each TLB-holder extensive delegated powers over his/her resources of cash, personnel and infrastructure. Each TLB holder has a 'contract' with the MOD head office, known as a Service Delivery Agreement, which specifies the outputs required of that TLB, the resources they are given to deliver these outputs, and the underpinning performance management regime. The responsibilities of the management groupings you requested are listed as follows:

(a) Defence Estates has a mandate to deliver estate solutions to meet the armed forces' requirements for an estate of the right size and quality. The Defence Housing Executive merged with Defence Estates on 1 April 2004, thus including defence housing in Defence Estate's responsibilities.

(b) The Main duties of Deputy Chief Defence Staff (Commitments) are to provide Strategic Military policy and advice to Ministers/Chiefs of Staff, formulate and issue Operational Guidance, including resourcing of available capability, Own and Development of the Joint Enablers and use and develop the defence Crisis Management Organisation.

(c) The command and management of UK Special Forces.

(d) The Defence Geographic and Imagery Intelligence Agency is responsible for providing the imagery intelligence and geographic support to Defence policy, planning, operations and training.

(e) The Veterans Agency is responsible for providing financial and welfare support to war disabled pensioners and to war widow(er)s.

(f) The Surgeon General is responsible for setting the overall direction and policy on all clinical matters relating to the practice of medicine within the military. He is the most senior serving professional medical officer and is accountable for the overall performance of all Defence Medical Services personnel. The Surgeon General is authorised to direct the single services on the development of medical policies and common standards within their areas of responsibility, and for auditing compliance across the Defence Medical Services.

(g) The Deputy Chief of Defence Staff (Personnel) is the principal departmental military adviser on Service Personnel policy, including training and education, for all Regular Service personnel.

(h) This organisation ceased operating on 31 March 2003 following the formation of the Defence Medical Education and Training Agency.

(i) The Defence Dental Agency is responsible for the delivery of quality dental care for the armed forces and entitled civilians on operations and during peacetime.

Further information on individual defence agencies is available in the Library of the House of Commons.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the responsibilities of the (a) Defence Fuels Group, (b) Deputy Chief of Defence Logistics, (c) Defence Communications Services Agency, (d) Defence Logistics Support HQ, (e) Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency, (f) DG Equipment Support (Land), (g) DG Equipment Support Air, (h) Warship Support Agency, (i) Defence Storage and Distribution Agency, (j) Director Land Service Ammunition, (k) Defence Transport and Movement Agency and (l) British Forces Post Office management groups. [181781]

Mr. Caplin: Most defence activity takes place outside the Ministry of Defence Head Office and is managed through 12 Top Level Budget (TLB) holders and five Trading Funds. The Permanent Secretary grants each TLB-holder extensive delegated powers over his/her resources of cash, personnel and infrastructure. Each TLB holder has a "contract" with the MOD head office, known as a Service Delivery Agreement, which specifies the outputs required of that TLB, the resources they are given to deliver these outputs, and the underpinning performance management regime. The responsibilities of the management groupings you requested are listed below:

(a) The Defence Fuels Group is responsible for the supply and management of fuels, lubrieants and gases in support of all three Services.

(b) The Deputy Chief of Defence Logistics is a person and not an organisation. He assists the Chief of Defence Logistics in managing the Defence Logistics Organisation, in particular chairing its Executive Board.

(c) The Defence Communication Services Agency maximises Defence operational effectiveness by providing information and assuring the delivery of information solutions within the deployed and fixed environments.

(d) This organisation is not recognised.

(e) The Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency is now the Defence Clothing Integrated Project Team. It is the organisation responsible for the development, procurement, and supply management of clothing for the UK armed forces and civilians.

(f) DG Equipment Support (Land) and (g) DG Equipment Support (Air) have not existed as management groups since 1 April 2004.

(h) The Warship Support Agency (WSA) exists to provide logistic support to the Royal Navy Fleet and other maritime elements of the UK armed forces that have been passed into service from the Defence Procurement Agency.

(i) The Defence Storage and Distribution Agency is responsible for providing material distribution, processing and storage service to sustain the fighting power of UK armed forces worldwide.

(j) The Director Land Service Ammunition ceased as an organisation in April 2000 when it merged with Project Management Ammunition from the Defence Procurement Agency to form the Defence General Munitions (DGM)

Integrated Project Team (IPT). The DGM IPT is responsible for the acquisition, supply, management and disposal of all in-service munitions to the three Services.

(k) The Defence Transport and Movement Agency provides transport and movements services worldwide in peace, crisis and war in order to support UK military capability.

(l) The British Forces Post Office receives, collects, sorts, secures and delivers classified items to MOD establishments, other Government Departments, List X companies, HM ships and theatres worldwide.

Further information on individual defence agencies is available in the Library of the House of Commons.

Manning Controls

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the conformity of the practice of administrative discharge through manning controls with (a) European Union legislation, (b) the European Convention on Human Rights and (c) the Employment Rights Act 1966. [197219]

Mr. Caplin: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) Project to complete its concept phase. [193128]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Military Equipment

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much used military (a) clothing, (b) footwear and (c) other personal equipment was reissued to serving personnel in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [191968]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Air Travel

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost of air travel between Northern Ireland and Great Britain was for (a) ministers and (b) officials in his Department in the latest year for which figures are available. [182131]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Expenses

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [191401]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, to the hon. Member for Arundel and South Downs (Mr. Flight) on 20 November 2003, Official Report, column 1272. I will write to the hon. Member regarding the costs for financial year 2003–04 and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ministerial Visits

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list visits made by each Minister in the Department between December 2003 and April 2004, broken down by (a) date, (b) constituency visited and (c) cost. [171562]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the travel costs incurred (a) by his Department and (b) by each Minister within his Department, for each of the last 10 years; [175644]

(2) how much his Department spent on ministerial travel by (a) car, (b) train, (c) aeroplane and (d) helicopter, in each of the last 10 years; [175667]

(3) how many journeys were made by helicopter by each Minister in his Department in each of the last 10 years; and what the journey length was in each case. [175744]

Mr. Caplin: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne) today.

Ministers' Private Offices

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in his Department have been in each year since 1997. [191378]

Mr. Ingram: The total cost to the Private Office Budget of the Ministry of Defence Ministers' private offices in financial year 2003–04 was £2,965,159.10. Data prior to this is no longer centrally held.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191442]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

MOD Land

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the land over which his Department acquired rights in Scotland between (a) 1980 and 1990, (b) 1990 and 2000 and (c) 2000 to the present, including areas of foreshore; and if he will make a statement. [173438]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mount Bay and Cardigan Bay Vessels

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) contracted price and (b) in-service date was originally agreed with BAe Systems for the building of the Mount Bay and Cardigan Bay vessels at Govan; what the latest forecasts are; what the reasons for the changes are; and if he will make a statement. [198804]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mutual Defence Agreement

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to renew the Mutual Defence Agreement with the USA. [192718]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Naval Procurement

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether his Department's Military Afloat Research and Sustainability programme is covered by his commitment that warships for the Royal Navy will be built in the UK; [194450]

(2) whether the (a) renewal and (b) replacement of fleet auxiliaries is covered by his commitment that warships for the Royal Navy will be built in the UK. [194451]

Mr. Ingram: It is Government policy that the fabrication and assembly of new Royal Navy warship hulls should be undertaken in the United Kingdom. Though current Royal Fleet auxiliary ships are not warships they are classed as 'warlike' and options for replacing these ships are being examined. The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) project is at an early stage and no decision has been taken as to what will be procured; however, we expect that MARS ships will probably be 'warlike'.

New Deal

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [194852]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Operation Telic

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of 7.62 ammunition were issued to (a) Challenger II, (b) Warrior and (c) CVRT crews for their vehicle armament during Operation Telic. [153048]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Operational Tours

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the interval between operational tours since 1999–2000 has been for the (a) Royal Armoured Corps, (b) Royal Artillery, (c) Royal Engineers, (d) Royal Signals and (e) Infantry. [195050]

Mr. Ingram: The details of operational tour intervals for the (a) Royal Armoured Corps (RAC), (b) Royal Artillery (RA), (c) Royal Engineers (RE), (d) Royal Signals (R Signals) and (e) Infantry since 1999 are not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The equivalent details for the RAC, RA and Infantry for the period July 2001 to October 2004 are, however, provided in the tables which have been placed in the Library. It has not been possible to provide the actual tour intervals for RE and R Signals primarily due to the nature of their deployments, which tend to be at sub unit level or below, rather than unit level.

Deployments have been defined as unaccompanied unit level operational tours.

Paper Recycling

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the Department's main suppliers of (a) copier paper, (b) stationery, (c) envelopes and (d) paper for reports; and what the (i) name of each paper used and the (ii) recycled and post consumer recycled content is in each case. [171821]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Parachute Accidents

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen have been killed in parachute accidents in each of the last two years; and when the last such incident was. [198090]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 15 November 2004]: Between 1 January 2002 and 11 November 2004, six Service personnel have died in parachuting incidents (two in 2002, two in 2003 and two in 2004). Three of these deaths occurred while on duty and three occurred while off duty. The date of the last parachuting death was 12 June 2004.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Portsmouth South, ref 169408, of 28 April, about compensation paid to Iraqi civilians. [185179]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the question from the hon. Member for Portsmouth South, ref 166998, tabled on 16 April, about the treatment of prisoners in Iraq. [185180]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer question 174196, tabled on 17 May, on the anthrax and pertussis vaccine. [189386]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Pensions

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on pensions for veterans of the Royal Army Ordnance Corps (RAOC); and if he will increase pensions for RAOC veterans who retired on or after 1 April 1969. [195547]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

PFI/PPP Contracts (Financial Advice)

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department had with (a) Barclays, (b) the Royal Bank of Scotland, (c) UBS Warburg and (d) the Bank of Scotland for advice on private finance initiative and public private partnership contracts in each financial year since 2001–02; and what fees were paid in each case. [186692]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where (a) battalion headquarters, (b) A, B and C Companies, (c) Support Company and (d) Headquarters Company of Second Battalion of The Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment will be located on (i) 18 November and (ii) 30 November. [199046]

Mr. Ingram: On current plans The Second Battalion of The Princess of Wales' Royal Regiment (2PWRR) will be located in their barracks in Tern Hill on 18 and 30 November, but will be held at very high readiness for operations in Iraq.

Procurement

Mr. Paul Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his policy to ensure that hospitality within his Department is sourced from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules. [197065]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Productivity

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is for (a) increasing the productivity and (b) cutting the costs of (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies and non-departmental public bodies. [172187]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Project ISOLUS

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's sites that were investigated as part of Project Isolus but were rejected as unsuitable; and what the reasons for their rejection were in each case. [198498]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Radiation Regulations

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the report prepared by the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory at Porton Down entitled Skating on Thin Ice, concerning compliance with radiation regulations by Defence establishments. [196420]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

RAF Attacks (Civilian Casualties)

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether RAF planes have been involved in air to ground attacks that have resulted in civilian (a) deaths and (b) casualties since 4 May 2003. [197623]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 November 2004]: No RAF aircraft have launched any air to ground attacks that have resulted in the death or injury of civilians since May 2003.

RAFT Project

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much had been spent on the RAFT project at the date of its cancellation; whether an environmental assessment was carried out prior to commencement of the project; and if he will make a statement; [197382]

(2) what environmental assessments (a) were carried out before and (b) have been carried out during the lifetime of the RAFT project. [197704]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Recycling Targets

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to have statutory recycling targets beyond 2005–06. [193129]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Regimental Strengths

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many regiments are (a) at full strength and (b) over strength. [189709]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Request for Resources 1

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has an agreement with the Treasury to reimburse his Department for additional wear and tear on equipment bought under Request for Resources 1, owing to exceptional operational use. [196467]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Rota/Gibraltar Naval Bases

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy vessels used (a) the Rota naval base and (b) the Gibraltar naval base in the past six months. [187499]

Mr. Ingram: During the period 1 January until 31 August 2004 Royal Navy vessels have undertaken four visits to Rota Naval Base and 13 visits to Gibraltar Naval Base. The visits to Rota were all undertaken by units allocated to NATO Standing Naval Deployments and programmed directly by NATO. Inclusion of Royal Fleet Auxiliary vessels for completeness brings the total of visits to Gibraltar to 20 while the figure for Rota remains unchanged.

Royal Navy

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serving personnel there are in the Royal Navy; and what the corresponding figures were in each of the last three years. [197126]

Mr. Ingram: The strength of the Naval Service is published monthly in the Defence Analytical Services Agency publication TSP3, "UK Armed Forces Trained Strengths and Requirements", the last published edition of which was as at 1 September 2004.

As of 1 September 2004, the total strength of the Naval Service was 41,280. The corresponding figures for the previous years were:

	Strength of naval service
1 September 2003	42,220
1 September 2002	42,060
1 September 2001	42,210

These figures are for full time UK regular forces (including both trained and untrained personnel) and full time reserve service personnel (FTRS) and exclude naval activated reservists. Naval Service includes Royal Marines.

Satanism

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the practice of Satanism in the armed services with the oath of allegiance sworn by service men and women. [197721]

Mr. Caplin: The armed forces make no provision for the practice of Satanism. The beliefs of Service personnel are regarded as a private matter.

Science and Technology Laboratory

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms are employed by the Defence Scientific and Technology Laboratory for consulting the Defence Scientific Advisory Council and its subsidiary boards. [198929]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (Dstl) maintains a very close working relationship with the Defence Scientific Advisory Council (DSAC).

The Chief Executive of Dstl is a member of DSAC and each subsidiary board has a Dstl member of staff; the Dstl Technical Director is a member of the DSAC Technology sub board. Additionally, nominated members of Dstl staff are seconded to DSAC working groups which investigate and advise on various areas of the Ministry of Defence technical programme. The reports of the DSAC working groups are circulated to Dstl.

Members of DSAC attend Dstl technical programme reviews and advise on both the technical programme selection and progress.

Scientific Activities

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department's chief scientific adviser has ensured that the Department's scientific activities are well directed, as recommended in paragraph 7.11 of the Government's science strategy, Investing in Innovation, published in July 2002. [162485]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Second World War Anniversary

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the application forms for local authorities to apply for funding for next year's Second World War celebrations will be available. [189101]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197774]

Mr. Ingram: The recommendations set out in all relevant Select Committee reports are given very careful consideration by Defence Ministers and Ministry of Defence officials and we seek to implement them when we can. However the information requested by my hon. Friend is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Service Personnel (Royal Drivers)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many servicemen and women act as drivers to members of the Royal Family; to which members; and from what source they receive remuneration for their service as drivers. [188565]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my right hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Service Strengths

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) actual manning and (b) establishment levels of the (i) Royal Navy (excluding the Royal Marines), (ii) Army, (iii) Royal Air force and (iv) Royal Marines were on 31 March. [194955]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Ship Sales (Chile)

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussion there has been with the Chilean Government about the sale of HMS Norfolk, Marlborough and Grafton. [198559]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence's Disposal Sales Agency has had, and continues to have, exploratory discussions with the Government of Chile relating to the possible sale of three surplus Type 23 frigates, HMS Norfolk, HMS Marlborough and HMS Grafton.

Smallpox Vaccine

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many full, undiluted, tonnes of the smallpox vaccine his Department holds. [196305]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence holds a strategic stock of vaccine, jointly procured with the Department of Health. We hold sufficient doses to meet our operational requirements.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many unpaid special advisers the Department has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194058]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1380W, by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly).

Special Investigations Branch

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) UK and (b) overseas postings are of officers and soldiers of the Special Investigations Branch of the Royal Military Police. [176017]

Mr. Ingram: Officers and soldiers of the Royal Military Police Special Investigation Branch can routinely be posted to the following locations in the UK and overseas: Edinburgh, Catterick, York, Preston, Donnington, Chilwell, Chichester, Preston, Brecon, Colchester, Bulford, Aldershot, Hounslow, Stonehouse, Lisburn, Portadown, Ballykelly, Rheindahlen, Bielefeld, Gütersloh, Hohne, Osnabrück, Sennelager, Cyprus, Canada. In addition, RMP SIB detachments exist in operational theatre such as the Falkland Islands, Gibraltar, Bosnia, Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will break down the (a) UK and (b) overseas investigations undertaken in each of the past five years by the Special Investigations Branch by the nature of the incident under investigation. [176018]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the attendance of the Special Investigations Branch of the Royal Military Police at coroners' inquests into deaths it has investigated. [176019]

Mr. Ingram: A member of the Royal Military Police Special Investigation Branch will appear as a witness at an inquest held by Her Majesty's Coroner if called upon to do so by the Coroner.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people employed in his Department have claimed statutory sick pay for (a) less than one week, (b) one to three weeks, (c) four to six weeks, (d) seven to 12 weeks, (e) 13 to 20 weeks and (f) 21 to 28 weeks in each year since 1997. [148636]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Steven Jordan

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether UK (a) service personnel and (b) officials have sought to question Mr. Steven Jordan during the last three months. [193385]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Submarines

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost was of refitting each of the four submarines sold to Canada to make them fit to put to sea. [193236]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fires there have been on (a) Upholder Class submarines and (b) other types of submarines in service with the Royal Navy since 1980 which did not arise in the course of combat. [194395]

Mr. Ingram: Centralised records of fires on RN submarines are only available from 1988. These records indicate that there were four fires on Upholder Class submarines during the in-service life of that class and 184 on other classes of submarines. The overwhelming majority of these were minor in nature. The figures include fires that arose during refit, repair and maintenance work in port as well as those that occurred on operational submarines at sea. No fires have occurred on the Upholder submarines since they were taken out of service or during reactivation prior to handover. The records do not specifically indicate which fires, if any, arose in the course of combat.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received concerning the standard of maintenance of the Upholder/Victoria Class submarines. [197908]

Mr. Ingram: Following the agreement with the Canadian Government on the lease to buy four Upholder Class submarines, regular discussions have taken place between Ministry of Defence officials and their Canadian counterparts on a range of issues connected with the reactivation programme, which includes maintenance. We remain in close touch with the Canadian authorities, and are assisting them with their inquiry into the fire on board HMCS Chicoutimi on 5 October.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the original (a) estimated cost and (b) in-service delivery date was of the first three Astute class submarines; what the latest estimate is; and if he will make a statement. [197966]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Supplementary Manning Assistance

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions (a) battalions and (b) regiments have provided supplementary manning assistance to other battalions or regiments in the last six years; and in each case (i) when the assistance was provided, (ii) which battalions or regiments were involved, (iii) how many personnel were provided and (iv) for what period of time the assistance was provided. [197085]

Mr. Caplin: Information is not held centrally in the detail requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Surface Ships/Submarines (Refits)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the annex to Cm 6269, how many surface ships and submarines are likely to be undergoing refit at anytime during a (a) medium/small/small, (b) medium/medium/small and (c) large scale concurrency; whether those numbers are reflected in the published tables; and if he will make a statement. [197707]

Mr. Ingram: The Annex to the Defence paper 'Delivering Security in a Changing World: Future Capabilities' (CM6269) fully reflects the requirements for ships and submarines at various levels of concurrency. The units in refit and those being prepared to replace ships and submarines deployed on enduring tasks are shown in the "factors" column of the force structure tables. Thus, at some stage in a medium/medium/small concurrency, (which is the most demanding concurrency requirement for most surface ships and submarines) up to fifteen ships and four submarines may go through a period of low operational readiness, which may include refit.

Swan Hunter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors underlay the decision not to assist Swan Hunter with the overrun in budget to build the Largs Bay and Lyme Bay vessels at its Wallsend yard; and if he will make a statement. [197959]

Mr. Ingram: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191411]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Tornado

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what priorities the Royal Air Force has for maintaining and improving the Tornado's strike and self-protection capabilities over the next decade; and whether there is a budget and delivery schedule for these priorities. [183407]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Troop Deployment (Northern Ireland)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 10 February 2004, Official Report, column 959W, on the armed forces, when he will place a copy of his letter in the Library. [184448]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Two-can Rule

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers have been subject to disciplinary action for breaching the two-can rule in each of the past two years for which figures are available; and what sanctions have been taken (a) against those in breach of the rule and (b) officers and others responsible for its non-enforcement. [176027]

Mr. Hoon: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

UK Military Engagements

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list UK military engagements overseas, in addition to Iraq; and how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel are involved in each. [196583]

Mr. Ingram: The list of UK military personnel deployed on operations overseas and the numbers of (a) Army, (b) Navy and (c) RAF personnel who are involved in each, is as follows:

Operations	Army	Royal Navy	RAF	Total
Balkans (Op Oculus)	1,035	75	90	1,200
Afghanistan (Op Herrick)	585	20	255	880
Gulf Region (Op Telic)	6,855	1,265	1,365	9,485
UN Operations
Cyprus (Op Tosca)	415	0	0	415
Georgia (Op Baronet)	5	5	5	10
Sierra Leone (Op Turner)	15	5	5	20
Sudan (Op Dalmin)	0	0	5	5
Dem Rep of Congo (Op Percival)	5	5	0	5
Liberia (Op Sequesta)	5	5	5	5

Notes:

1. The table does not include personnel serving in loan/diplomatic posts, in permanent garrisons, personnel stationed on British overseas territories or on training detachments.
2. The figures are as reported in early November 2004 and are rounded up to the nearest 5.
3. Totals may not therefore match the sum of the three individual parts.

Warships

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when replacements for (a) HMS Leeds Castle and (b) HMS Dumbarton Castle will be ordered. [194472]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Young Service Personnel

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 16 and 17-year-olds are serving in (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Army and (c) the Royal Air Force. [196271]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many under 18-year-olds have died while (a) in service and (b) in training in each of the armed forces for the last 10 years; and if he will list the causes of death in each case. [196272]

Mr. Caplin: I will write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Airports

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with airport operators since the publication of the Future of Air Transport White Paper regarding compensation packages for properties close to expanding airports. [198920]

Charlotte Atkins: Officials in the Department held discussions with several airport operators where new runway development options were under consideration during the period leading up to publication of the White Paper, including BAA plc. Those discussions contributed to the views and conclusions set out in paragraphs 12.13 to 12.17 of the White Paper.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking in conjunction with the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs regarding the mitigation of damage to local environments around expanding UK airports. [198921]

Charlotte Atkins: The Future of Air Transport White Paper set out in broad terms the measures which the Government expect to see taken by airports and others, and itself intends to take, in order to mitigate environmental disbenefits arising from airport development.

Work is now in hand on the programme of action summarised on p146 of the White Paper, including the preparation by airports of master plans and noise mitigation schemes, and a structured programme of work specifically on the possible future development of Heathrow Airport in keeping with noise and local emissions constraints. Detailed airport proposals for mitigation measures will fall to be considered through the planning system in due course.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the (a) noise levels and (b) other environmental effects around Edinburgh Airport that would be consequent on the expansion of the airport as set out in the Future of Air Transport White Paper. [198922]

Charlotte Atkins: This information is set out in the Scottish Consultation Document and supporting technical reports. These estimate the number of people who would be affected by different levels of noise under a range of runway options at Edinburgh Airport including maximum use of the existing main runway, greater use of the existing crosswind runway and development of a new close parallel runway. Our analysis suggests that by 2030, the development of a new close parallel runway, assuming a -14 dBA technology improvement, would reduce the number of people affected within the 63 dBA 16 hour Leq contour by 300 with an increase of 200 people affected at the 69 dBA 16 hour Leq contour.

Full dispersion modelling was undertaken for a number of runway options at Edinburgh Airport which showed that, in terms of exceedance standards and properties affected, no local air quality problems were likely to arise.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the suitability of the compensation packages provided by airport operators for properties close to expanding UK airports; and if he will make a statement. [198923]

Charlotte Atkins: Representations have been received from three hon. Members. Others have been received from Uttlesford district council and from the Harmondsworth and Sipson Residents' Association. I answered a question from the hon. Member for Solihull (Mr. Taylor) on 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1114W.

Blue Badge Scheme

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what advice was taken from the Department of Health on the status of myalgic encephalitis sufferers when formulating the eligibility criteria for the Blue Badge scheme; [199273]

(2) how many of those people in England eligible for a Blue Badge are suffering from myalgic encephalitis. [199291]

Charlotte Atkins: The Blue Badge Scheme is designed primarily to assist disabled people who are unable or have severe difficulty in walking, regardless of the nature of their disability. Local authorities, who are responsible for administering the Scheme, will decide on an individual's eligibility on the basis of these criteria. People with myalgic encephalitis will be eligible for a badge if their walking ability is seriously affected.

The Department does not hold data on the disabilities of individual blue badge holders.

We have had no separate discussions with the Department of Health (DH) on myalgic encephalitis. We have, however, worked very closely with that Department in taking forward the recommendations of the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee following the comprehensive review of the Blue Badge Scheme which we undertook.

Buses

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects of quality contracts for buses on joint working between passenger transport executives and bus operating companies in providing bus services that meet the needs of the community they serve. [199218]

Charlotte Atkins: To date no authority has submitted a scheme for approval and therefore no assessment has been made of the effects of a quality contract on joint working between Passenger Transport Executives and bus operating companies.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is encouraging local authorities to run Quality Contracts for buses pilot schemes; and if he will (a) commission and (b) publish studies of such pilot schemes. [199219]

Charlotte Atkins: The Transport Act 2000 gave local authorities the power to introduce Quality Contracts. To date no authority has submitted a scheme to the Secretary of State for approval. Approval will not be on a pilot basis, although any scheme that is approved will be monitored closely by the Department. We are currently taking a number of steps to make the process less formidable. The Department will shortly be reducing the minimum period between making the approved scheme and implementing it from twenty-one to six months. Following consultation during the summer, the Department will also be publishing guidance to local authorities on how to apply for approval of a quality contract scheme.

As announced in "The Future of Transport", the Department is particularly encouraging local authorities to consider a Quality Contract, where it is linked to a wider strategy to tackle congestion and where PTEs are deciding a new balance between rail and bus.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197294]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport was created in May 2002 and costs for years prior to this can be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The majority of the Department's media spend is on the THINK! road safety campaign with adverts produced covering a range of subjects such as drink drive, speed, seatbelts, mobile phones, plus specific creative work targeted at children and teenagers.

2002–03

(a) the cost of producing creative work was £1,142,798,

(b) the media spend was £10,446,000.

2003–04

(a) the cost of producing creative work was £1,082,278,

(b) the media spend was £10,427,000.

The cost of administration for the Department's advertising activity can be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department between (a) May 2001 and April 2002, (b) May 2002 and April 2003, (c) May 2003 and April 2004 and (d) May 2004 and the latest date for which figures are available, indicating in each case (i) the values of the contracts and (ii) the companies with which the contracts were placed. [196902]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department was formed on 29 May 2002. Three tables showing the information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Separate figures for 2001–02 are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies for which he is responsible in each of the past three years. [196904]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department was formed on 29 May 2002. Separate figures for 2001–02 are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However these figures are available for the Department's executive agencies. Information relating to all organisations across the Department and its agencies could be provided only at disproportionate cost due to the level of detail it would entail. However, a table has been placed in the Libraries of the House showing this information in respect of the top 30 suppliers.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196611]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has not received any cash sponsorship. However, many third parties have worked with THINK!, the Department's road safety campaign and carried road safety messages in their own activities. The Department is grateful for this "in kind" support, but has not put a cash value on it. Examples are in the Department's annual reports for 2003 and 2004 which are in the House Libraries.

Information for the financial years 1997–2002, when transport policy formed part of the remit of the former Departments of Environment, Transport and the Regions and Transport, Local Government and the Regions (respectively) is not available centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information Act

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [199073]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has made an assessment of the likely costs of compliance with the Freedom of Information Act and estimates that the new access rights will result in additional requests for information above and beyond the volumes presently handled but this research suggests that it is not possible to quantify the additional volumes reliably.

The Department has implemented a number of measures which we believe will help to keep down the costs of meeting the requirements of the Act. These include general awareness training for all staff, specialist training sessions for case handlers and new, standardised procedures and systems are being introduced. To test the efficiency and effectiveness of our preparations, managers have been assessing their readiness using a self-diagnostic model and have also used a series of dummy requests. We have followed the Department of Constitutional Affairs model action plan and are making full use of their central guidance to produce material for use by staff in the central department and the Agencies. We have also been looking to publish information that we would expect to be requested and will be doing so routinely in future.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether all Government buildings in his Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [199315]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department is taking all reasonable steps to improve accessibility in its London headquarters estate in accordance with Disability Discrimination Act legislation. For example, last year at Great Minster House a project to refurbish the main reception at GMH incorporated some important accessibility improvements, while a start was made on a programme of works to improve accessibility within the building. This included application of non-reflective film to lift doors; improvements to tea points and accessible toilets and alterations to the heavy corridor doors to reduce their weight. The programme of works has continued this year with a trial exercise to hold the corridor doors open on magnetic retainers during the day in certain areas, prior to decisions being taken on rolling out the works to the rest of GMH. In addition work is about to commence on improving the accessibility of all the passenger and goods lifts serving the building. Particular attention was also paid last year to DDA compliance in the fitting out of the Department's new accommodation at Southside.

High Speed Trains (Kent)

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if his Department will invite open tenders for the Kent route high speed trains on the revised business plan and delivery time scale; [195528]

(2) when his Department first published as part of the initial tendering process details of the original (a) business case and (b) delivery time scale for the Kent route high speed trains; and how many (i) expressions of interest and (ii) actual bids they received; [195529]

(3) when his Department decided to alter the business case and delivery time scale for the Kent route high speed trains; whether they subsequently approached companies that had expressed an interest in the initial bid; and how many (a) expressions of interests and (b) bids they finally received for this revised proposal. [195596]

Mr. McNulty: A business case was not published as part of the tendering process. The OJEU notice placed by the Strategic Rail Authority in January 2003 was for the procurement and financing of rolling stock for delivery from January 2007 onwards. HSBC were appointed as financiers as a result of this competition.

The management of the rolling stock competition was a matter for HSBC, who offered the SRA vehicles from a choice of three manufacturers. It was open to bidders to put in variant bids.

Restarting a competition for the rolling stock or financier would put the planned launch date of the high-speed Kent services in 2009 under severe risk.

Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195617]

Charlotte Atkins: I have placed in the Libraries of the House a list of the provisions of Acts passed in the last 30 years for which the Department for Transport has lead responsibility which remain to be brought into force.

M1

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents on the M1 have resulted in the A5 through (a) Dunstable and (b) Hockliffe being used as a relief road in the last three years, broken down by type of incident. [197454]

Mr. Jamieson: The question cannot be answered in absolute terms from records held by the Highways Agency.

The Highways Agency has agreed diversion routes in place for when the M1 in Bedfordshire is closed due to a major incident. However, police officers may, for operational reasons at the time of the incident, choose to depart from the designated diversion route. Drivers with local knowledge of the area may opt to use another route of their own choosing rather than follow the designated diversion route.

In the period 1 January 2002 to 10 November 2004, the Highways Agency has records of 17 major incidents occurring on the M1 motorway in Bedfordshire between Junctions 9 (Markyate) and 13 (Bedford). In all of these recorded cases, a diversion route was put in place and traffic is likely to have been diverted along the A5 trunk road at Dunstable on 10 occasions. This is because the A5 High Street South at Dunstable is used as a designated diversion route. By contrast, however, it is less likely that the A5 through Hockliffe was used as a diversion route since the A5 at this location is not part of any designated diversion route.

M25

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the closure of the M25 from Saturday 13 to Monday 15 November. [199096]

Mr. Jamieson: There were severe delays and inconvenience caused to motorists as a result of the fatal accident that occurred on the M25 involving an overturned petrol tanker between Junctions 5 and 6 on the evening of Friday 12 November. As the result of spillage of highly combustible fuel, the emergency services imposed a closure for safety reasons until the necessary extensive remedial works were completed.

The Highways Agency, Environment Agency and the emergency services are urgently carrying out a thorough investigation into this incident and its management. As soon as the findings are known, the relevant information will be forwarded to the hon. Member and copies placed in the Libraries of the House.

M4

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) purpose and (b) cost are of the road works on the side of both carriageways of the M4, east of junction 18. [199167]

Mr. Jamieson: The works on the M4 east of junction 18 are part of a series of works being carried out to provide better information to the travelling public. The works will allow for better use of the motorway network and will enable the provision of live traffic information to the Regional Control Centres that are being introduced.

This phase comprises the installation of fibre optic cables along the verges of the carriageway to allow the erection of variable message signs, CCTV cameras and vehicle queuing detection equipment. The variable message signs will be used to keep drivers informed about what is happening ahead of them on the motorway network, for example, to give warnings and advice about accidents, congestion and road works.

The current phase of the works is costing £4.5 million.

New Rail Services

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new passenger rail services were introduced in each of the last seven years. [198695]

Mr. McNulty: A table produced by ATOC showing the number of timetabled services run on a normal weekday since May 1995 has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Privatised Rail Companies

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger complaints have been made to each of the privatised rail companies in the last year; and how many were made in the previous year. [199197]

Mr. McNulty: Complaints rate per 100,000 passenger journeys data is published in the Strategic Rail Authority's "National Rail Trends Yearbook 2003–2004", a copy of which is held in the Library of the House.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what refunds each of the privatised rail companies have given for poor punctuality and service in each of the last three years. [199198]

Mr. McNulty: Train operating companies (TOCs) provide compensation to passengers in accordance with their Passenger's Charters. TOCs are not required to provide information to Government on the amounts of compensation given.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what penalties are imposed on the privatised rail companies for poor service; and on what criteria these penalties are based. [199199]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority operates a number of regimes which make incentive payments or impose penalties to train operating companies (TOCs). These regimes are for punctuality/reliability of services, provision of rolling stock formations as timetabled to meet demand and changes to planned timetables.

For punctuality/reliability the punctuality incentive payment (PIP) regime measures performance of peak London commuter services and regional and rural services against an historical benchmark of annual average performance. For the provision of rolling stock, the short formation incentive payment (SFEP) applies to operators providing peak services into London and some other cities where penalties are applied if the operator does not deliver the train plan for capacity. For changes to the planned timetable, the timetable change incentive payment (TCDP) provides an incentive for provision of timely notification of timetable changes to minimise the disruption to passengers. Net payments/penalties to TOCs are shown in the SRA's National Rail Trends Yearbook, which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Passenger transport executives have separate incentive regimes.

Railway Stations

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's policy is on the improvement of railway stations. [191461]

Mr. McNulty: Major station improvements are currently specified by the Strategic Rail Authority and delivered by Network Rail. Over the past five years significant station developments have been delivered at many stations including Paddington, Manchester Piccadilly and Leeds; works to complete the CTRL terminus at St. Pancras station are due for completion by early 2007 and proposals are being developed for improvements to be made to a number of further stations including Edinburgh Waverley, Birmingham New Street and London Bridge.

The SRA's Modern Facilities at Stations Programme will provide improvements at 68 other stations by March 2005. Numerous other small station improvements are continually being delivered by Network Rail and train companies where they consider it appropriate, to do so.

Rescue Services (Morecambe Bay)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many times the lifeboat and inshore rescue services have been called out to rescue cocklers in Morecambe Bay in the past 12 months. [199153]

Mr. Jamieson: During 2003, nine incidents involving cocklers or cockling craft were recorded at Liverpool Maritime Rescue Sub-Centre (MRSC), five of which occurred in or around Morecambe Bay. Three of the incidents involved RNLI and Coastguard resources. Two were resolved prior to the launch of any waterborne assets.

During 2004 to date, 22 incidents involving cocklers or cockling craft have been recorded at Liverpool MRSC, all of which have occurred in Morecambe Bay. Four of the incidents have involved cocklers being rescued by a Search and Rescue (SAR) asset. One incident involved 'self help' where the cocklers made shore safely by means of their inflatable dinghy, when their tractor broke down out in the bay. On 13 occasions, the cocklers made shore safely unaided or prior to the launch or arrival of SAR resources. Three occasions were false alarms with good intent where members of the public reported somebody or something in difficulty, but all persons were accounted for and nothing else untoward was sighted. One occasion was to check a vehicle on the beach for occupancy. On arrival of SAR units the vehicle was found to be abandoned.

Road Traffic Deaths

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce procedures to record the number of fatal car accidents that occur as a result of poor servicing of cars. [199246]

Mr. Jamieson: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Rural Railways (North Yorkshire)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his proposals for rural railways in North Yorkshire. [198645]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has consulted on proposals for the development of local and rural railways, including those in North Yorkshire and a strategy based on this consultation will be published shortly.

Safety Cameras

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many persons were employed by safety camera partnerships in England and Wales at the latest date for which figures are available; and how many were employed by safety camera partnerships at their inception. [196957]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 10 November 2004]: Safety camera partnerships comprise area police authorities, local highway authorities and magistrates court authorities. Some staff only spend part of their time with the partnership and the rest on duties with their parent authorities—hence the figures are expressed in terms of 'full time equivalents'.

The Safety Camera Programme began in 2000, involving seven local partnerships in England and Wales, which had a total of 210 full-time equivalent posts at the end of the programme's trial year 2000–01. There are now 35 partnerships in England and Wales, covering the whole of Wales and virtually all of England, with 1,692 full-time equivalent posts, on the latest available data.

Of these 1,692 full time equivalent posts:

1,160 are employed by police authorities, dealing with detecting offences, processing fixed penalty tickets and dealing with inquiries;

312 are employed by magistrates court authorities, dealing with collecting payments, dealing with inquiries and driving licence issues;

91 are employed by local authorities, dealing with communications, establishing and monitoring sites including signing issues;

129 are employed by either police or local authorities, dealing with running the partnerships and other project management issues.

The independent review of the first three years of the programme's operation, 2000–02 to 2002–03, which the Government published on 15 June showed that cameras were saving over 100 road deaths and over 750 serious injuries a year for the 24 partnerships then in operation—a 40 per cent. reduction in the number of people killed or seriously injured at camera sites over and above the general downward trend in UK road casualties, with a financial benefit to society of over four times the resource cost of the programme including staff.

The annual number of avoided deaths and injuries will now be considerably more, with 35 partnerships now in operation. We have commissioned an update of the independent review of the programme's operation. This will be published in the spring.

The partnerships will shortly submit their proposals for 2005–06 including staffing numbers, and the Department will scrutinise these in detail, to ensure that the programme is delivering its valuable benefits in reduced road deaths and casualties as efficiently as possible.

Suicides (Railways)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) suicides and (b) attempted suicides on railways there were in each of the last five years, broken down by region; and if he will make a statement. [198528]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 17 November 2004]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The number of suicides and attempted suicides on Network Rail's controlled infrastructure is given in the following table. The data are taken from the Health and Safety Executive's annual reports on rail safety, copies of which are in the House Library. Fatality data are based on HM Coroners' reports. The HSE "attempted suicide" data are based on information supplied by railway companies to HSE and is defined as those taken to hospital following attempted suicide incidents. The HSE reports do not break the figures down by region.

	Suicides	Attempted suicides
2003–04	73	14
2002–03	113	11
2001–02	115	19
2000–01	128	14
1999–2000	134	21

(b) In addition the Rail Safety and Standards Board (RSSB) produces separate data on suicides and suspected suicides, broken down by Network Rail region. The following table is extracted from the RSSB annual safety performance report for 2003 which is not published in hard copy but is on the RSSB website at: www.rssb.co.uk The RSSB data record suicides and suspected suicides as a single figure and are for calendar years not financial years.

Traffic Management Act

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he will measure the impact on congestion of the congestion-reducing measures in the Traffic Management Act 2004. [196388]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department is working with local traffic authorities and local stakeholders to develop indicators of delays to journey time and journey time reliability which will help measure changes in congestion.

The Highways Agency already has measures in place for monitoring congestion on the motorway network. These will include indicators such as the response times of the HA traffic officers to incidents, clearance of the carriageway and the number of times traffic is stopped or redirected.

Vehicle Licensing

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles are licensed; and what the total licence revenue was for each emission rating band in the private and light goods vehicle licensing category in the last year for which figures are available. [199251]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested, for 2003–04, is as follows.

Emission band	Number of vehicles	Licence revenue (£)
AAA (up to 100g/km)	368	26,093
AA (101to120g/km)	159,777	13,369,527

Virgin Trains

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the passenger numbers on trains operated by Virgin Trains into London Euston were during (a) peak hours and (b) off-peak hours in each month from May 2003 to October 2004. [199211]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not held centrally and could not be readily obtained. However, I have asked Virgin Trains to write to my hon. Friend with the information.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Automated Payments

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of transferring all benefits and credits to bank automated credit systems on (a) the time taken for payments to be made to clients, (b) numbers of staff required within his Department and (c) the cost of payments to (i) the post office, (ii) banks and (iii) other organisations for administering BACS. [199158]

Mr. Pond: At the outset of the Payment Modernisation Programme, 43 per cent. of DWP customers were already being paid by Direct Payment into an account. The current proportion of DWP customers being paid some or all of their benefits by Direct Payment into an account is 77 per cent. This is a positive step towards meeting the Public Service Agreement target of 85 per cent. of customers being paid directly into an account by 2005.

The increase in the number of customers who are now paid by Direct Payment has not affected the frequency of payments made to customers, and customers continue to receive their payment by the due date. If the customer has chosen Direct Payment into an account, the overall time scale to process payments through the BACS system is three working days.

During the course of the conversion process the Department has deployed a Customer Conversion Centre to ease the burden on its front line operations. It is normal business practice for the Department to manage this sort of large-scale but temporary operation in this way. The cost of payments to organisations including banks and the post office for administering BACS, is commercial in confidence. Throughout the planning and migration process detailed consultation has been undertaken with BACS Ltd. (now named Voca Ltd.).

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advice the Government has given to claimants about the transfer of benefits and credits to claimants to bank automated credit systems. [199159]

Mr. Pond: Direct Payment increases choice, reduces fraud and assures a safe, convenient, more modern and efficient way of paying benefits.

The Department's Direct Payment information campaign provides customers with factual information on all account options, including information on the Post Office card account. It will be up to customers themselves to decide which type of account they wish to have their money paid into.

Independent research for DWP has shown that nearly all customers found the information that they had received to be at least fairly clear with two thirds considering it to be very clear.

Basic State Pension

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average amount of (a) basic state pension and (b) SERPS received by (i) men and (ii) women in (A) the Scottish Borders, (B) Scotland and (C) the UK was in the last period for which figures are available. [198193]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is in the tables.

(a) Weekly average amounts of basic state pension

Area	Men	Women
Scottish Borders	76.32	62.88
Scotland	76.41	63.32
Great Britain	75.82	61.96

(b) Weekly average amounts of additional state pension

Area	Men	Women
Scottish Borders	18.29	8.03
Scotland	18.52	8.48
Great Britain	19.36	8.11

Notes:

1. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample and are subject to a high degree of sampling variation.
2. Basic state pension is made up of Category A pensions and pensions derived from spouses' contributions.
3. Additional state pension is made up of SERPS and state second pension.
4. Local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

Benefit Entitlement (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people are being paid disability living allowance in Newcastle-under-Lyme; [198579]

(2) how many pensioners have received the attendance allowance in Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since 1997; [198604]

(3) what the cost of administering the carer's allowance was in each of the last three years. [198715]

Maria Eagle: The administration of the Disability and Carers Service is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran to Mr. Paul Farrelly, dated 17 November 2004:

In reply to three of your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Disability and Carers Service, the Minister for Disabled People, Maria Eagle MP, on behalf of the Secretary of State, promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people are being paid Disability Living allowance (DLA) in Newcastle-under-Lyme.

In May 2004 there were 4,400 people (to the nearest hundred) in receipt of DLA in the Newcastle-under-Lyme constituency area.

You also asked the Secretary of State how many pensioners have received the Attendance Allowance in the constituency of Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since 1997. The figures (rounded to the nearest hundred), are outlined below:

	Number
1997	2,500
1998	2,600
1999	2,500
2000	2,900
2001	2,700
2002	2,600
2003	2,400
2004	2,500

In addition, you also asked the Secretary of State what the cost of administering the Carers Allowance was in each of the last three years. This information, which relates to staff costs only, is outlined below:

2001–02	13,890,753
2002-/03	16,551,014
2003-	16,858,598

The increase in costs between 01/02 and 02/03 was due to the recruitment of additional staff to deal with an increase in CA claims as a consequence of the introduction of the Carers Package in October 2002. This allowed carers over the age of 65 to make a claim.

I hope this is helpful.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners receive assistance from the Warm Front Scheme in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198603]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Benefit Overpayment (Recovery)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many past overpayments of benefits have been recovered by his Department's debt management office in each year since 1997; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter being sent to people with repayments of overpaid benefit outstanding. [194846]

Mr. Pond: The available information is in the table. A draft copy of the letter sent to people with repayments of overpaid benefit outstanding, has been placed in the Library.

Year end overpayment data

	Number of new recoverable overpayments	Number of cases where recovery in progress	Number of overpayments fully recovered
2000–01	626,039	424,283	537,965
2001–02	563,315	420,876	451,699
2002–03	504,100	404,505	420,247
2003–04	380,452	379,102	330,947

Notes:

1. This type of data was not captured prior to 2000.
2. A recovery of an overpayment can commence in a previous year before the overpayment was marked as fully recovered in the relevant financial year.

Benefit Payments

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what protection is provided to families receiving income support who will be worse off after the migration to child tax credit and who cannot apply for a local authority discretionary housing payment because they do not qualify for council tax or housing benefit; [193949]

(2) what protection is provided to families receiving income support who will be worse off after the migration to child tax credit and who are refused discretionary housing payment by their local authority; [193950]

(3) what help is proposed for families receiving income support who will be worse off after the migration to child tax credit and who are awarded a discretionary housing payment for a fixed period and are then refused further payment; [193951]

(4) whether transitional protection will be put in place to protect from a sudden drop in income families receiving income support who will be worse off after the migration to child tax credit. [193952]

Mr. Pond [holding answer 26 October 2004]: The Department has no plans to put a transitional protection scheme into place for this group of families at this time. Our latest estimate is that with 900,000 families remaining to be transferred to child tax credit, fewer than 200 will see a net reduction in their overall income as a result of the interaction with council tax benefit, mostly by no more than a few pence per week. In contrast, more than 75 per cent. of families who move off benefit as a result of claiming CTC will gain by £20 a week or more. Nevertheless, we have issued a reminder to local authorities of their powers to consider an award of a discretionary housing payment to affected families where appropriate. Discretionary housing payments are designed for circumstances where there is a shortfall between HB/CTB entitlement and liability.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have received the (a) carer's allowance and (b) invalidity allowance since 1997. [198643]

Maria Eagle: The available information is in the table. Until April 2003, carer's allowance was known as invalid care allowance.

Number in receipt of carer's allowance

	Number
1997	367,445
1998	373,105
1999	373,515
2000[1]	384,860
2001[2]	419,785
2002	390,485
2003	408,115
2004	425,455

[1] Figures for 2003 and 2004 are as at 31 May. For all other years as at 30 June.

[2] Due to the introduction of a new CA computer system in November 1999, some estimation was necessary. The figure for 2000 was estimated based on trends in earlier years. For 2001, numbers "in payment" were not available and for that year only, the number "entitled" was used.

Caravan Parks

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children (a) died and (b) suffered injury as a result of accidents at holiday caravan parks in each of the last five years. [196854]

Jane Kennedy: There have been no fatal injuries to children reported to HSE or local authorities in holiday caravan parks during the period 1998–99 to 2004[1].

The reported non-fatal injuries to children are shown in the two age bands in the following table.

	Age band
	1–15	16–19
1998–99	11	1
1999–2000	26	—
2000–01	14	1
2001–02[2]	47	3
2002–03	48	3

[1] Provisional

[2] From 2001–02 the reported accident data was collected using revised coding arrangements. In the same year reporting was made easier through the setting up of the HSE Incident Contact Centre (ICC) which encouraged more telephoned reports. HSE do not interpret the increase in the figures as a growing accident trend, but welcome the easier collection of data.

Note:

The annual basis is the planning year from 1 April to 31 March

Carer's Allowance/Premium

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants were receiving the carer's premium in (a) Newcastle-under-Lyme and (b) the UK on the latest date for which figures are available. [198742]

Maria Eagle: The available information is in the table.

Claimants in receipt of a carer premium in May 2003

	Number
Newcastle-under-Lyme	300
Great Britain	290,000

Notes:

1. Newcastle-under-Lyme figures are from the 5 per cent. income support and jobseeker's allowance samples rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Great Britain figures are from the income support and jobseeker's allowance 5 per cent. sample combined with housing benefit and council tax benefit 1 per cent. sample, rounded to the nearest 10,000 with overlapping benefits removed.
3. As the figures are based on 5 per cent. samples they are subject to a degree of sampling variation.
4. The data refer to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
5. The administration of benefits in Northern Ireland is a matter for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Department for Work and Pensions

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to develop the carer's allowance; [198713]

(2) what estimate he has made of the costs of increasing the carer's allowance to the level of the minimum wage per hour spent caring; [198714]

(3) how many pensioners entitled to the carer's allowance have benefited from the abolition of the upper age limit. [198716]

Maria Eagle: Following the report of the National Strategy for Carers we have already made substantial improvements to carer's allowance, and to the extra money available to carers on a low income through the carer premium in the income related benefits and the carer's additional amount in pension credit. These improvements include the removal of the upper age limit on claims to the allowance, and substantial increases in the amount recipients can earn from part-time work, as well as in the extra money available to carers in the income related benefits and pension credit. We have no plans for further change beyond our commitment to increase carer's allowance each year in line with RPI.

Carer's allowance (CA) is not a carers' wage, and we have made no estimate of the cost of increasing it in line with the national Minimum Wage.

The latest available figures show that at 31 May 2004 some 23,500 pension age carers, including around 9,500 aged 65 and over, were receiving carers allowance. About 114,500 carers aged 60 or over, including over 83,000 aged 65 or over were getting the carer's additional amount in pension credit.

Child Poverty

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children (a) are defined as living below the poverty line and (b) have moved above the poverty line in each year in (i) Newcastle-under-Lyme and (ii) England since 1997. [198706]

Mr. Pond: Poverty is about more than low income, it also impacts on the way people live—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy. In December 2003, we published 'Measuring child poverty' which outlines the Government's new measure of child poverty which will be used from 2004–05. Both of these documents are available in the Library.

There is not a measure which sets out the numbers of children in poverty for the years since 1997 and we do not produce yearly estimates of the number of children leaving low income. However, data on the number of children living in low income households is available. The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting absolute and relative trends in low income.

The number of children in England below 60 per cent. contemporary median income from 1997–98 is in the table. Figures are not available below Government Office Region level. Specific information regarding low income at Government Office Region level is available in 'Households Below Average Income 1994/95–2002/03', which is available in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how long the longest CSA enforcement case in respect of a self-employed non-resident parent has been outstanding. [190272]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how long the longest Child Support Agency enforcement case in respect of a self-employed non-resident parent has been outstanding.

The case that has been with our enforcement teams for the longest period of time was first referred around 10 years ago. The non-resident parents main source of income is derived from self-employment. The case is currently being taken forward for committal proceedings.

The average length of time a case remains with enforcement before it is cleared is 1 year 5 months. This represents the time taken from acceptance until the liability order is paid in full or the non-resident parent has proved that he is meeting his maintenance liability.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what investigations he has made into the Child Support Agency computer system being unable to process payments into banks with a sort code commencing with 0; and what assessment he has made of the number of people affected by this problem. [193494]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Sandra Gidley, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what investigations he has made to the Child Support Agency computer system being unable to process payments into bank accounts with a sort code commencing with 0; and what assessment he has made of the number of people affected by this problem?

The Child Support Agency computer system is able to automatically process payments into bank accounts with a sort code commencing with a "0".

The computer system does however have a cosmetic display error, which means that the leading "0" of the bank sort code is not correctly displayed to the caseworker. This may have resulted in some clients being incorrectly advised, that the Agency was unable to process payments into that bank account. Guidance has been issued to caseworkers to ensure that when dealing with clients, they are aware that the bank sort code whilst not correctly displayed, is able to be processed correctly, enabling payment to those bank accounts.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when figures on the Child Support Agency new system (a) compliance and (b) throughput will be available; and what estimates have so far been made. [193618]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when figures on the CSA new system (a) compliance and (b) throughput will be available; and what estimates have so far been made.

The issue of compliance was addressed in the most recent quarterly report that was made available in the House of Commons Library on 28 October 2004. The management information provided by EDS does not yet permit us to provide a reliable estimate of throughput.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of each method of enforcement of payment of child support used by the Child Support Agency. [193836]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. David Kidney, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of each method of enforcement of payment of child support used by the Child Support Agency.

The recent review of enforcement concluded that changes were necessary in a number of areas. These included the need for better management information. This is being taken forward and we are progressively gaining a broad picture of the effectiveness of each method of enforcement. This knowledge base needs to be developed further before reliable conclusions can be drawn from this.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which Child Support Agency senior managers received performance related bonuses in 2003–04; and what the value of each of those bonuses was. [193925]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Steve Webb, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, which Child Support Agency senior managers received performance related bonuses in 2003–04; and what the value of each of those bonuses was.

In accordance with the requirements of Government Accounting, a full disclosure of the remuneration of Child Support Agency Directors is included with the Agency accounts for the year to 31 March 2004.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what contingency plans he has prepared in relation to computer systems used by the Child Support Agency. [195811]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what contingency he has prepared in relation to computer systems currently used by the Child Support Agency.

The new computer and telephony service provided by EDS contains a number of defects. The Child Support Agency is working closely with EDS to resolve these and they are progressively being remedied. Where we are unable to use the IT to progress cases, we use a series of manual workarounds. Exceptionally, where these prove unsuccessful, a small number of cases are progressed entirely clerically.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints the Child Support Agency has received from members of the public in relation to the computer systems used by the agency since their introduction. [195812]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many complaints the Child Support Agency has received from members of the public in relation to the computer systems currently used by the agency since their introduction.

Statistical data on complaints received in relation to the computer systems used by the Agency has only been collected since June 2003. Since then there have been 2196 complaints.

The breakdown of complaints in relation to computer system error and delay since June 2003 is as follows:

883 Old scheme complaints; and

1313 New scheme complaints

In order to put the above figures into context the Agency's current caseload is over 1.3million.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints the Child Support Agency has received from members of the public in relation to the telephone systems used by the Child Support Agency since their introduction. [195814]

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many complaints the Child Support Agency has received from members of the public in relation to the telephone systems currently used by the Child Support Agency since their introduction.

The Agency did not maintain a record of complaints received from members of the public in relation to the telephone systems used until April 2004. Since then there have been 1240 complaints received.

The breakdown of telephony complaints since April 2004 is as follows:

667 CSCS complaints for Old Scheme cases

573 CS2 complaints for New Scheme cases

In order to put the above figures into context the Agency's current caseload is over 1.3 million.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the backlog of new claims held by the Child Support Agency. [195816]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. I am providing this in his absence

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the backlog of new claims held by the Child Support Agency.

At the end of September 2004 there were around 240,000 new applications recorded on the new IT system awaiting a decision under the new scheme legislation. Typically 40% of cases will close before reaching assessment. Applications close for a variety of reasons, for example if the parents reconcile.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the average time it takes the Child Support Agency to bring cases from first application to assessment. [195817]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

The management information provided by EDS does not yet permit us to provide a reliable estimate of throughput.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many stuck cases were held by the Child Support Agency during the last calendar year, broken down by month. [195818]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Paul Goodman dated 18 November 2004:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many stuck cases were held by the Child Support Agency during the last calendar year broken down by month.

The management information is not available for the calendar year 2003, however, I can provide figures for 2004.

The information in the table shows the number of stuck cases that relate to our most problematic classifications:

Four weekly	Number
26 January 2004	75,337
23 February 2004	47,725
22 March 2004	52,538
19 April 2004	39,126
17 May 2004	34,143

Four weekly	Number
14 June 2004	34,614
12 July 2004	36,031
9 August 2004	37,703
6 September 2004	38,941
4 October 2004	40,009
1 November 2004	41,985

These figures are collaged on a weekly basis not calendar month so, they are shown four weekly.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of eligible parents received their first payment from the Child Support Agency within the time limit of six weeks during the last calendar year, broken down by month. [195819]

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 28 October 2004, Official Report, columns 55–57WS, on the new child support scheme progress report, what percentage the sum of £12.1 million retained by the Child Support Agency (CSA) represents with respect to the total payments (a) due to and (b) paid to EDS between 3 March 2003 and 19 September 2004; what percentage of the total number of clearances, calculations and closures the current achievement rate of over 238,000 for the new child support scheme represents; upon what criteria reasonable assessments of compliance are to be based; what the definition of (i) cash compliance and (ii) case compliance is; and upon what criteria the estimate of the number of parents who receive child maintenance premium payments by way of a disregard to their income support/ income-based jobseeker's allowance is based. [196268]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Ms Annabelle Ewing, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Written Ministerial Statement of 28th October Official Report columns 55–57WS on the new child support scheme progress report what percentage the sum of 12.1 million retained by the Child Support Agency (CSA) represents with respect to the total payments (a) due to and (b) paid to EDS between 3rd March 2003 and 19th September 2004; what percentage of the total number of clearances calculations and closures the current achievement rate of over 238,000 for the new child support scheme represents; upon what criteria reasonable assessments of compliance are to be based; what the definition of (i) cash compliance and (ii) case compliance is; and upon what criteria the estimate of the number of parents who receive child maintenance premium payments by way of a disregard to their income support/ income-based jobseeker's allowance is based.

The headings below provide a summary of your questions.

EDS Contract:

Payments under the CSR contract to EDS between 3 March 2003 and 19 September 2004 amount to £62.08million. During the same period the Department has retained £12.1m for performance issues, representing just over 16% of the sum invoiced.

'New scheme' caseload:

As at September 2004 the Agency processed 238,000 cases, equivalent to 50% of its 478,000 intake. Of the cases processed, 140,000 (59%) resulted in a calculation of maintenance and 98,000 (41%) were closed. We know that historically 40% of 'new scheme' intake has resulted in a closure and we expect the same to be true for those applications waiting to be processed.

Compliance:

Cash compliance compares the amount of regular maintenance and/or arrears collected through the Agency's collection service against the amount due in the period. Case compliance compares the number of cases on which regular maintenance and/or arrears is paid against the number of cases for which maintenance is due in the period.

We are now receiving the necessary management information on the number of cases where payment is being made and the number of cases where payment is due to enable us to make accurate assessments of the compliance levels we are achieving.

Child Maintenance Premium:

The number of Child Maintenance Premium payments made includes those first payments made by the Agency to the parents with care who are in receipt of the qualifying benefits, together with an estimate of those parents with care who will be receiving the payment directly as a disregard to their Income Support/ income-based Jobseekers Allowance.

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons are for the proposed reduction in the Child Support Agency service in Workington. [196381]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Tony Cunningham, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. I am providing this in Mr Smith's absence.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons are for the proposed reduction in the Child Support Agency service in Workington.

Child support services in Workington are delivered by our Wales and North West England Business Unit with its headquarters based in Birkenhead. Those services include a face to face interviewing service which is currently delivered by two staff based in Workington. The demand for our face to face service nationally has changed over the past two years which resulted in our subjecting it to an internal review. As a result we are replacing the existing service with two new services:

a customer service which provides office interviews/home visits to deal with enquiries from our customers which cannot be cleared by telephone;

a compliance service which will provide inspectoral visits to non-compliant employers and clients and which will present enforcement cases in local courts.

We are reducing the number of staff and the locations where they are based. Whilst Workington will receive an equivalent level of service to the rest of the country we will no longer be basing our staff there.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answers of 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1373W, and 4 November, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb), Official Report, column 417W, on the Child Support Agency, if he will now provide the information requested by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead. [199110]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 18 November 12004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answers of 28 October, Official Report, column 1373W, and 4 November, to the honourable Member for Northavon, Official Report, column 417W, on the Child Support Agency, if he will now provide the information requested by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead.

I remain unable to provide the information you require. I can however provide an update on the number of cases that have successfully transferred from the 'old scheme' to the 'new scheme'. Since March 2003 these amount to around 20,000 cases.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the reasons were for the delay in rolling out the new Child Support Agency assessment rules to all absent parents; and what steps he is taking to resolve the problems in rolling out the new scheme. [195738]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mike Isaac to Mr. Bob Spink, dated 18 November 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the reasons were for the delay in rolling out the new Child Support Agency assessment rules to all absent parents; and what steps he is taking to resolve the problems in rolling out the new scheme.

The new computer and telephony service provided by EDS contains a number of defects. The Child Support Agency is working closely with EDS and the defects are progressively being remedied. EDS will then be in a position to provide the software changes needed to support the migration of cases from the old to the new computer system and to convert existing maintenance assessments into new calculations. In the meantime, maintenance is still flowing under the old scheme and we do not want to jeopardise this by transferring cases too early. Ministers will want to be satisfied that the new arrangements are working well for new applications before making any decisions about migration and conversion.

Civil Servants (Criminal Records)

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what procedures are in place (a) to check the criminal records of civil servants in his Department and agencies responsible to his Department, including the Benefits Agency, who have access to computer databases containing confidential information on the public and (b) to ensure that there can be no improper use of computer databases containing confidential information on the public; and if he will make a statement. [194596]

Maria Eagle: All prospective employees of the Department and it's agencies are required to provide information about their eligibility to be employed, which include the requirement to declare any criminal convictions.

If anyone in the Department is charged with or convicted of a criminal offence they are required to inform their manager straight away.

When an offence comes to light consideration is given to establish whether restriction of duties, transfer or suspension from duty is appropriate and what disciplinary action is required. Failure to report a criminal caution can of itself be treated as a disciplinary offence.

As civil servants all Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) staff are subject to the provisions of the Civil Service Code and the Department's Standards of Behaviour statement is based on it.

Staff standards of behaviour require that computers or computer systems must only be used to access or process information people need to do their job. They must not access (or attempt to access) their own or other people's records, systems or information without authorisation.

There are also system generated access controls and auditing mechanisms. Staff are made aware of these measures during their training and consolidated by central guidance. Access to systems is approved by line managers and controlled by the local IT specialist.

Council Tax Benefit

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated expenditure on council tax benefit in England (a) was in 2003–04 and (b) will be in 2004–05 across (i) all council tax benefit recipients and (ii) pensioner recipients. [198488]

Mr. Pond: The information is in the following table.

Estimated expenditure on council tax benefit in England

£ million, nominal terms

	2003–04	2004–05
All council tax benefit recipients	2,811	3,085
Pensioner recipients	1,431	1,625

Notes:

1. All figures have been rounded to the nearest million pounds.
2. All pensioner figures quoted relate to people aged 60 and over.

Source:

The estimated costs shown are consistent with data published at Spending Review 2004.

Data Sharing

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of data sharing practices between executive bodies of his Department. [196544]

Jane Kennedy: The Department's IT systems currently allow the sharing of limited customer information between its Agencies. As part of the modernising delivery programme, we are implementing systems that will allow Agency IT systems to increase data sharing across the Department. It is envisaged that this IT will be operational from the middle of 2005 and will be subject to the limitations set out in the relevant data protection legislation.

These improvements will enable a more consistent and consolidated approach when interacting with our customers.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197299]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 24 May 2004 Official Report, columns 1463–64W.

Using the figures for advertising expenditure from that answer, which referred to media spend by campaign, the following table adds the creative costs for those campaigns where creative costs can be separately identified. Therefore advertising media spend and creative work for 2003–04 broken down by campaign are as follows:

2003–04 campaign	Advertising expenditure	Creative costs
Pension credit	11,100,000	2,068,720
The Pension Service	570,000	71,354
Direct Payment	11,044,000	1,206,890
Direct Payment road show	51,000	850
Fraud	8,383,000	860,493
Winter fuel	637,000	38,418
Council tax benefit	500,000	32,688
New Deal	5,800,000	1,152,038
Jobseeker Direct help-line	1,700,000	347,928
Age Positive	46,000	11,388
DDA awareness and disability rights	47,000	2,583
Totals	39,878,000	5,793,350

The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. Further details of creative spend, including for previous years, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We are unable to identify administrative costs separately as departmental administrative staff do not work solely on advertising campaigns and agencies do not charge separately for administrative support.

All these figures are net of VAT.

Departmental Changes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made under race relations regulations of the effect on ethnic minorities of the organisational changes to his Department in the South East region. [152147]

Maria Eagle: We are committed to securing equality of opportunity for all our customers. This commitment is delivered through the implementation of our Race Equality Scheme and through the range of measures highlighted in our ethnic minority business delivery plan. The Department is proactive in seeking advice and guidance on the impact of all policies, including organisational change, on ethnic minorities. Plans are subject to consultation with our staff and their representatives and where these organisational changes have an impact on the services provided to customers they are subject to public consultation with local community groups.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies, since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196596]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not available centrally in the format requested and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Policies

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the south Dorset constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on the south Dorset constituency. [194963]

Jane Kennedy: We have undertaken a fundamental overhaul of the welfare system, transforming it from a passive to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient and independent.

Through Jobcentre Plus, we are promoting work as the best form of welfare for people of working age. The number of people in work is at historically high levels of over 28.39 million; in south Dorset, the proportion in employment has risen to 81.1 per cent.

Our New Deals have helped lone parents, the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, disabled people, the over 50s and partners of unemployed people to move from benefit into work. Nationally over 1.1 million people have been helped into work by the New Deals, with over 1,400 in south Dorset alone.

Significant progress has been made in eradicating child poverty, and the latest figures for 2002–03 show that there were over half a million fewer children in relative low income than there were in 1996–97. Child benefit is now worth £16.50 a week for the eldest child, compared to only £11.40 in 1997, benefiting 9,875 families in south Dorset.

We want all pensioners to have a decent and secure income in retirement and to share fairly in the rising prosperity of the country, and our first priority has been to help the poorest pensioners. The Government will be spending nearly £10 billion more in 2004–05 (in 2004–05 prices) on pensioners as a result of measures introduced since 1997, with around half going to the poorest third.

Our reforms include the state second pension, which helps more of tomorrow's pensioners build up better pensions. Pension credit, introduced from October 2003, provides a contribution to a guaranteed minimum income for those aged 60 and over and, for the first time, those over aged 65 and over may be rewarded for modest savings and income. Around 3,980 pensioners in south Dorset are receiving pension credit, with an average award of £37.47 per week.

We know that older people are disproportionately affected by fuel poverty. This winter (2004–05) we have again made available a winter fuel payment of £200 for each eligible household with someone aged 60 or over to help with their fuel bills. The additional 80+ Annual Payment gives an extra £100 to eligible households where there is someone aged 80 or over. Last winter there were 15,595 households in south Dorset which received the winter fuel payment and, of those 4,220 households received the additional Annual Payment. We expect numbers to be similar for this winter (2004–05).

Additionally for this year eligible households with someone aged 70 or over will receive the One-off 70+ Payment of £100 to help with living expenses including council tax bills. It will be paid with the winter fuel payment and last winter there were 9,825 households in south Dorset with someone aged 70 or over which received a winter fuel payment. We expect a similar number to receive the One-off 70+ Payment this winter (2004–05).

Some 20,540 pensioners in south Dorset benefited from the above inflation increase in the rate of basic state pension from April 2003. Those over 75, of whom we estimate there are about 6,890 in south Dorset, may also qualify for free TV licences.

In 2002–03 we estimate there were around 10 million adults (22 per cent.) and 0.7 million children (5 per cent.) in GB likely to be covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA).

The figures can be broken down to regional level which shows that 22 per cent. of adults and 6 per cent. of children in the south-west of England are likely to be covered by the provisions of the DDA.

Information on the numbers of customers in the south-west who are in receipt of disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance (AA) is in the following table. This information is not available at constituency level.

Operational year	DLA/AA allowances recipients (Thousand)
South-west
2004	312.5
2003	296.8
2002	279.2
2001	271.6
2000	259.6
1999	257.9
1998	247.1
1997	230.3

Departmental Property/Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the properties occupied (a) by his Department and (b) by its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, showing (1) for each and (2) in aggregate (A) the area and (B) the annual rental value. [195431]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not available for 1997.

Such information that is available for 2004 is in the table. A separate list providing details of the floor area for all 1,743 DWP properties, grouped by region and DWP major occupying business, has been placed in the Library.

Size and cost of the DWP estate at April 2004

DWP[1]	Figures
PRIME sq m[2]	2,481,539.62
Non PRIME sq m[3]	108,000.00

Overall annual facilities price (£ million)[5]	529.3

[1] Information about the size of the DWP estate is available only from April 2004 subsequent to a detailed measuring exercise undertaken when the PRIME PFI contract was expanded to include the former Employment Service estate. Information about the former ES estate prior to this date is not available.

[2] PRIME space is occupied under the terms of the PRIME PFI contract and includes space occupied by other Government Departments (OGDs) within DWP buildings.

[3] Non PRIME space is where DWP has a part occupation in the building of an other Government Department (OGD).

[4] Information about floor area is held at departmental level only. Information about the space occupied (not net internal area of buildings) by each of the Department's agencies is currently being gathered and should be available early in the new year.

[5] The overall facilities price (FP) paid is shown. Details of annual rental value are not available as the PRIME PFI procured serviced accommodation as a global price, customised by building, and it is not possible now to extract a separate price for each traditional element covered by the FP. Rent in Non PRIME space is paid directly by the Department's businesses to OGDs and the information is not recorded centrally, although the overall FP recorded above does include the cost of facilities management services delivered through the PRIME contract to Non PRIME building occupants.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) location and (b) numbers of staff employed in each benefit processing centre. [188985]

Maria Eagle: Benefit processing is carried out by Jobcentre Plus, the Disability and Carers Service and the Pension Service.

Currently, Jobcentre Plus has about 21,000 staff involved in benefit processing, spread across 633 sites. The majority of these sites are primarily involved in delivering our Welfare to Work programmes and have very few staff processing benefits. Currently there are three benefit centres, the primary function of which is processing benefits. Jobcentre Plus benefits processing will be centralised in 81 sites by 2008.

The former Secretary of State made an announcement to the House on 29 June 2004, Official Report, columns 8–9WS, regarding the future of Pension Service centres. The Secretary of State announced on 16 September 2004, Official Report, columns 178–80WS, details of the 81 sites which will carry out benefit processing by 2008.

The table shows the number of core processing and management and support staff in post at the end of August 2004. Staff working on local services, projects and central functions are not included.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's guidance on activities that may be undertaken by staff in redeployment units. [196508]

Maria Eagle: The Pension Service redeployment unit is currently the only redeployment unit within the Department. When an individual transfers to the Redeployment Unit, they will spend the majority of their time looking for a new job. They may be asked to undertake temporary projects or tasks whilst assigned to the Redeployment Unit, but the duration of these projects and tasks will not exceed 2 months and therefore do not affect an individual's surplus status.

Specific guidance on activities that may be undertaken by staff in the unit has been placed in the Library.

Disability Living Allowance

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research his Department has undertaken into the cost involved in removing the bar on disabled people over the age of 65 years from claiming disability living allowance. [198290]

Maria Eagle: None, because there is no reliable data available on which research could be properly based.

Entitlement to disability living allowance can only be reliably established after a claim has been made and the mobility and care needs of the customer assessed.

Ethnicity

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of a person's ethnicity on their access to public services within the responsibilities of his Department. [143573]

Maria Eagle: DWP has a range of measures in place to assess the effect of ethnicity on access to public services.

We are looking towards improving the way we assess the impact of our services on ethnic minorities, and for this reason have worked in partnership with Home Office and Commission for Racial Equality to develop a system which will help us to achieve this.

There is a corporate monitoring project being undertaken in the Department to identify the gaps in information we have on the ethnicity of our customers.

Jobcentre Plus currently monitor the ethnicity of all customers who attend work focused interviews.

Customer satisfaction surveys are carried out by Jobcentre Plus, Pensions Service, Child Support Agency, Disability and Carers Directorate and Appeals Service which include questions on ethnicity. The results of these surveys help us to assess our services and act on any shortcomings.

Ethnic minority outreach programmes are in place across the Department and feedback from customers involved in these can help to inform us whether our services are accessible to ethnic minority groups.

The Department has set up the Ethnic Minority Working Party, with which we consult regularly on issues which affect ethnic minority groups. We also meet regularly with the Black and Minority Ethnic Elders Group.

A range of research has been commissioned to explore the question of ethnicity and barriers to take up of various benefits and services. Full assessments have not yet been made on the results of these, but action is being taken in response to some of the findings. These include:

Research into experiences of lone parents from ethnic minority communities.

Opportunities and barriers in employment and training for refugees.

Diversity in disability.

Delivering benefits and services to black and minority ethnic older people.

Research into the languages currently used by the Department, to determine whether these are appropriate for our changing customer base.

Copies of the research publications are available in the Library.

Freedom of Information Act

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [199076]

Mr. Pond: A major function of my Department is to provide information about a wide range of benefits, child support and back to work services to a variety of customers and others who use or are interested in using our services. This means that large amounts of information are regularly provided routinely and without question.

Implementation of the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 will build on the Department's existing mechanisms for responding to written requests for information, although there is no reliable way of forecasting the volume of additional requests we may receive. Accordingly, we have made no assessment of the likely additional costs of implementing the Freedom of Information Act 2000 within the Department for Work and Pensions for the first quarter of 2005.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether all Government buildings in his Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [199312]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions has, with its estates services provider LandSecurities Trillium, implemented a national programme of building works to its premises, facilities and services to improve access for disabled, people.

Of the 164 DWP buildings within the London Government Region, there are only 45 sites where works are not fully completed but programmes of work have been agreed to provide access to disabled people by the end of January 2005.

Health and Safety at Work

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps the Government have taken to improve health and safety at work in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198547]

Jane Kennedy: Regulatory responsibility for health and safety is shared between the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and Local Authorities (LAs). HSE adopts a national approach to improving health and safety at work, focusing its efforts to those work activities presenting the greatest risk to workers and members of the public. To achieve this HSE's inspectors inspect workplaces, investigate incidents and complaints and take enforcement action where necessary. In addition, Health and Safety Awareness Officers provide advice and guidance to small firms during workplace visits, events and initiatives.

HSE has an office in Newcastle-under-Lyme, covering Staffordshire, Shropshire and parts of Cheshire. Work is carried out according to national priorities but guided by local circumstances.

In April 2002 HSE introduced 'topic-based inspections' in response to the Revitalising Health and Safety initiative. Inspectors judge management of health and safety by inspecting a small number of topics and issues that are most likely to cause serious harm.

In February 2004 the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) published their new strategy for workplace health and safety to 2010 and beyond. In September 2004 HSC issued a consultative document to explore which techniques HSE and LAs can use to best influence workplace health and safety standards.

Identity Cards

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) time scale and (b) anticipated publication date is for the feasibility study being undertaken by his Department to establish the full impact, costs and benefits of the introduction of identity cards. [198908]

Mr. Pond: We have conducted and completed an initial feasibility study into the impact Identity Cards will have on DWP business. The results have been forwarded to the Home Office and will help inform the next stage of the Identity Cards programme. For commercial and security reasons the results will not be published separately.

Incapacity/Severe Disablement Benefit

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have had their claims for incapacity benefit terminated because their claims were found to be fraudulent in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) region and (b) age. [191719]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available. Information is not collected on how many people identified as making fraudulent claims to incapacity benefit had their claims terminated as a result.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent estimate he has made of the number of (a) males and (b) females aged (i) 18 to 29, (ii) 30 to 39, (iii) 40 to 49 and (iv) 50 to 59 claiming incapacity benefit; and what estimate he has made of the number of males aged 60 to 65 claiming incapacity benefit. [196031]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) claimants by age and gender, at May 2004

	All	Men	Women
All	2,708,700	1,590,200	1,118,600

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged (a) under 25, (b) 25 to 40, (c) 40 to 49, (d) 50 to 59 and (e) over 60 years have claimed incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance in each year since 1997, broken down by region. [191672]

Maria Eagle: The information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people have made a new claim for incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) age and (b) region; [191673]

(2) how many applications for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance were rejected in each year since 1997; and what percentage this was of all applications for each benefit, broken down by (a) age and (b) region; [191675]

(3) what categories of reasons are given for the rejection of applications for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance; and how many applications for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance were rejected for each of these reasons in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) age and (b) region. [191676]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available in the format requested.

The available information has been placed in the Library.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of new claimants of incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance in each year since 1997 have been in receipt of incapacity benefit at some point (a) during the previous two years; (b) during the previous five years and (c) since the introduction of incapacity benefit broken down by age and region. [191674]

Maria Eagle: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Case-level Incapacity Benefit/Severe Disablement Allowance data are available only from May 1995.

ME

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with officials from the Department of Health on the clinical definition of myalgic encephalomyelitis. [199274]

Maria Eagle: The Department's Chief Medical Adviser keeps up to date with the latest developments in the understanding and treatment of myalgic encephalomyelitis/chronic fatigue syndrome. He does this by review of literature, discussion with experts in the field and liaison with the Department of Health. There have been no recent discussions with Department of Health officials specifically on this subject.

Mrs. Elizabeth Langmead

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when Mrs. Elizabeth Langmead of Galmpton, Devon, will be refunded the sum in retirement pension owed to her by the Pension Service; and if he will make a statement. [198520]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Information about individual pension payments is confidential and I will write privately to the hon. Member. This is in line with paragraph 12, Part 2, of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

National Insurance Credits

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend the scope of national insurance credits for those in training for further employment to (a) those remaining in education aged 16 to 18 years and (b) those in higher education. [198697]

Mr. Pond: All young people may be credited with Class 3 contributions for the tax years in which they reach age 16 and the two following years.

Those over 18 may pay voluntary contributions to the extent these are required to qualify for a full basic state pension. These may be paid up to six years after a period of education or training ends. It is not always necessary to pay these since it is possible to achieve full basic state pension with up to five non-qualifying years in the working life.

We have no plans to further extend the availability of credits in these circumstances.

New Deal (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people in Newcastle-under-Lyme have benefited from (a) New Deal for Lone Parents and (b) the New Deal for Partners; [198577]

(2) how many people in Newcastle-under-Lyme have benefited from the New Deal since 1997. [198580]

Jane Kennedy: The available information is in the table.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether providers of the New Deal for Disabled People have been asked to change their timetable for job-placing activities under the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [192157]

Jane Kennedy: Jobcentre Plus is actively reviewing current performance with all New Deal for Disabled People contractors/providers against their contract to March 2006. Any variations to those contracts would be subject to agreement on an individual basis through contract re-negotiation.

In some cases, where Job Brokers have higher than expected conversion rates (i.e. registrations to job entries, and job entries to sustained jobs), we are discussing with them the option of re-profiling performance to maintain ongoing provision to March 2006 within their Maximum Indicative Contract Value.

New Deal for Young People

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the latest figures are for (a) the number of starts on each of the New Deal for Young People options and (b) the number of the starts that have led to sustained unsubsidised employment. [194839]

Jane Kennedy: Young people starting the New Deal for Young People programme face significant disadvantage in the workplace as they will already have been unemployed for six months. Participants enter a "Gateway" lasting up to four months in which a personal adviser gives them intensive job search to improve their job prospects. Of the 595,270 people who have already left the Gateway, 254,610 (43 per cent.) have entered unsubsidised, sustained work.

Those who haven't found work at the end of the Gateway period enter the New Deal for Young People Options. These customers often have the most difficult barriers to work of the 18 to 24 age group. The Options help young people by giving them the skills, work experience and confidence they need to make them more job ready. Young people can access more than one option during a spell on New Deal for Young People, allowing them to find the support that is most likely to lead them to employment.

Information on starts to the Options, and jobs gained, is in the table.

New Deal for Young People Options

Option	Total starts[1]	Total unsubsidised, sustained[2] jobs gained[3]
Employment	82,960	32,920
Full-time education and training	187,710	42,430
Voluntary sector	112,370	26,680
Environmental task force	110,990	24,520

[1] Includes people who may have started more than one Option during a single spell on New Deal for Young People.

[2] For the purposes of New Deal for Young People, employment is regarded as sustained if no new claim is made for jobseeker's allowance within 13 weeks of leaving New Deal.

[3] Includes jobs gained directly from the option, and from the Follow-Through stage of New Deal for Young People after completing the option.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer from the Secretary of State for Home Department dated 29 June, ref 173275, when he will respond to the Question asked by the hon. Member dated 29 January, ref 152147; and if he will explain the reasons for the delay. [192166]

Maria Eagle: A reply has been given today. I regret the delay, which was caused by a number of administrative errors.

Pathways to Work Pilots

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of the Pathways to Work pilot scheme evaluation referred to on page 17 of his Department's publication UK National Action Plan for Employment. [194695]

Maria Eagle: A report on interviews carried out with Personal Advisers and Incapacity Benefit customers in the first three Pathways to Work pilots was published in September 2004. A copy has been placed in the Library. [W202 'Incapacity Benefit reforms: Early Findings from Qualitative Research'.]

A further report, which looks in detail at the role and practices of Personal Advisers across all seven pilot districts, will be published in late November. These studies are part of a wide-ranging evaluation of all aspects of the Pathways pilots. Reports on different elements of the evaluation will be placed in the Library as they are published.

Part of the UK National Action Plan for Employment also referred to the improved job entry performance in pilot areas. This was derived from early internal analysis of Jobcentre Plus recorded job entries in the pilot areas. Since that report was written, there is now further emerging evidence showing that Pathways areas are achieving double the level of improvement in the number of recorded job entries compared to other areas. They are also getting about six times as many people to take up further help to get back to work, and there are positive and encouraging indications of an increase in flows off incapacity benefit in comparison to both last year and to non-pilot areas.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people eligible for support under the Pathways to Work pilots are aged (a) 16 to 49 and (b) over 50 years; and how many people who have found work under the Pathways to Work pilots are aged (i) 16 to 49 and (ii) over 50 years. [197380]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Pathways to Work pilots

Age at entry to Pathways to Work pilot	Number of starts to Pathways to Work pilots	Number of job entries
16 to 49	41,100	4,200
50 and over	16,700	1,300
Date of birth not known	500	100
Total	58,300	5,600

Notes:

1. Includes those identified as new incapacity benefit customers for whom pilot participation is mandatory; new customers for whom a work focused interview is not mandatory because of their age (males aged 60 to 65) and may or may not have volunteered to participate; and existing customers who have volunteered to take part.
2. Includes all recorded job entries plus return to work credit (RTWC) awards for which no Jobcentre Plus job entry is yet recorded (by definition, an RTWC award means that a job entry has occurred).
3. Figures for job entries include New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) job starts.
4. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
5. Information is up to the end of August 2004.

Pensioner Poverty

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners were living in poverty in the London borough of Wandsworth in each of the last three years. [197125]

Mr. Pond: Poverty and social exclusion are complex and multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of peoples' lives—including their living standards, health, housing, the quality of their environment and not just low income. The sixth annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of measures.

8,500 pensioner households in Wandsworth were benefiting from the pension credit in May 2004.

Information on the number of pensioners in low incomes in individual local authorities is not available.

Pensioners

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners received council tax benefit in 1997–98; what the council tax benefit take-up rate was; and what the figures are for 2004–05. [195266]

Mr. Pond: The available information is in the table. Information is not available for 2004–05.

Council tax benefit (CTB) beneficiaries aged 60 and over, Great Britain: May 1998 and 2003

	Thousand
May 1998	3,169,000
May 2003	2,815,000

Notes:

1. The figure is based on a 1 per cent. sample and subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. Council tax benefit totals exclude any Second Adult Rebate cases.
3. "Beneficiaries" are all claimants and partners aged 60 or over.
4. The figure is rounded to the nearest thousand.
5. No information is available after May 2003.

Estimates of the number of pensioners in receipt of council tax benefit—averaged over 1997–98—along with revised estimates of the rate of take-up are published in the DSS report entitled "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up in 1998/99" (December 2000). Copies of the report can be found in the Library.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners are in receipt of (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit; what the total cost of the benefit is; and if he will make a statement. [198167]

Mr. Pond: The number of pensioners in receipt of housing benefit and council tax benefit, and the total cost of the benefits to pensioners are in the following tables.

Housing benefit and council tax benefit recipients aged 60 and over at May 2003

	Number
Housing benefit	1,873
Council tax benefit	2,815

Pensions Protection Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the written ministerial statement on the Pensions Protection Fund, of 8 November 2004, Official Report, column 20WS, what estimate he has made of the amount of liability that would not be borne by the Pension Protection Fund if schemes which had had an insolvency event before the Pension Protection Fund is launched were to be excluded. [198059]

Malcolm Wicks: The Pensions Bill has always made it clear that in order for a Pension Protection Fund (PPF) assessment period to start, an eligible pension scheme must not have commenced wind-up prior to the introduction of the PPF. The sponsoring employer of the scheme must also have a qualifying insolvency event after the introduction of the PPF.

This position has not changed. The statement on 8 November simply made it clear that if the sponsoring employer had experienced any insolvency events prior to the introduction of the PPF this would not in itself disqualify the scheme from entering the PPF.

It is not possible to calculate the amount of liability that would not be borne by the PPF if the PPF were to exclude schemes whose sponsoring employers had an insolvency event before the PPF is launched. This is because we cannot second-guess what will happen in the complicated insolvency proceedings which will ultimately determine both whether the PPF eligibility criteria will be met, and the level of liabilities which will fall to the PPF.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193974]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Work and Pensions is currently engaged in nine PFI initiatives. These are a combination of: (i) those let to April 2001 by the former Department for Social Security and the former Employment Service, which were executive agency's of the then Department for Education and Employment; and (ii) those let subsequently by the DWP. Contract costs for IS/IT initiatives are not provided because of commercial confidentiality. This is in line with paragraph 13, part 2 of the code of practice of Access to Government Information.

The Department's PFI initiatives and annual expenditure are all disclosed in the Department's Resource Accounts. This information is recorded in the operating cost statement. There is also a section "Commitments under PFI Contracts" that lists all the PFI contracts and discloses the total payments to which the Department is committed in the next financial year.

Where a PFI deal is specific to an Executive Agency it is also disclosed within the Agency accounts.

The Department's Resource Account can be accessed at: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/dwp/2004/res_acc/report.pdf

The Agencies Annual Reports can be accessed at: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/resourcecentre/index.asp

All documents are available in the Library.

The Department does not have any on-balance sheet PFI contracts.

Public Awareness Campaigns

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 22 July 2004, Official Report, columns 452–54W, on public awareness campaigns, on what evidence his assessment is based in each case; and if he will place the relevant research in the Library. [196653]

Maria Eagle: The following table sets out a summary of campaigns and the evidence used to assess effectiveness. Copies of the reports on the Targeting Fraud Campaign, Disability Discrimination Act research and Pension Credit research are available in the Library. However, information on smaller campaigns is not generally collated into a single document and so could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Health Act

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the number of disused petrol stations which do not meet the requirements of the Public Health Act 1961; how many improvement notices have been issued under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974; and what further steps are planned to deal with the potential detrimental effects to the environment of disused petrol stations. [192308]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

The local Petroleum Licensing Authority enforces the safety of disused petrol stations. There is no statutory obligation on them to keep records of how many sites do not meet the requirements of the Public Health Act 1961. There is also no statutory obligation on them to keep records on how many improvement notices they have issued under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 in relation to disused petrol stations. As such, it is not possible to provide the statistics requested.

The DEFRA groundwater protection code on filling stations contains advice on decommissioning underground storage tanks and the Environment Agency has powers to enforce the code. In general, the Agency expects risks to groundwater from decommissioned tanks to be lower than from active tanks since, at worst, only residual fuel would be likely to remain. The Environment Agency's risk-based approach to groundwater protection and improvement will be taken forward under the Water Framework Directive. Local authorities also have duties under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act to identify contaminated land and secure remediation which may involve the Environment Agency.

Public Relations

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent by his Department on public relations in each of the past three years. [186208]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. Information on costs prior to June 2001 is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The available information is in the table.

	Press office/Public relations (£)
2001–02 (from June 2001)	816,725
2002–03	1,739,935
2003–04	1,482,811

Notes:

1. Figures represent the salary costs for press officers.

2. The increase between 2001–02 and 2002–03 coincided with the creation of the regional press office network, which was drawn from existing Employment Service and Benefits Agency communications staff.

Retirement Age

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) set retirement age applying to all or most personnel and (b) maximum age beyond which applications for employment will not be considered is in (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies. [186373]

Maria Eagle: The current retirement age for the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) is 65. Staff can retire at the minimum civil service pension age of 60 if they so wish but can opt to stay until 65. At present DWP also has interim arrangements in place to enable staff who are approaching 65 the opportunity to stay beyond that if they so wish. These arrangements are for grades AA—G6. They do not apply to the senior civil service (SCS) as they are governed by Cabinet Office and have a retirement age of 60. Any changes to the SCS position would have to be implemented by the Cabinet Office and applied to the whole of the SCS within the civil service. These interim arrangements are in place until 31 March 2005 and were developed within the wider context of the Pensions Green Paper and impending age legislation.

As the current retirement age for DWP is 65 we do not recruit individuals over the age of 64 years and 6 months.

These arrangements apply across DWP and its delivery businesses but in the Health and Safety Executive the retirement age for staff differs for different grades. The retirement age varies from 60–62 and depends on length of service when that age is reached.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have taken out stakeholder pensions, broken down by county. [191084]

Malcolm Wicks: Figures from the Association of British Insurers state that 2,042,864 stakeholder pensions have been sold up to the end of June 2004.

The official distributional breakdown of sales for the 2003–04 tax year will not be available until July 2005.

Such information as is available is in the following table.

Stakeholder pensions: Official figures 2001–02 and 2002–03 tax years—number of individuals contributing by country and region

Terminal Illness (Benefit Payments)

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that cancer patients are offered specialist benefits advice at diagnosis; and if he will make a statement; [198208]

(2) how many cancer sufferers who have subsequently died from their illness did not receive (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [198209]

(3) how many cancer sufferers without terminal diagnosis are not receiving (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance; [198210]

(4) if he will make a statement on the (a) operation and (b) take-up of the special rules gateway governing eligibility for higher rates of (i) disability living allowance and (ii) attendance allowance for patients with terminal illness; [198211]

(5) what steps his Department is taking to publicise the entitlement link between (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance and (i) carer's allowance and (ii) income support; [198212]

(6) if he will make it his Department's policy (a) to waive the three to six month qualifying period for cancer patients claiming disability living allowance and attendance allowance and (b) to permit hospital in-patients to keep their (i) disability living allowance and (ii) attendance allowance for 52 weeks; [198213]

(7) if he will revoke the 28-day linking rule for (a) disability living allowance and (b) attendance allowance claimants who are hospitalised; and if he will change the definition of terminal illness from six to 12 months. [198214]

Maria Eagle: The Department has special arrangements that recognise the particular difficulties faced by people who have only a short time to live, whether due to cancer or any other progressive disease. People in these circumstances are awarded attendance allowance or the highest rate of the care component of disability living allowance automatically without having to satisfy a qualifying period, and without having to complete a claim form to demonstrate their care needs. These arrangements ensure that claims are dealt with quickly and sensitively.

In the year ending 31 May 2004 15,800 new claims were awarded under special rules and at the 31 may 2004 88,200 people were receiving either disability living allowance or attendance allowance under the Special Rules. On average it takes less than six days to make an award in these cases.

Advice about benefits is widely available from a range of sources including social security or Jobcentre Plus offices, post offices, doctors' surgeries and other advice agencies to ensure that people who are disabled can make informed decisions about whether or not to claim disability benefits.

Additionally, leaflets explaining the links between disability benefits and carers allowance and income support are sent directly to customers when they are notified about their award of benefit.

Officials have met with Macmillan cancer relief to discuss their report and will be holding further discussions with them about the scope for measures that will help people with cancer to receive benefits advice at the earliest opportunity.

Information is not available on how many people with cancer who subsequently died from that illness did not receive disability living allowance or attendance allowance nor is information available as to how many people with cancer who do not have a terminal diagnosis are not receiving these benefits.

There are no plans to change the definition of terminal illness or the rules governing the payment of disability living allowance and attendance allowance to people in hospital.

Third Party Deduction Schemes

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether he plans to extend the range of qualifying benefits for third party deductions schemes; and if he will make a statement; [198793]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the modernisation of the third party deductions schemes; and if he will make a statement. [198794]

Mr. Pond: Third party deductions can be made from income support, jobseeker's allowance and pension credit where people are in specified arrears with their gas, electricity and water bills, and also where they are in arrears with their housing costs and court imposed fines. There are no current plans to extend the range of benefits from which these deductions can be made.

We have recently received representation from The Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (OFGEM) concerning the fuel elements of the third party deduction scheme and we will be meeting with them to discuss the issues raised.

Unemployment (Eltham)

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department has taken to reduce unemployment in the constituency of Eltham since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [197643]

Jane Kennedy: As a result of a combination of economic stability and our radical labour market policies, unemployment in Eltham has reduced by 45 per cent. since 1997 and now stands at 1,417, and long-term unemployment by 75 per cent. to stand at 200.

Our New Deal programmes administered by Jobcentre Plus have been a great success, helping 1,780 people in Eltham to find work. We are building on this success, opening up more opportunities for people to find work.

The development of Jobcentre Plus is building on the high quality service already provided by social security offices and Jobcentres by delivering a single, integrated service to all people of working age, with a clear focus on work.

In addition to the New Deal programmes, which are common to Jobcentre Plus, there have been ongoing activities specific to Eltham and the borough of Greenwich, to help local people in to work. Local initiatives have included jobs fairs, recruitment for local stores and employer open days.

Eltham also benefits from the Government's Welfare to Work agenda's 'Action Team initiative' that provides tailored support to disadvantaged customers within the community through an outreach advisory approach.

Webster House

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) where crisis loans will be paid when Webster House in Kirkby is closed; [199156]

(2) how much his Department has allocated to the WIN scheme for Kirkby; which parts of the town are covered by the scheme; how many people have taken part in it; what the scheme's targets are; what its results against targets are to date; how many staff work on the scheme; and from where it will be administered when Webster House closes. [199157]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 November 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning the delivery of the Working Neighbourhoods pilot in Knowsley and the issue of Crisis Loan processing. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It may be helpful if I explain how the overall funding has been distributed for the pilot. The Employment Development & Modernisation Fund provided £77m for the 12 pilot sites operating in some of the most deprived neighbourhoods in the country for the period 2004/05 to 2005/06. Of this, £5m was allocated for set up and evaluation costs. Of the remaining £72m, each pilot site will receive £3m per year of which £1m is discretionary funding to allow personal advisers, working with Local Strategic Partnerships, the flexibility to meet individual and community needs.

The Working Neighbourhood pilot for Knowsley delivers to selected parts of the Northwood and Towerhill wards. The postcode boundary for the site contains around 6,000 residents, with approximately 2,000 in receipt of working age benefits.

The most recent statistics produced for 31 October 2004 indicate the Knowsley pilot has engaged with 879 customers of which 188 are volunteers to the programme.

With regard to the pilot's targets, there will be overall monitoring of performance and objectives which will then be evaluated. The evaluation of the objectives aims to test the extent to which the programme of local intensive work focussed action is effective in addressing long-standing barriers to work experienced by residents of deprived areas; the number of individuals moving into work and by how much it decreases the overall workless rate within the pilot area.

Whilst Jobcentre Plus job entry targets relate to movement into full time employment all who enter full time, part time and voluntary employment will count as successes for evaluation of the pilot. Retention figures will be gathered for those residents remaining in full time employment for 4, 13 and 26 weeks.

Turning to the results the Knowsley pilot has achieved to date I am able to inform you as of 31 October 2004 229 residents from the pilot have moved into employment. To clarify this further the table below gives a breakdown of the benefit groups involved.

	Number
Incapacity benefit	30
Invalid care allowance	0
Income support	63
Jobseekers' allowance	133
Other benefits	1
None	2

Twenty staff have been allocated to deliver the Knowsley pilot. The majority of them are personal advisers.

The intended closure of Webster House should have no impact on the Working Neighbourhoods pilot as it has never been delivered from Webster House. The pilot and associated mandatory work focussed interviews have been conducted form the Jobcentre Plus office at St. Chads House, Kirkby. It is also being delivered in the community to voluntary customers from partner's premises and most recently from a Working Neighbourhoods portakabin sited in Northwood.

With regard to the issue of Crisis Loan processing currently undertaken in Webster House, I can confirm that we are looking at the delivery of all of the services in Webster House and the future delivery of Crisis Loans will be included in this. We will consult on our proposals with our staff, trade unions and local partners as soon as plans are fully developed.

I have asked the District Manager for Greater Mersey to keep you updated on all developments. She can be contacted on 01704 306078.

I hope this is helpful.

Work Focused Interviews

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have attended one or more Work Focused Interviews in each of the three incapacity benefit pilot areas; how many of these individuals have (a) secured employment, (b) been referred to condition management and (c) been referred to a New Deal for Disabled People broker; and if he will make a statement. [186226]

Maria Eagle: In total, there have been 5,600 jo entries in the Pathways to Work pilots to the end o August 2004. Of these, 4,200 were in the first three pilo districts which have been up and running since the en of October 2003 The following table sets out the detail requested solely in relation to those who have had a initial work-focused interview:

Outcomes in the first three pathways to work pilots to August 2004

	Initial work focused interviews attended	Job entries	Referred to condition management programme	Referred to ne deal for disable peopl
Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute	2,818	449	174	21
Bridgend and Rhondda, Cynon, Taf	2,923	417	125	55
Derbyshire	3,211	411	235	27

Notes:

1. The first three Pathways to Work pilots commenced on 27 October 2003.

2. Work Focused Interviews should take place at around eight weeks after the start of the benefit claim. This means that majority benefits starts in July and August will not be included in the data.

3. Initial Work Focused Interviews attended refers to the actual number of Work Focused Interviews that have taken place. Som individuals will have attended more than one Work Focused Interview. These will be people who have started more than one benefit spe since 27 October 2003.

4. Job starts: This includes all recorded job entries plus Return to Work Credit (RTWC) awards for which no job entry is yet recorde (By definition, an RTWC award must indicate that a job entry has occurred).

5. The total number of job entries in the first three pilot areas is higher than that recorded in the table. This table excludes job entri achieved with existing clients who had already started to claim benefit before 27 October 2003 and those not required to have a work focused interview.

6. Job starts figures include job starts achieved through referral to New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) job brokers.

7. The job starts figures represent all job starts that have occurred subsequent to an initial Work Focused Interview within the sam benefit spell.

8. Referred to Condition Management Programme: this represents all Condition Management Programme referrals that have occurre subsequent to an initial Work Focused Interview within the same benefit spell.

9. New Deal for Disabled People referrals: The data provided is all NDDP broker registrations plus referrals to NDDP brokers that hav not yet resulted in a registration. This represents all NDDP referrals that have occurred subsequent to an initial Work Focused Intervie within the same benefit spell.

Work Preparation Programmes

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the cost per person of getting a person who has entered (a) an Access to Work programme, (b) a Work Preparation programme and (c) Workstep into sustained employment; and if he will make a statement; [191700]

(2) how much has been spent on (a) Access to Work, (b) Work Preparation and (c) Workstep in each year since 2001, broken down by region; [191710]

(3) what estimate he has made of the average cost per person who has entered (a) an Access to Work programme, (b) a Work Preparation programme and (c) Workstep since 2001. [191712]

Maria Eagle: Information on the costs associated with getting a person into sustained employment through the Access to Work and Work Preparation programmes is not available.

Access to Work helps disabled people who are already employed, or about to start a job by providing a grant to help overcome barriers in the workplace associated with disability. Since the programme began in June 1994, the average Access to Work spend per person is £1,346. The available information on the spend on the Access to Work programme, broken down by region, is in Table 1.

Work Preparation is an individually tailore programme designed to help people with healt conditions or a disability return to work following long period of sickness or unemployment. It can als help people who are at risk of losing their job because their disability by helping them to overcome difficulti that are affecting their work. The available informatio on spend on the Work Preparation programme is Table 2. The average spend per person entering Wor Preparation since 2001 is £1,144.

Workstep provides tailored support to find, secu and retain jobs for disabled people who have mo complex barriers to finding and keeping work. While Workstep, participants who are able to progress in unsupported jobs are given the support to do so, a Workstep continues to help those who cannot. Sin 2001, when Workstep was introduced, an average 1,900 people a year have progressed into unsupport jobs of which Remploy Limited has contributed average of 1,400 progressions per year and no Remploy providers have contributed an average of 5 progressions per year. When a progressed participant in employment six months after the date of progressio and has been in employment for a minimum of 22 wee in a 26-week period, this is deemed to be sustain progression. An outcome payment of £500 per person paid to Workstep providers (except Remploy) wh sustained progression is achieved. The total average spend per person on Workstep (including Remploy) is approximately £6,700.

Information on how much has been spent on Workstep in each year since 2001 broken down by region is not available. Information on national costs in each year is in Table 3.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people who have entered (a) an Access to Work programme, (b) a Work Preparation programme and (c) Workstep in each year since 2001 have gone on to enter sustained employment, broken down by (i) age and (ii) region. [191702]

Maria Eagle: Access to Work is a specialist disability programme, which provides practical advice and support to help disabled people enter or stay in paid employment. The support is aimed at overcoming work related obstacles resulting from disability. It does this through a system of grants towards the cost of providing support.

Types of help available include the additional costs in travelling to work, providing human intervention support in the workplace, adapting work premises and providing special aids and equipment in the workplace.

Access to Work is open to those who are employed as well as people moving out of unemployment and is a highly effective job retention measure.

There are many disabled people, who with the right amount of support are perfectly capable of working if they wish to do so. Access to Work can help provide that support.

Information as requested in the question is not available as customers are already in work or have a job to start.

Work Preparation is an individually tailored, work-focused programme that enables disabled people to address barriers associated with their disability and prepare for working with the confidence necessary to achieve and sustain their job goal.

Although each customer has specific needs, the broad areas, which are addressed during the Work Preparation programmes are the need to develop in one or more of the following areas:

Occupational decision-making

Job-finding behaviours

Job-keeping behaviours

Work-related Illness

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the percentage of people who attributed heart disease to work-related stress in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [196246]

Jane Kennedy: A survey of work-related ill-health in 2001–02 estimated that 80,000 people believed their heart disease, heart attack or circulatory problem was caused or made worse by their work. Information does exist on the number of people in the UK suffering from heart disease but the numbers are not directly comparable with estimates of ill-health and so it is not possible to provide a percentage figure.

Basic State Pension

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) men and (b) women in (i) the Scottish Borders, (ii) Scotland and (iii) the UK are entitled to the full basic State Pension. [198192]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the format requested. The information that is available is in the table.

Area	Men	Women
Great Britain	3,486,000	3,162,500
Scotland	305,500	307,100
Scottish Borders	7,900	7,700

Notes

1. Figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a high degree of sampling variation.

2. Data is rounded to the nearest hundred. Totals may not sum due to rounding.

3. Local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.

4. A full basic State Pension, £77.45 in 2003–04, is paid to those who fully satisfy the contribution conditions either in their own right or where applicable, on the basis of their late or former spouse's contributions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advantage West Midlands

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when Advantage West Midlands was first informed of the possibility that they might no longer be able to account for assets on a portfolio basis but should value and account for assets on an individual basis. [198303]

Jacqui Smith: The National Audit Office first told Advantage West Midlands (AWM) along with all other RDAs of this issue in February 2004. However, the RDAs and the National Audit Office agreed that there should be no change in accounting treatment for the 2003–04 financial year, but that this change in accounting treatment should take effect from 1 April 2004.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether the projects and investments undertaken by Advantage West Midlands meet European state aid requirements; [198305]

(2) how much Advantage West Midlands will make available for revenue funding on new projects in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 in (i) regeneration zones and (ii) elsewhere in the region; [198306]

(3) whether Advantage West Midlands is expected to meet key performance targets on (a) learning opportunities created, (b) jobs created and safeguarded, (c) new business created and attracted and (d) other areas in (i) 2004–05 and (ii) 2005–06; [198307]

(4) to which projects Advantage West Midlands has issued letters imposing claw-back requirements so that funding may be withheld or withdrawn even if schemes reach output performance targets. [198308]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. and learned Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Appointments

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what appointments her Department has made to (a) British Energy plc, (b) BNFL plc, (c) the Export Credits Guarantee Department, (d) Royal Mail plc and (e) the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority since June. [199173]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Batteries

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the impact of a total ban on the sale and use of nickel-cadmium batteries on employment in the United Kingdom. [199279]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of alternatives to nickel-cadmium batteries for uses that (a) require reliability and high discharge and charge rates and (b) need to operate at low temperatures. [199280]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Battery Directive

Mr. Martin Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the UK Government's position on the proposed new EU Battery Directive [COM(2003)723 final]. [199278]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

BT

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she will take to ensure that BT fulfils its obligation to provide an improved IPStream to DataStream migration process in the broadband market. [198016]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Business Angels

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent on promoting the business angel concept in each year since 1998 through (a) grants and (b) business angel networks. [195171]

Nigel Griffiths: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department has provided the following grant funding to the National Business Angels Network to help promote the business angel concept.

	Grant funding (£)
1998	50,000
1999	50,000
2000	340,000
2001	250,000
2002	147,000
2003	165,000
2004	140,500

(b) The Department has not provided any funding to business angels networks. These receive their funding from a variety of sources, including Regional Development Agencies, enterprise agencies and Business Links. We do not hold any information on how much has been spent by the business angels networks on promoting the business angel concept.

Business Regulation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1148W, on business regulation, which of the reviews were conducted by her Department; and what changes to legislation were proposed as a result of each review. [195578]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Business Start-ups

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what rules apply to (a) eligibility for and (b) payment of the Seed Corn Grant scheme; and whether the scheme is available to start-up businesses in (i) Newcastle-under-Lyme and (ii) Stoke-on-Trent. [195704]

Nigel Griffiths: The Business Innovation Centre in Stafford is in receipt of European Regional Development Funds to operate its Seed Corn Grant Scheme, which is available to start-up small businesses in the Objective 2 area of North Staffordshire. This includes both Newcastle-under-Lyme and Stoke-on-Trent. Basic eligibility is determined by the presence or proposed presence of a business in the qualifying area. Detailed criteria and advice on how to apply are available from the Business Innovation Centre.

Business Support

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list spending on (a) business support products and (b) administration by (i) the Small Business Service, (ii) other departmental support for small business and (iii) innovation within the departmental activity of commercial best practice and enterprise in each year since 1997. [197256]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 11 November 2004, Official Report, column 828W, on business support, what financial provisions her Department has made for subsidised consultancy in (a) Grant for Investigating an Innovative Idea and (b) Support to Implement Best Business Practice. [199220]

Nigel Griffiths: Financial provision to help small and medium enterprises to undertake subsidised consultancy projects to improve their competitiveness in the current financial year (2004–05) is:

(a) Grant for Investigating an Innovative Idea is—£1 million; and

(b) Support to Implement Best Business Practice—£8 million.

In both cases this includes the cost of a diagnostic process which helps the business develop its strategy and to formulate the right project.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial provision her Department has made for funding (a) grants for research and development and (b) collaborative research and development business support products. [199230]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding each of the Knowledge Transfer Partner sponsors provided in the last year for which figures are available; and what each sponsor's criteria for funding are. [199231]

Nigel Griffiths: I have placed details of the funding of each of the Knowledge Transfer Partnership sponsors, together with the criteria, in the Libraries of both Houses.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) services and (b) products her Department offers to businesses to enable them to access best business practice; and what financial provision her Department has made for this in the current financial year. [199232]

Nigel Griffiths: Services to encourage and enable businesses to access and adopt best business practice are delivered through DTI business support products and the award winning website www.dti.gov.uk/bestpractice

The Access to Best Business Practice product raises awareness of best practice through the provision of best practice material including: hard copy and on-line publications; fact sheets; case studies; guides; and events promoting best practice. The Support to Implement Best Business Practice product provides SMEs with practical, tailored help to implement specific best practice solutions. It includes an in-depth diagnostic undertaken with a Business Link adviser that assess a company's performance.

We expect to spend £6 million on Access to Best Business Practice, and £8 million on Support to Implement Best Business practice in the current financial year.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Knowledge Transfer Partnerships have been part-funded by Government grant; and what the total cost of these grants was. [199233]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Knowledge Transfer networks have been established; how much has been allocated for grants to support Knowledge Transfer networks; to which organisations; and what financial provision her Department has made for funding Knowledge Transfer networks in the current financial year. [199234]

Nigel Griffiths: Knowledge Transfer Networks were established as one of the ten DTI Business Support products at the launch of the Technology Strategy in April 2004. The assessment process of bids submitted for this call was completed on the 7 November.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many loans have been guaranteed through the Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme since 1995 broken down by (a) region and (b) sector; and what the value of grants was in each case in each year. [199237]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which businesses are involved in the Business Volunteer Mentoring Scheme; and what assessment she has made of the scheme's contribution to British enterprise. [199304]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) role, (b) membership, (c) date of inception and (d) resource budget are of the (i) Small Business Investment Task Force, (ii) Regional Industrial Development Board and (iii) DTI Business Board. [197970]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Car Wise Scheme

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the Car Wise scheme; and if she will make a statement. [194678]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 1 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Carbon Emissions

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the carbon dioxide emission levels were (a) in the UK and (b) in other EU member states at the latest date for which figures are available. [198197]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will publish the latest revisions to her Department's forecasts for energy consumption and carbon emission levels for the UK in (a) 2010 and (b) 2020; and if she will make a statement. [197866]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Casinos

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what meetings (a) she, (b) her departmental Ministers and (c) departmental advisers and officials have held with representatives of (i) Sun City International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) the Mandalay Resort Group, (iv) Kerzner International, (v) Las Vegas Sands Inc.,(vi) Harrah's Entertainment, (vii) Caesar's Entertainment and (viii) other foreign casino firms; what the (A) dates and (B) venues were of the meetings; and which individuals were present. [193721]

Ms Hewitt: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Civil Partnership Bill

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many letters have been received by her Department since 5 March which oppose implementing the Civil Partnership Bill in Northern Ireland. [196441]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 9 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Clear Skies Initiative

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many grants were paid to Scottish-based companies under the Clear Skies Initiative in the last financial year; and what the value was; [194144]

(2) how many grants were paid under the Clear Skies Initiative in the last financial year; [194145]

(3) how many employees of Scottish based companies have been seconded to other companies under the Clear Skies Initiative in the last calendar year; [194146]

(4) how many Scottish based companies are taking part in the mentoring scheme under the Clear Skies Initiative; [194147]

(5) how many Scottish based companies are registered under the Clear Skies Initiative. [194148]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Clear Skies Initiative provides grants for homeowners and community groups in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Grants for homeowners and community groups in Scotland are provided through a parallel scheme, the Scottish Community and Householder Renewables Initiative, which is the responsibility of the Scottish Executive.

In the financial year 2003–04, the Clear Skies Initiative offered 2,556 grants worth £1,541,750 under the householder stream and paid out on 1,923 grants worth £1,101,850. Under the community stream, the initiative offered 167 grants worth £3,365,057 and paid out on 27 worth £306,964.

The Clear Skies Initiative manages installer registration for the UK, including Scotland. There are currently (based on data available at 31 August 2004) 17 organisations in Scotland that are installer registered. It is the installer organisations that are registered and not individual employees or sub-contractors. The DTI does not monitor the secondment of individual employees from these installer organisations.

Based on data available at 31 August 2004, there are currently no Scottish based organisations being mentored. There are four organisations in Scotland that are approved to undertake a mentoring role (although this is voluntary). Other organisations from across England, Wales and Northern Ireland may also undertake a mentoring role for Scottish based organisations.

Coal

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much solid fuel was provided to beneficiaries under the National Concessionary Fuel Agreement in the last year for which figures are available; what the cost was; how many beneficiaries were in receipt of cash in lieu of solid fuel under the Agreement; and what the cost was. [195703]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Collieries

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance has been made available to companies operating the Harworth and Welbeck collieries in the past five years; whether all such finance has been paid; what recent discussions she has held about the collieries' future; and if she will make a statement. [198529]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 17 November 2004]: The following table sets out payments to UK Coal plc since 2000:

	UK coal operating aid scheme			Coal investment aid
	Tranche 1	Tranche 2	Total paid	Period 1	Period 2	Paid to date
Total	52,988,500	22,011,500	75,000,000	37,464,853	13,985,116	5,072,407
Of which:
Harworth	13,609,000	—	13,609,000	4,648,000	1,717,800	1,085,508
Welbeck	—	—	—	5,244,000	2,541,989	918,493

No substantive discussions have been held recently about the collieries' futures. UK Coal have advised us that both are "in review" following operationally difficult periods but hope that this will lead to the development of revised mining plans which will secure the future of both pits.

Companies Act

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the amount paid into court pursuant to the provision of section 430 (11) of the Companies Act 1985 in the last year; and what use the Government have made of these funds. [195645]

Jacqui Smith: Between November 2003 and the end of October 2004 there were approximately 25 cases where payments were made into court under the provisions of section 430 (11) of the Companies Act 1985. Payments into court involved approximately 7,550 individual dissentient shareholdings with an approximate total value of £1.5 million.

The funds are invested with the National Debt Commissioners as directed by the Administration of Justice Act 1982.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the financial sum that has been paid into court pursuant to the provision of section 431 (11) of the Companies Act 1985 in the last year; and what use the Government have made of these funds. [195646]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Construction Industry

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the frequency of Health and Safety inspection in the construction industry and the (a) choice and (b) sanctions against enforcement of breaches reported; and if she will make a statement. [195718]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much expenditure her Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of her Department; and if she will make a statement. [195462]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Corporate Sponsorship

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by her Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies, since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196597]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

COT3 Settlements

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the merits of amending the law so that unpaid COT3 settlements accrue interest on the same basis as awards made by an employment tribunal; and if she will make a statement. [194354]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 28 October 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate she has made of (a) the number of employment tribunal awards which remain unpaid and (b) the number of COT3 settlements which remain unpaid; and what the monetary value of awards was in the last three years; [194355]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost to public funds of employment tribunal processes which resulted in an award which was not paid in the last three years. [194356]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 28 October 2004]: No statistics are available on the number of unpaid employment tribunal awards and COT3 settlements, and it is therefore not possible to estimate any contingent costs. However, DTI officials are working with DCA colleagues towards delivery of the DCA White Paper ('Transforming Public Services: Complaints redress and Tribunals') commitment to improve the enforceability of awards.

Departmental Advertising

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for her Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197300]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department has spent on advertising posts in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [198733]

Ms Hewitt: When running recruitment campaigns, my Department uses the services of advertising agencies to place our advertisements and to seek appropriate media advice, depending on the nature of the post to be filled.

The recruiting management unit generally meet recruitment costs from their own delegated budgets and there are no centrally held records for advertising costs.

Departmental Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with her Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with her Department in each of the past four years. [196900]

Ms Hewitt: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental IT

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the Department's (a) implemented and (b) planned computer systems use open source software; and what plans are in place to raise this level. [195666]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Departmental Policies

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the South Dorset constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on the South Dorset constituency. [194966]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Drinking Water

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the position of the UK Government is in determining the European Union's policy regarding whether to include drinking water in the World Trade Organisation's negotiations on global trade. [192360]

Mr. Alexander: The European Union has requested a number of members of the World Trade Organisation to offer commitments under the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS) that provide for market access in relation to the provision of services related to the supply of water for human use.

Many people in developing countries lack access to clean drinking water and it is a Millennium Development Target to halve the number of people in this position by 2015. Many of these countries need assistance to provide the infrastructure required to meet this target. It is widely recognised that the private sector can have a role to play in this regard.

The EU's requests give developing countries the opportunity to consider whether guarantees of market access may enhance private sector participation. It is for governments to choose for themselves whether or not to open their water services to foreign suppliers. Nothing in GATS forces them to privatise or prevents them regulating appropriately.

The EU's requests reflect the collective interests of the EU and member states. The UK has not itself requested the inclusion of water services.

Economic Initiatives (Newcastle-under-Lyme)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps the Government have taken to help small businesses in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; [198540]

(2) how many new businesses have (a) started up in and (b) relocated to Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198541]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many businesses have benefited from Regional Selective Assistance in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; [198542]

(2) how much Regional Selective Assistance has been invested in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198543]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Newcastle-under-Lyme has received by way of European Objective 2 funding since 1997; and which projects have benefited there from such funding. [198544]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Electricity Supply

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the possibility of electricity blackouts due to lack of gas this winter. [199305]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Employment

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of jobs which (a) moved abroad from the UK and (b) were created in the UK in 2004. [197578]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her estimate is of the number of people in (a) Yeovil constituency, (b) South Somerset and (c) Somerset in work who are earning less than (i) the minimum wage, (ii) £5 per hour, (iii) £5.50 per hour, (iv) £6 per hour, (v) £6.50 per hour, (vi) £7.50 per hour and (vii) £10 per hour; and if she will make a statement. [191313]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Employment Tribunals

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to ensure that companies make payments to former employees that are agreed by an employment tribunal. [199145]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Department has to ensure that employees given awards at employment tribunals against former employers who are subsequently declared bankrupt receive an award. [199240]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Former employees of insolvent employers can claim employment tribunal awards of redundancy payments, basic awards for unfair dismissal, protective awards and awards of other contractual debts such as unpaid wages, notice pay and outstanding holiday pay from Redundancy Payments Offices. All payments are subject to statutory limits. Amounts over the statutory limits can be lodged as debts in the insolvency.

Energy

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government programmes involve incentives for the use of heat generated from renewable sources; and what funding the Government have given to these programmes. [195939]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will develop a heat efficiency strategy for England and Wales. [195946]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is responsible for matters relating to the efficient use of energy, including heat.

With respect to the generation of heat from renewable or low carbon sources, my Department is commissioning a study to assess the size and costs of the available resource.

Energy Supplies (Africa)

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her assessment is of the potential development of energy supplies from sub-Saharan Africa. [R] [192609]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: According to BP's Statistical Review of World Energy 2004, sub-Saharan Africa has significant potential energy reserves, with around 4.2 per cent. of world oil reserves, 3.5 per cent. of world gas reserves and 5 per cent. of world coal reserves.

Energy Use (Public Sector)

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on (a) trends in public sector energy usage over the last five years and (b) proposed trends in public sector energy usage over the next (i) five and (ii) 10 years. [197579]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Use of energy within the public sector fell by 16 per cent. between 1998 and 2003. Projections for energy consumption in this sector indicate further reductions over the next 10 years.

Part E of the Sustainable Development Framework, published in February 2004, sets out the Government's aims for dealing with energy use in the Government Estate. The targets agreed for the central Government Estate are:

> to reduce absolute carbon, from reductions in fuel and electricity used in buildings on their estate, by 12.5 per cent. by 2010–11, relative to 1999–2000;
> to increase the energy efficiency of the buildings on their estate, measured in terms of kWh of (1) fuel and (2) electricity use per square metre of buildings floor area, or estate area, by 15 per cent. by 2010–11, relative to 1999–2000;
> to source at least 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources by 31 March 2008;
> to source at least 15 per cent. of electricity from Good Quality Combined Heat and Power by 2010; > to include clauses to ensure opportunities are identified and measures taken for reducing carbon emissions and collecting energy data (by fuel type), as far as practical, in all estate management contracts initiated from August 2004;
> by March 2006 Government will develop a long-term strategy, up to 2020, for sourcing renewable energy on the Government Estate.

For the purposes of meeting the first target on absolute carbon reductions, all bought-in electricity—including from renewables and CHP—will be converted to carbon at the standard "grid" factor. (Carbon savings from renewables are attributed to the generators, so this procedure avoids double counting these savings.)

Additionally, there are targets for NHS bodies within England to reduce their level of primary energy consumption by 15 per cent. from March 2000 to March 2010.

Energy White Paper 2003

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will (a) list and (b) place copies in the Library of each paper on nuclear power officials of her Department prepared as part of the contribution to the Energy White Paper 2003. [198648]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on protection against dumped imports met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191592]

(2) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on protection against subsidised imports met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191593]

(3) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on common rules for exports of products met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191594]

(4) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Quota Administration Committee met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191595]

(5) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on common rules for imports from certain third world countries met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191612]

(6) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on defence against obstacles to trade which affect the market of the Community or a non-member country met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191613]

(7) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Textile Committee (conventional regime) met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191614]

(8) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on common rules for imports of textile products from certain third world countries (autonomous regime) met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191615]

(9) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee for implementation of the Community market-access strategy met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191616]

(10) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on common rules for imports of products from third countries met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement. [191596]

Mr. Alexander: The number of times that these Committees met is a matter for the EU Commission but if meetings had been called, these Committees would have met in Brussels and a UK Government representative would have attended. No statement is necessary on the workings or running of these Committees.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for the harmonisation of credit insurance provisions for transactions with medium and long-term cover met;

when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement. [191602]

Mr. Alexander: The Committee referred to meets only to consider a limited, number of issues. It did not meet during the Greek presidency.

During the Greek presidency, the European Council Working Group on Export Credits met five times in Brussels. Officials from ECGD were present.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Advisory Committee on (a) State aid for the applications of Articles 92 and 93 of the EC Treaty to certain categories of horizontal State aid (exemption) and (b) State aid on the arrangements for applying Article 93 of the EC Treaty (procedure), met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of each Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [196104]

(2) how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the Committee on the implementation of projects promoting co-operation and commercial relations between the European Union and the industrialised countries in North America, the Far East and Australasia met; when and where these meetings took place; what UK Government expert was present; and if she will make a statement; [191600]

(3) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Standing Committee on technical rules and standards, including rules relating to information society services, met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of each Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194880]

(4) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Management Committee on horizontal questions concerning trade in processed agricultural products not listed in Annex I met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194881]

(5) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for the adaption to technical progress of Directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of detergents met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194882]

(6) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for the adaption to technical progress of Directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of fertilisers met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194883]

(7) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee for the adaptation to technical progress of directives on the removal of technical barriers to trade in the sector of lifting and mechanical handling appliances met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by the (A) EU and (B) UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194891]

(8) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the EC-China RTD Co-operation Steering Committee met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement; [194901]

(9) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the EC-India RTD Co-operation Steering Committee met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194902]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

EU Presidency (Greece)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU (a) the EC-Canada Joint Committee on scientific and technological co-operation, (b) the EC-Russia Joint Committee on scientific and technological co-operation and (c) the EC-Argentina RTD Co-operation Steering Committee met; when and where each meeting took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194348]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU (a) the Advisory Committee for co-operation in the field of tourism, (b) the Committee on conformity assessment and surveillance of the telecommunications market and (c) the Advisory Committee for the transparency of measures governing the pricing of medicinal products for human use met; when and where each meeting took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations each Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of each Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [194351]

Ms Hewitt: The Telecommunication Conformity Assessment and Market Surveillance Committee established under Article 13 of the Radio Equipment and Telecommunications Terminal Equipment Directive (1999/5/EC) met once during the Greek presidency on 12 and 13 March 2003 in Brussels. The UK was represented by three officials from the Department of Trade and Industry and one from the Office of Telecommunications. At this meeting UK officials were involved in discussions on several different technical issues concerning the scope for regulation under the directive and free movement of compliant apparatus. No financial matters were discussed. The outcome of the meeting influenced application of the directive across member states.

EU Social Chapter

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 274W, on the EU Social Chapter, what method was used for calculating the (a) policy costs and (b) administrative costs to employers of providing rights under the Social Chapter. [198008]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures (a) her Department and (b) the Export Credits Guarantee Department (i) has undertaken and (ii) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194423]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to announce revised anti-bribery guidelines within the rules which came into force on 1 May to be followed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [193443]

Mr. Alexander: Discussions with ECGD's customers and their representative bodies concerning the final form of these procedures are nearing their conclusion. Revised application forms will come into force thereafter.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which companies and organisations her Department consulted in drawing up the original anti-bribery guidelines to be followed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department; [193444]

(2) what the results were of the consultation her Department conducted with interested organisations and companies to ascertain their views on the anti-bribery guidelines which came into force on 1 May. [193445]

Mr. Alexander: ECGD's original measures to combat bribery and corruption were the subject of formal consultation with a range of customers' trade associations prior to coming into force in September 2000. Customers and other organisations were informed of subsequent changes to the procedures on four occasions since then, most recently on 4 March 2004.

Following the introduction of revised procedures on 1 May 2004, ECGD and DTI officials have held discussions with interested parties who made representations about their implementation, with a view to resolving issues surrounding the details and practical application of aspects of its existing bribery and corruption procedures.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what new forecasts she is conducting on the monetary impact of her revised anti-bribery guidelines on the volume of business supported by the Export Credits Guarantee Department; and when the results of those new forecasts will be made available; [193447]

(2) what forecasts (a) her Department and (b) the Treasury conducted which estimated the monetary impact of the anti-bribery guidelines which came into force on 1 May 2004 on the volume of business supported by the Export Credits Guarantee Department; and what the results of those forecasts were. [193446]

Mr. Alexander: No forecasts were made into the possible impact of ECGD's anti-bribery and corruption procedures on its future business volumes. These procedures were designed to further the Government's efforts to combat bribery and corruption without placing any undue burden on customers seeking ECGD's support. The current discussions with customers and their trade organisations are aimed at resolving issues surrounding the details and practical application of aspects of the existing anti-bribery and corruption procedures announced on 4 March 2004. The revised procedures emerging from this process will require customers applying for ECGD cover to provide information from sources, which should be readily available to them. They should thus have no material adverse impact on ECGD's future business volumes.

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 5 July 2004, Official Report, column 512W, to the hon. Member for Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central, on the Export Credits Guarantee Department, how much was paid under the Export Credits Guarantee Department to (a) Indonesia and (b) Zimbabwe; when the money was paid in each case; to which company; and for what project. [194124]

Mr. Alexander: A table, which will be placed in the Library, lists the amounts of defence claims authorised for payment and the financial year in which they were authorised for both Indonesia and Zimbabwe. It is not possible to provide a further breakdown of this information on a company or project basis as to do so could prejudice negotiations ECGD is having or will have about recovering debt.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of the revised anti-corruption procedures announced by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 8 November on its capacity to combat bribery and corruption; and what the purpose of the revised procedure is. [198325]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 17 November 2004]: ECGD has undertaken a detailed confidential comparison of its revised anti-bribery and corruption procedures with G7 counterparts. These confirm that the procedures announced by ECGD on 8 November are among the most rigorous and effective in use by any of the world's leading Export Credit Agencies.

The revised procedures are designed to:

Deter illegal payments, corrupt practices and money laundering by applicants for ECGD's support;

Ensure, as far as is practicable, that all transactions that ECGD supports are in compliance with all applicable laws, regulations and international agreements to which the UK is a party; and

In the event that wrongdoing arises, protect the UK taxpayer's financial interests.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications for cover from MW Kellogg the Export Credits Guarantee Department has considered since October 2003. [198044]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will list the guarantees issued to subsidiaries of Halliburton by the Export Credits Guarantee Department since 1 January 2003; and on what dates they were issued; [198045]

(2) how many applications for cover from Kellogg. Brown and Root the Export Credits Guarantee Department has considered since October 2003. [198046]

Mr. Alexander [holding answers 15 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which companies have made representations to her Department regarding the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 1 May; and if she will place these representations in the Library. [195936]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 8 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Export Support

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1724W, on Export Support, on what date she raised the PSA indicator to 40 per cent.; and whether this announcement appears in the 2004 Spending Review. [195797]

Mr. Alexander: The current formulation for the PSA indicator related to new to export companies is

> "At least 30% of new-to-export firms assisted by UK Trade & Investment improve their business performance within 2 years."

The SR2004 settlement sets a suite of new performance indicators for the period 2005–06 to 2007–08. The figure of 30 per cent. will therefore increase to 40 per cent. with effect from 1 April 2005.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1724W, on Export Support, what level of trade development resources is focused on new-to-export firms. [195798]

Mr. Alexander: The level of identifiable trade development resource currently focused on new to export firms is in the order of 30 per cent. New to export firms also benefit from resources such as the UK Trade and Investment portal website, other forms of information giving services (such as the export market research scheme) and other schemes where there is currently no management information available to identify usage by new exporters rather than all exporters.

Fast Patrol Vessel Defender

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if her Department will investigate the circumstances surrounding the acquisition of the Fast Patrol Vessel Defender, which was donated by the Sultan of Oman to Lowestoft to support regional redevelopment; [194189]

(2) what efforts her Department has made to ascertain the (a) whereabouts and (b) condition of the Fast Patrol Vessel Defender from the time of its voyage from Oman; [194190]

(3) how much (a) EU and (b) Government funding has been made available for the Fast Patrol Vessel Defender since its donation to Lowestoft by the Sultan of Oman; and to whom these funds were made payable; [194191]

(4) what report her Department has received on the whereabouts of the Fast Patrol Vessel Defender. [194192]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 28 October 2004]: EU funding of £58,728 was made available for a project to restore the vessel, from the European Regional Development Fund. The ERDF grant was paid to the Maritime Defence Museum (Lowestoft) Ltd. and to its successor company, Lowestoft Maritime Defence Museum Ltd. No Government funding has been made available.

The Government office for the East of England, in conjunction with my Department, is currently investigating the acquisition, whereabouts and condition of the vessel. Government office officials received progress reports during the project to restore the vessel and inspected it at the Isle of Wight in October 2001, and after arrival in Lowestoft in August 2002.

Fluorochemicals

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of the rise in UK gas prices on UK manufacturers of fluorochemicals. [199171]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the likely costs to her Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [199077]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gambling

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what protocols are in place governing the attendance of her departmental officials at trade conventions promoting the interests of the foreign gaming industry. [193722]

Ms Hewitt: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what dates (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the Department have held meetings with representatives of the UK gambling industry to discuss proposed changes to legislation on gambling. [194515]

Ms Hewitt: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State fo Trade and Industry if she will list the overseas visi made by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in th Department in relation to proposed changes t legislation on gambling; what the itinerary was for eac visit; how long each visit lasted; which hotels were use what the cost was in each case; and how each visit wa funded. [19454

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 1 November 2004]: It ha not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in th time available before Prorogation.

Gas/Electricity Supplies

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State fo Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on th adequacy of gas supplies to meet peak gas deman during a (a) one in 20 winter day and (b) period o sustained cold weather in winter 2004–05. [19273

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In its Winter Outlook report published recently, National Grid Transco (NGT forecast that expected beach gas supplies, combine with supplies from the interconnector, LNG an storage, would be sufficient to meet demand in a average winter. If worse than average weather i experienced, or there are supply difficulties, then a effective demand side response would be needed from the market to balance any supply shortfall.

In the unlikely event of a prolonged, severe winter (one in 50 winter), NGT forecast that they would need a increased demand reduction to balance any suppl shortfall.

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average gap between men and women's pay is in (a) England and (b) the Buckingham constituency. [191059]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is as follows:

(a) In April 2004, women's mean hourly pay was 81.0 per cent. of men's hourly pay and median hourly pay for women was 85.2 per cent. of men's median hourly pay in England.

(b) In April 2004, women's mean hourly pay was 88.9 per cent. of men's mean hourly pay in the Buckingham constituency. Reliable median figures for the Buckingham constituency are not available.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether all Government buildings in her Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [199311]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Hunterston A (Contaminated Soil)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will estimate the volume of radioactively contaminated soil within the perimeter fence at the Hunterston A Nuclear Power Plant; what the identity of the contamination is and what its average activity is per cubic meter; what the source of the contamination was; when (a) the operator and (b) her Department first learned about the contamination; whether details about and volumes of the contaminated soil are to be included in the 2004 edition of the National Radioactive Waste Inventory; what plans have been made for the removal of the contaminated material; and what the estimated cost is for dealing with the contamination. [195737]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

IAEA Conference

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether the Government was represented at the conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Beijing on 18 to 22 October; and if she will place in the Library the text of Government statements and submissions to the conference; [197786]

(2) whether the Government was represented at the conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Moscow in June; and if she will place in the Library the text of Government statements and submissions to the conference. [197787]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Industry

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government resources for support to industry, with particular reference to (a) staff and (b) direct financial investment, are invested in (i) the manufacturing sector, (ii) the services sector and (iii) agriculture. [196027]

Jacqui Smith: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Inward Investment

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research her Department has commissioned on projected foreign investment in the UK for 2005–06; and if she will make a statement. [197800]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

IT Skills

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she proposes to take to ensure that the number of students who graduate from information technology courses reaches the levels that are needed by the IT industry as stated by the E-Skills UK and Gartner Consulting research published on 1s November. [197049]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Jaguar

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action is being taken to ensure that Ford's transfer pricing policies do not distort the financial position of Jaguar, with particular reference to the Browns Lane plant. [196498]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195618]

Lending

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to introduce legislation to prevent irresponsible lending by loan sharks; and if she will make a statement. [199244]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government will introduce the Consumer Credit Bill, when parliamentary time permits, to create a fair, clear competitive market which provides comprehensive protection for consumers.

It will do this, in part, by enhancing consumer rights and redress, replacing the current extortionate credit test with a more appropriate one of fairness. In addition, we will improve regulation of consumer credit businesses by strengthening the current licensing regime to keep rogue traders out of the market.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the representation from manufacturing industry is on (a) the Health and Safety Commission and (b) the Better Regulation Task Force. [198196]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Marine Energy Extraction

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will place a copy of the Marine Currents Energy Extraction: Resource Assessment, Final Report, EU-Joule contract JOU2-CT93-00355 (1994-95) in the Library. [191987]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The report originally identified in response to an earlier question was never published. However, we have arranged for the hon. Member to receive a more recent report[1] which sets out the conclusions and results of the earlier study.

A copy will also been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Maternity Leave (Yorkshire)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many women received paid maternity leave in (a) Yorkshire and the Humber and (b) the City of York in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available; and how much on average was paid in each year. [191173]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether the Government retains a golden share in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company; [199262]

(2) what prerogatives of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board over the Mersey littoral were transferred to the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company upon privatisation. [199263]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Midland Hotel, Morecambe

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made with the bid for funding for the Midland Hotel, Morecambe. [196433]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 8 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Migrant Workers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the budget is for the Working Lives Institute's research project on migrant workers commissioned by the East of England Development Agency; what demand there has been for such research; and for what purpose the research results will be used. [195209]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in Manchester, Withington have benefited from the National Minimum Wage since its introduction. [197875]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many workers in Newcastle-under-Lyme she estimates to have benefited from the minimum wage. [198629]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mobile Phone Companies

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which mobile phone companies have signed up to the 10 commitments; and what discussions she has held with those which have not. [197989]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Motor Mechanics

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her assessment is of the procedures for (a) recruitment, (b) development and (c) assessment of mechanics in the UK motor servicing industry; and what measures are being taken to improve them. [199247]

Jacqui Smith: It is the responsibility of the UK retail motor industry sector's professional bodies, that is, the Retail Motor Industry Federation (RMIF) and Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI), amongst others, to lead in the development, training and assessment of mechanics and other technicians.

However, the Government are playing their part too. The DFES has funded a new sector skills council, Automotive Skills Limited (ASL), who are undertaking a strategic assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of both management and technician skills within the retail motor industry, and working with the RMIF and IMI and the other professional bodies within the sector in developing a strategy to raise standards in the industry and spread best practice.

Motorsport Industry

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had to ensure that the high technological manufacturing associated with the motorsport industry remains in the UK. [195602]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Nanotechnology

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to encourage nanotechnology research and development in the UK; and how such steps relate to EU support for nanotechnology research and development within the EU. [197566]

Ms Hewitt: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Nuclear Fusion Reactor (France)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has held with her counterparts in the (a) French, (b) Russian and (c) Chinese Governments about the proposal to site a nuclear fusion reactor in the South of France; and what assessment she has made of the opportunities that such a proposal would afford to the British nuclear industry. [198731]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The European Commission is negotiating with the international partners on behalf the member states. Official level discussions have taken place with the international fusion community on what the ITER (International Tokamak Experimental Reactor) programme might entail.

UKAEA, which manages the UK fusion programme, facilitates links between UK industry and ITER. This includes raising awareness of potential opportunities and informing the ITER design engineers of UK companies whose goods and services may be useful.

Offshore Licensing Regime (Gas)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review the offshore licensing regime for gas producers operating on the UK continental shelf with a view to bringing them within the regulatory remit of Ofgem. [198780]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Offshoring

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 649W, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Anniesland (John Robertson), on offshoring, if she will place a copy of the evidence referred to in the Library. [193462]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Older Workers

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates she has made of the proportion of British firms that have no employees aged (a) over 60 years and (b) state pension age. [194819]

Jacqui Smith: The information is as follows:

(a) The Department of Work and Pensions (DWP) undertook an evaluation of the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment. As part of the study, they asked employers for the age profile of their workforce, with emphasis on those aged 50 or over. The results of the survey, which was carried out three waves during the years 1999 to 2000, showed that about 43 per cent. of employers in Great Britain had no employees of 60 years and over.

(b) Although DWP did not report on the numbers of employers who had no employees aged over the state pension age, ONS figures show in September 2004 988,000 people in employment were over the state pension age. This represents a 24.7 per cent. rise on the April 1997 figure.

Outsourcing

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the financial benefits to the UK of outsourcing (a) manufacturing and (b) service sector jobs overseas. [197557]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Parental Leave

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the value in terms of (a) wages and (b) saved childcare costs of statutory (i) paid maternity leave and (ii) paid paternity leave to workers in (A) the UK and (B) each region in the last year for which figures are available. [185322]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation

Parliamentary Questions

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to answer the Questions (a) 195698 and (b) 195704 tabled by the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme for named day answer on 4 November. [198514]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 November 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 November 2004, Official Report, columns 1615–16W, and UIN195704 which has been answered today.

Performance Targets

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measurable progress her Department has made towards meeting its Public Service Agreement target (a) to raise the rate of UK productivity growth over the economic cycle, (b) to improve UK competitiveness and (c) to narrow the productivity gap with the US, France and Germany. [198509]

Ms Hewitt: HM Treasury estimates set out in Budget 2004 show that the trend rate of underlying productivity growth has increased from 2.22 per cent. per annum between 1986 Q2 and 1997H1 to 2.65 per cent. per annum between 1997H1 and 2001 Q3. Trend productivity growth is projected to be 2.35 per cent. per annum between 2001 Q4 and 2006 Q4.

Data from the Office of National Statistics (ONS) published in autumn 2004 shows that, on the output per hour worked measure, the UK has narrowed the gap with Germany since 2000 but a sizeable productivity gap with the US, France and Germany remains. On the output per worker measure, the UK's productivity gap with the US, France and Germany is broadly unchanged, though the UK is as productive as Germany on this measure. Comparisons are relative to a 2000 base year when all four countries were at a similar point in their economic cycles.

However, it takes time to raise competitiveness and increase productivity. Consequently, in assessing progress towards raising productivity, it is reasonable to look for changes in the drivers of productivity. The Government have identified "five drivers" of productivity—investment, innovation, skills, enterprise and competition— and has monitored performance on a range of productivity and competitiveness indicators underlying these drivers since 1999. Some progress has been made on all five of these "high-level" drivers. In particular, there have been improvements in the competition regime, evidence of rising skills levels across the workforce and improvements in the UK's world-class science base. The Government are continuing to invest in these areas through the Skills Strategy, the Innovation Report and DTI's Five Year Programme.

Photofinishing

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of how many people are employed (a) permanently and (b) seasonally in the mail order photofinishing industry. [197524]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Plutonium Transport Ships

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the transport ships, Pacific Teal and Pacific Pintail were operating on Government service in the recent movement of plutonium from the US to France. [197862]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost was in (a) investigations and (b) administration to the UK Government in preparation for the transport of plutonium from the United States to France aboard the Pacific Teal and Pacific Pintail. [197863]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role the UK Government played in (a) reviewing and (b) approving the security arrangements provided by the United States and France for the transport of plutonium from the United States to France aboard the Pacific Teal and Pacific Pintail. [197864]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what liability was agreed by the Office of Civil Nuclear Security in respect of the shipment of plutonium from the United States to France aboard the Pacific Teal and Pacific Pintail. [197865]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Polluter Pays Policy

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the polluter pays policy has been applied to the Luneside East development in Lancashire. [196432]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 8 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Post Office

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what timetable has been established to draw down the balance of £24.6 million in respect of improvement investment grants to Post Office Limited. [193292]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many post offices have received payments under the Urban Investment Programme; and what the average payment has been to each post office; [198890]

(2) what the average compensation payment has been to sub-postmasters leaving the business in (a) each constituency and (b) each region under the Urban Reinvention Programme; [198891]

(3) what proportion of the urban population lived within one mile of a post office or sub-post office in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) each constituency and (c) each region at the most recent date for which information is available; [198893]

(4) how many post offices in (a) each constituency and (b) each region were recommended for closure under the Urban Reinvention Programme; how many were (i) opposed by and (ii) approved by Postwatch; how many (A) closed and (B) remained open after public consultation; and how many were saved from closure on appeal by Postwatch. [198894]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Implementation of the urban post office network programme is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding under the Urban Investment Programme for post offices remains to be spent; and what timetable has been established to draw down the balance in respect of improvement investment grants to Post Office Ltd. [198892]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Operation of the urban reinvention programme, including consideration of applications from subpostmasters for investment grant funding, is a matter for Post Office Ltd. The Department has not imposed a timetable for the use of this funding. It was always anticipated that there would be some time lag between closure decisions being announced and take up of investment grant funding. Post Office Ltd is now beginning to see take up of this increase and expects further increases as the restructuring of the network continues and subpostmasters become more confident about their future prospects. Post Office Ltd has devoted additional resources to establish a separate team dedicated to promoting and supervising the implementation of investment required to upgrade remaining offices and fully expects to utilise the £30 million available. To date, the DTI has paid £5,448,897 to Post Office Ltd under the urban reinvention programme for investment grant funding.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Post Office on its definition of rurality. [198972]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Ministers and officials of the Department meet frequently with Post Office Ltd to discuss a wide range of post office issues. The classification of a post office branch as urban or rural is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. The broad definition of 'rural' used by the Post Office applies to communities of up to 10,000 people, the Countryside Agency definition. The company has carried out detailed planning to establish which of its branches serve either rural or urban areas and has specially developed a sophisticated geographical mapping computer model, which measures population in terms of contiguous or very close agglomeration. Thus where a number of villages or small communities adjoin each other or adjoin a larger town, and the aggregate population of the area exceeds 10,000, the model reflects that fact and classifies it as urban. Post Office Ltd has adopted a consistent approach nationally to classifying the entire post office network.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of the subsidy to the rural post office network has been allocated to (a) Post Office Ltd. infrastructure, (b) fixed payments to sub-postmasters and (c) the development of new methods of delivering post office services in rural areas since the subsidy was introduced. [199238]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Of the £450 million a year made available for the financial years 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06, £198 million has been allocated to fund fixed payments to sub-postmasters, £227 million has been allocated to fund the costs incurred by Post Office Ltd. in providing the support services that underpin sub-post offices, and £25 million has been allocated to a flexible fund to meet the cost of pilot activity to test new and innovative ways of delivering services in a more sustainable way.

Details of the allocations for the £300 million extended funding announced on 16 September (covering 2006–07 and 2007–08) have not yet been decided.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new methods of delivering Post Office services have been funded from the subsidy paid to support the rural post office network. [199239]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A wide range of pilot activities has been funded by Post Office Ltd. from the flexible fund element of the subsidy paid to support the rural post office network.

The business has focused its attention on three broad issues in its pilot work to date. These are network shape (getting the right type of outlet in the right location), infrastructure (adapting IT, communication and other systems to make them flexible enough to cater for new ways of delivering services), and developing new revenue streams for rural sub-postmasters.

The work on network shape includes trials of "hub and spoke" solutions involving a sub-postmaster visiting a number of locations at set times each week, partnerships to make part-time post office services available from pubs, tourist information centres and libraries, and a community bus initiative to take people to a post office in a nearby village.

The work on infrastructure includes trials of new ways to connect the Horizon IT equipment used by sub-postmasters to the network, including the connection of mobile post offices, testing of "weigh and vend" equipment for postal services, and testing mobile solutions for banking services and cash points.

The work on increasing revenue for rural sub-postmasters has includes the-pro vision of "A-Frames" for advertising the presence of the branch, special marketing packs to promote new banking, financial and travel services, and partnerships with the police to make some police services accessible through rural post offices establishing an additional income stream for sub-postmasters.

Postal Services (Blind People)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Post Office about the continuance of the free postal service for people who are blind; and if she will make a statement. [195504]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 2 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Premium Rate Dialler Programmes

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she intends to take to protect the public from the unwanted installation of premium rate dialler programmes on computers connected to the internet; and if she will make a statement. [197934]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 15 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Premium Rate Phone Industry

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to (a) review and (b) amend the regulation of the premium rate telephone industry. [197843]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Product Safety

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 644W, on product safety, what the issues are which have given rise to the delay in the transposition of the General Product Safety Directive 2001/95/EC. [197119]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Publishing

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have to make available funds for pilot projects to assess the best method by which publishers and the voluntary sector can share resources and expertise to make more titles available in accessible formats more promptly for people with reading disabilities. [198015]

Jacqui Smith: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

PV Technology

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the future of photovoltaic (PV) technology within the UK energy market; and what plans she has to promote the use of PV technology. [198063]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Radioactive Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information she has received from the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management in respect of its work in compiling a national inventory of radioactive waste. [197208]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Regulations

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what her latesf estimate is of the costs to business in a year of compliance with all the regulations imposed by her Department; [196567]

(2) what the aggregate annual cost to business is of regulations imposed by her Department, using the figures in the relevant regulatory impact assessments, since 1997; [196566]

(3) which regulations have to be complied with to set up a small company running a restaurant, where the buildings need to be adapted; [196568]

(4) which regulations need to be satisfied by a small business setting up new premises to trade as a financial adviser. [196569]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reference numbers are for the regulatory impact assessments for the major pieces of legislation affecting business introduced by her Department since 1997. [197880]

Nigel Griffiths: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Renewable Energy

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money the UK

Government has spent on (a) solar and (b) wind powered forms of renewable energy since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [198064]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Renewables Obligation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in her review of the Renewables Obligation, she will take account of the impact on Renewable Obligation Certificate trading of companies which have defaulted on their payments because of (a) insolvency and (b) other factors; and what additional (i) incentives and (ii) sanctions are being considered to make the scheme more effective. [197900]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will publish the submissions made (a) to her in advance of her review of the Renewables Obligation and (b) to the review. [197901]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Research

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the (a) impact and (b) success of basic research in the UK is being assessed; and how it will be assessed in the future. [195505]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are being taken (a) to prevent the best young scientists from leaving (i) research and (ii) the UK and (b) to attract young scientific talent from abroad. [195506]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 3 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Royal Mail

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact on the greetings card industry of the Royal Mail's proposals to move to size-based pricing. [197522]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of the Royal Mail's proposals for size-based pricing on the mail order photofinishing industry. [197527]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Second-hand Clothing Exports (Africa)

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place with UK charities regarding the future of second-hand clothing exports to Africa; and what assessment has been made of the impact of this trade on clothing manufacture in Africa. [198262]

Mr. Alexander: Neither UK Trade and Investment nor DTI Clothing and Textiles team are aware of any discussions having taken place with UK charities regarding the future of second-hand clothing exports to Africa, neither are we aware of any assessment having been made of this impact on clothing manufacture.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many recommendations by parliamentary Select Committees have been adopted by her Department since June 2001. [197770]

Ms Hewitt: Select Committee reports are given very careful consideration by the Department's Ministers. Since June 2001, several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which the Department of Trade and Industry is responsible. Select Committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

Sellafield Mox Plant

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the output is to date of the Sellafield Mox Plant in terms of (a) quantity of mox fuel produced, (b) the number of mox pellets produced, (c) the number of fuel rods produced and (d) the number of fuel assemblies produced; what percentage of the total capacity of the plant this output represents; what the planned output is for each of the next five years; and if she will make a statement on the future operating arrangements of the plant. [199282]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Shareholder Executive

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her reply of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1152W, on the Shareholder Executive, if she will list the organisations with which the Shareholder Executive consults on a regular basis. [199172]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what bonus scheme applies to the directors of the Shareholder Executive. [199174]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the contract of the chief executive of the Shareholder Executive expires; and what contractual agreement applies to an early departure. [199175]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her reply of 26 October 2004, Official Report, column 1150W, on the Shareholder Executive, if she will make a statement on the nature of the clearly defined policy framework by which she will assess the Shareholder Executive. [199176]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Shareholder Executive will publish an annual report of its performance. [199177]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she has taken to provide the Shareholder Executive with appropriate policies regarding (a) working practices and (b) conflict of interest management; and what plans she has to develop the Shareholder Executive's corporate governance structure incorporating (i) public sector monitoring, (ii) mission oversight and (iii) procedural auditing. [199178]

Ms Hewitt: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Tariffs (USA)

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the US Administration in connection with reductions in tariffs and other trade barriers. [197479]

Mr. Alexander: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Telecommunications

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department has held recent discussions with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the impact of non-domestic rates on the Government's policy for a competitive market in telecommunications. [195850]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The independent rates review on the impact of non-domestic rating on the telecommunications sector, which is being held by the Broadband Stakeholders Group (BSG), includes representatives from DTI and the Valuation Office Agency (VGA), the latter representing the interests of the agency and ODPM.

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department has carried out analysis of the impact of the non-domestic propert rating system on the development of a competitive telecommunications market. [195851]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Television

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to ensure there is a competitive market in television provision to residential customers (a) between infrastructure providers and (b) within each infrastructure provision. [199206]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Utilities

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she will take to protect those on lower incomes from the effects of recent increases in gas and electricity prices; and if she will make a statement. [199212]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am working with the industry, Ofgem, Energywatch and the caring and voluntary organisations to ensure that customers on lower income are aware, and take advantage, of the significant reductions that can be made to energy bills by transferring supplier, using the cheapest and simplest payment methods, installing energy efficiency measures and accessing social programmes, such as Warm Front.

Wind Farms

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State fo Trade and Industry what steps she is taking in respect o charges for connecting major wind farm projects to th national grid; and if she will make a statement. [198054

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It has not proved possible t respond to the hon. Member in the time availabl before Prorogation.

HEALTH

Cold Weather Mortality

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Healt what action is being taken to reduce the number of winte deaths of pensioners due to cold weather. [19922

Dr. Ladyman: There are four main strands to th efforts nationally to reduce avoidable winter deaths:

Immunisation of older people against influenza an pneumococcal disease.

Increasing awareness among older people of the risks of co weather, and the benefits and other help available to ke homes warm.

The national fuel poverty strategy.

Improving our ability to link the forecasting of cold weather with measures designed to prevent people from becoming ill, as well as to improve the ability of the health service to plan for surges in demand, especially for hospital admission.

Winter fuel payments are significant, well-timed payments that are part of the Government's strategy on eradicating fuel poverty. They provide help for older households towards their winter fuel bills. Households with someone aged 60 or over receive £200 and those with someone aged 80 or over receive £300. They provide help for older people to heat their homes adequately during the coldest months without being fearful of the ability to meet the extra cost. The majority of payments are made by Christmas.

In addition to the winter fuel payment, customers receiving pension credit, who are not in a care home, are eligible to receive cold weather payments. Cold weather payments are made when the average temperature at a particular weather station is recorded as, or is forecast to be, zero degrees Celsius or below over seven consecutive days. Every residential postcode in the country is linked to one of the 73 weather stations used in the scheme. When a period of cold weather occurs, or is forecast, then payments to qualifying customers in receipt of pension credit are made automatically. The amount paid is £8.50 for each period of cold weather.

A target for influenza vaccination in those aged 65 and over has been set since the change in policy in 2000–01.

In 2000–01, the target was 60 per cent., in 2001–02 65 per cent, and in 2002–03; and 2003–04, 70 per cent. Uptake achieved has been 65 per cent., 68 per cent., 69 per cent, and 71 percent. respectively.

The number of people aged 65 and over receiving their flu immunisation this year was 5,781,440—over 295,000 more people than last year. This year's result is an excellent achievement and exceeds our target of 70 per cent. set at the start of the campaign.

The joint committee on vaccination and immunisation (JCVI) has recommended extending pneumococcal immunisation to all aged 65 years and over.

The new policy is to offer immunisation with pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine to all people aged 65 years and over. However, we are introducing the policy in stages. To start with, people aged 80 and over, who are most at risk from pneumococcal disease, will be offered the vaccine in 2003–04. They will be followed by all those aged 75 and over in 2004–05. By 2005–06, all those aged 65 and over should routinely be offered pneumococcal vaccine.

People under these ages who are at higher risk from pneumococcal disease are already recommended to receive the vaccine. This includes people who have a heart condition, chronic lung disease, diabetes mellitus, a weakened immune system due to disease or treatment, a damaged spleen or no spleen.

We will be collecting data on the number of people receiving their pneumococcal vaccination, but this will not be available until after April 2004.

A "Keep Warm, Keep Well" campaign operates in England each winter. This provides free booklets for the public and special literature for health professionals; a telephone helpline, and advice on how those most in need may apply for grants, such as the Warm Front grant—a scheme providing grant for comprehensive packages of insulation and heating improvements for those on low incomes most vulnerable to cold-related ill health; advice on benefit payments, as well as the health benefits of keeping warm.

The relationship between indoor temperatures and ill health is complex, with other factors such as outside exposure and behavioural factors involved. However, the likelihood of ill health is increased by cold damp homes. Illnesses such as influenza, heart disease and strokes are all exacerbated by the cold and older people are especially vulnerable.

The Department is working together with other Government Departments to reduce the number of households in fuel poverty. Good progress has already been made, with the number of fuel-poor households falling from approximately 5.5 million in 1996 to about 3 million in 2001, with predictions of a further reduction of 0.5 million for 2002.

Health professionals within the national health service have been made fully aware of fuel poverty as a potential health determinant and have been widely encouraged to identify and advise patients for whom cold, damp home conditions might be a health risk.

At the local level, fuel poverty is on the agenda of many health professionals in delivering fuel poverty initiatives and fuel poverty has been identified as a key priority within the health inequalities programme for action.

Her Majesty's Treasury funding was made available up to April 2003 to allow some exploratory work, led by the Meteorological Office, to develop models to forecast workload for primary and secondary care, built in part on weather forecasting. The evaluation of this exploratory work was inconclusive. Preliminary discussions are currently under way between the NHS, the Department and the Meteorological Office to determine next steps and in particular whether it is possible to:

Refine the approaches taken to preventative interventions, targeted in time and place so as to gain maximum benefit for patients before they fall ill.

Manage NHS workload more proactively than at present, so that services, including hospitals, are better placed to manage surges in demand, particularly for hospital admission.

Mobile Telephones

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Mobile Telephone Health Research Programme will report; whether there are interim findings; and if he will make a statement. [199301]

Miss Melanie Johnson: 29 projects have received support either directly under the mobile telecommunication and health research (MTHR) programme or its adjunct funding arrangements. Six of these have been completed and were announced at the MTHR research seminar in London on 10 November. The programme encourages publication in open peer-reviewed scientific journals.

Published papers and brief summaries of the individual projects are routinely posted on the MTHR we site at www.mthr.org.uk.

Residential Drug Treatment

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is between someone requesting residential drug treatment and (a) funding becoming available and (b) a bed becoming available if the treatment is privately funded was in the latest period for which figures are available. [198942]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information on waiting times for residential drug treatment funded privately is not collected centrally.

As far as residential drug treatment funded publicly, the average waiting time between assessment as being in need of residential rehabilitation and entering residential rehabilitation is three weeks[1].

[1] At June 2004.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people accessing residential drug treatment do so (a) as part of a community order, (b) through the criminal justice system and (c) voluntarily. [198933]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The total percentage of people accessing all drug treatment through criminal justice referral routes—arrest referral, drug treatment and testing orders, youth offending teams, probation and counselling, assessment, referral and throughcare—was 17 per cent. in 2003–04[1].

The remaining 83 per cent. accessed treatment by non-criminal justice system roots, including: other drug services (national health service and non-statutory agencies); general practitioners; self-referral; accident and emergency; needle/syringe exchange; psychiatry; community care assessment and employment services.

However, the figure of 83 per cent. may contain some people referred through criminal justice sources who have presented at a treatment service without indicating that they have come into treatment through a criminal justice referral.

[1] Source—National drug treatment monitoring system data.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many residential drug treatment centres are specifically for young people; and if he will make a statement on what steps his Department is taking to tackle young people misusing drugs, with particular reference to those in contact with the criminal justice system. [198934]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people in residential drug treatment are funded (a) privately, (b) by primary care trusts and (c) with a combination of private funds and primary care trust funds. [198935]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not collected centrally.

Abortions

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Healt for what reasons the 2003 abortion statistics do nc specify the nature of the disabilities giving rise t abortion under ground E, risk that the child would b born handicapped. [18904

Miss Melanie Johnson: As stated in the Statistica Bulletin Summary Abortion Statistics, England an Wales: 2003, the format of tables changed to reflec concerns over issues of privacy and confidentiality These issues are now being considered in more detail.

Administration

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Healt what the (a) total budget and (b) administratio budget was for each (i) NHS region in each year fron 1997 to 2002 and (ii) strategic health authority in eacl year since they were established. [19727

Mr. Hutton: It has not proved possible to respon to the hon. Member in the time available befor Prorogation.

Air Ambulances

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State fo Health what the total operating budget is of each ai ambulance service in England; and what proportion o these budgets is grant-aided by the national healt service. [19925

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not hel centrally as air ambulances are provided throug charitable organisations.

The Department informed ambulance services an their commissioners in January 2002 that the cost o clinical staff on air ambulances should from 1 Apri 2002 be met by the national health service on continuing basis.

Alzheimer's

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Healt what the total amount of Government funding fo research on Alzheimer's disease was in (a) 1997 (b) 2000 and (c) 2003. [19709

Miss Melanie Johnson: The main agency throug which the Government support medical and clinica research is the Medical Research Council (MRC) The MRC is an independent body funded by th Department of Trade and Industry via the Office o Science and Technology. MRC expenditure on researc into Alzheimer's disease and general dementia in th years in question was as follows.

	£ millio
1997–98	5.
2000–01	8.
2002–03	6.
2003–04	[1]

[1] Not yet available.

The Department funds research to support policy an to provide the evidence needed to underpin qualit improvement and service development in the nationa health service. National research programme expenditure on projects related to Alzheimer's disease and dementia was as follows.

	£ million
1997–98	0.4
2000–2001	4.7
2002–03	1.6
2003–04	1.1

Anaemia

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition will report on iron deficiency anaemia. [199138]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The report on iron and health by the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition's Working Group on Iron is expected to be available for comment in summer 2005, with finalisation in spring 2006.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage the iron intake of children to prevent childhood anaemia; and what assessment it has made of the incidence of childhood anaemia in the UK over the last 20 years. [199139]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has not been possible to respond the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Cancer

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of health inequalities between socio-economic groups in terms of cancer (a) treatments and (b) outcomes; and if he will make a statement. [197257]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 9 November 2004]: We know there are differences in health outcomes for different socio-economic groups. However, we are aware that people diagnosed with cancer in deprived areas suffer from higher mortality rates than those in wealthier areas. We have recently announced a new public service agreement which includes a target from April 2005 to achieve a reduction in the inequalities gap of at least 6 per cent. in cancer mortality between the fifth of areas with the worst health and deprivation indicators and the population as a whole by 2010. We will work with organisations in deprived areas to see what interventions can help reduce inequalities in treatments and outcomes. We envisage this will probably be achieved through a range of measures including reducing smoking prevalence, tackling obesity, improving screening coverage, including bowel cancer screening, and ensuring that patients with symptoms that could be cancer present earlier to their general practitioner.

Care Homes

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) residential care home and (b) nursing home places were available in West Derbyshire in each year since 1997, broken down into places available at (i) local authority-run homes, (ii) independent private homes and (iii) homes run by independent charities and other not-for-profit organisations. [198365]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are not available for the area requested. The table shows the number of care home places available for adults aged 18 and over by type of home in Derbyshire at 31 March for the years 1997 to 2001.

I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that figures for later years were collected by the National Care Standards Commission, and now CSCI, but comparable details are not available.

The number of care home places in Derbyshire[1] 1997–2001

Cervical Cancer

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the benefits of liquid cytology testing for cervical cancer since the roll-out of the technique started; [198917]

(2) how many women in each strategic health authority have been enrolled on human papilloma virus testing pilots; how many have taken up liquid cytology testing for cervical cancer; and if he will make a statement; [198828]

(3) what progress has been made with the introduction of human papilloma virus testing and liquid cytology testing; and what plans he has for future roll-out. [198862]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answers 17 November 2004]: Following the evaluation of a Government-funded pilot study of liquid based cytology (LBC), the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) concluded in October 2003 that this new technology should be rolled out across the national health service cervical screening programme. It will take five years to implement LBC across England, as all staff who read the tests or take the tests will have to be retrained. The Department is providing £7.2 million over the next two years to kick-start this process. We are starting by converting the 10 regional cytology training schools, which will then be able to train the rest of the programme. As at November 2004, nine out of the 10 training schools had been trained or had a specific date to begin their retraining. The tenth is awaiting a local decision on which system they will use. As LBC is rolled out, it will be subject to the same rigorous quality assurance procedures as the current programme, along with an annual statistical return.

The NICE decision followed successful piloting of LBC for a 12 month period between 2001 and 2002 at three sites: North Bristol, Newcastle, and Norfolk and Norwich. The pilot sites have continued to use LBC, and latest figures for 2002–03 are shown in the table.

Pilot site	Eligible population	Number of women screened using LBC in 2002–03	Coverage for 2002–03[1] (percentage)
North Bristol Avon; Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA)	54,100	10,300	75.8
Newcastle Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA	62,800	16,800	81.6
Norfolk and Norwich Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire SHA	31,500	7,100	78.7

[1] Coverage for 2002–03 is defined as the percentage of eligible women in a population who have a screening test recorded in the last five years. In England, women aged 20 to 64 are invited for cervical screening every three to five years.

Source:

Statistical bulletin—cervical screening programme, England: 2002–03.

As part of the LBC pilot, we also piloted the use of HPV testing as triage for women with mild or borderline test results.

According to the official evaluation of the pilot, a total of 3,681 women received HPV tests across the three pilot sites. The advisory committee on cervical screening is now considering how best to take forward HPV testing in England, following consideration of the draft final report of the evaluation of the pilot.

Cholesterol

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to reduce cholesterol levels in the adult population. [195481]

Miss Melanie Johnson: High intakes of saturated fat can raise cholesterol levels. The Government provide practical guidance on how consumers can reduce the saturated fat in their diets through healthy eating advice. As part of a balanced diet, foods rich in saturated fat need to be replaced with unsaturated fats such as oil rich fish and foods containing oils such as sunflower, rapeseed and olive oils.

The Government have also conducted a major consultation exercise on improving public health, covering a range of lifestyle issues, including diet and physical activity. Responses to the consultation have informed the development of a White Paper on improving health, due later this year. The Department of Health also funds a range of non-governmental organisations to increase awareness of the benefits of eating a healthy diet and active lifestyles.

High cholesterol is a significant risk factor for coronary heart disease (CHD), stroke and related diseases. The Department's National Service Framework (NSF) for CHD sets out modern standards and service models for the NHS for the prevention and treatment of CHD.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in developing a national cholesterol awareness campaign. [199196]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Although there are no specific commitments to a national cholesterol awareness campaign in "Choosing Health": making healthy choices easier, the Government have committed to bring together messages that raise awareness of health risks with information about action that people can take themselves to address those risks for example by changing their diet, taking more exercise or seeking advice through telephone help lines, local health improvement services. Early focus will be on a new cross-Government campaign to raise awareness of the health risks of obesity, and the steps people can take through diet and physical activity to prevent obesity.

Choose and Book Work

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when general practitioners will be paid for Choose and Book work. [197509]

Mr. Hutton: Choose and Book will give patients greater involvement in the choices and decisions about their treatment. It should not increase the overall workload for GP practices, whilst allowing general practice to offer patients a more personal and convenient service.

The Department is in an ongoing process of engagement with stakeholders regarding Choose and Book and general practice.

Chronic Illness

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS o chronic illness in 2003–04. [195997

Dr. Ladyman: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available befor Prorogation.

Community Matrons

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Healt if he will estimate the cost of introducing 3,00 community matrons in the NHS. [19147

Mr. Hutton: It is not possible at this time to estimate the total cost of introducing 3,000 community matrons at this stage. Detailed work is ongoing to determine the level of training required and appropriate grade for this new staff group.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what duties community matrons will undertake that are not already carried out by other health professionals. [196297]

Mr. Hutton: Many patients with complex and high intensity needs do not benefit from a case management approach within current services. In their role as case managers, community matrons will be responsible for assessing physical, emotional and social needs and ensuring these needs are addressed through nursing and other local services. This will thereby improve the quality of life for this group of patients and prevent unnecessary admission to hospital.

Community Transport

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was given to community transport schemes by each primary care trust in the last year for which figures are available. [196379]

Mr. Hutton: The information is not collected by the Department.

Complaints Procedure

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the recognised complaints procedure is for NHS patients treated by private treatment centres; [197954]

(2) whether his Department has received complaints about the standard of treatment provided to NHS patients by Netcare treatment centres. [197957]

Mr. Hutton: The responsibility for handling complaints rests with the appropriate national health service primary care trust or acute trust that referred the patients to the independent treatment centre. Such complaints are handled through the NHS complaints process. The Department is not involved in the resolution of such complaints.

Under contract terms, the Department is required to be notified by an independent treatment centre of any complaints in relation to treatment they provide to NHS patients. To date, the Department has been notified of seven such cases.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195445]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I regret it is not possible to identify separately costs for work carried out by external consultants to deal with press and public relations. This information can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Contraception

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the NHS budget was spent providing free contraception in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of NHS spending that represented. [198980]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The cost of contraceptives and contraceptive devices dispensed in the community in England in 2003–04 is shown in the table. This does not include items issued in family planning clinics, for which data is not held centrally. It is not, therefore, possible to calculate the figure for spending on contraception, as a proportion of total national health service spend.

Prescription cost analysis data: Number of prescription items (in million) and net ingredient cost (NIC) in £ million, for contraceptives and contraceptive devices—British National Formulary (BNF) 7.3 and 21.4—dispensed in the community in England, 2003–04

Dementia

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of care for dementia in 2003–04. [195998]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Dentistry

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 1 September 2004, Official Report, columns 886–87W, on dentistry, how many inquiries the returning to dentistry response line received; how many application forms were sent out; and how many have been returned indicating a willingness to return to work in NHS dentistry. [195033]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Up to the start of October the dentistry response line had received 288 calls. Literature was sent to 222 people. 37 people have so far registered with the Keeping in Touch with dentistry (KITs) scheme.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding his Department makes available to encourage dentists to join the NHS; and whether there are conditions attached to the funding to encourage dentists to remain within the NHS. [198245]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not been possible to respond the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to improve access to NHS dentistry in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198565]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Figures for the number of dentists are not available for Newcastle-under-Lyme Primary Care Trust (PCT) prior to 2002, when the PCT was established. The number of dentists within the Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area has increased from 392 in September 1997 to 449 in June 2004; this is an increase of 14.5 per cent. Of the £35 million additional funding announced in September 2003 to improve access, choice and quality for patients in areas that have problems, Newcastle-under-Lyme PCT has received £69,000. Of the further £15 million announced in November 2003 to develop easier access and improve quality further, Newcastle-under-Lyme PCT received £30,000. The PCT has also received an additional £10,000 modernisation funding for salaried primary care dental services, which is to be shared across North Staffordshire.

Newcastle-under-Lyme PCT has a target of increasing dental registrations by 1,375 by 2005. Shropshire and Staffordshire SHA reports that the PCT is on the way to achieving this.

In addition, Newcastle-under-Lyme PCT is involved in the Department of Health's latest round of international recruitment. Two practices are planning to interview prospective new dentists during early December.

Shropshire and Staffordshire SHA reports that the PCT will be setting up, and directly managing, a salaried dental suite at Cross Heath. This will provide additional registrations primarily for the local population.

Provisions in the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 will underpin a modernised, high-quality primary dental service. A new contract for dentists will be introduced from October 2005, based on Personal Dental Services (PDS) pilots that encourage a more preventative, oral health focus.

Under the new arrangements, PCTs will have a duty to secure the provision of primary dental services either through contracts with individual practices, or by providing services themselves. With these new responsibilities will go nearly £1.3 billion of financial resources currently held centrally.

Nationally, PCT funding for dentistry will increase by 19.3 per cent. over two years (2005–06 over 2003–04). This means that by 2005–06 we will be providing over £250 million a year extra for dentistry.

The national health service workforce will be increased by the equivalent of 1,000 dentists by October 2005, allowing up to an extra two million people to be treated.

An NHS support team has been created to work with those PCTs having the most difficulty with access, and this is supported by £9 million of funding in the run-up to local commissioning. Forty-seven Dental Access Centres have been set up to help tackle access problems in areas with particular difficulties.

Additional funding of £65.2 million was announced in September 2003 to support change and help improv access, quality and choice for patients.

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State fo Health what the total spending on (a) general denta services and (b) secondary dental services was in each strategic health authority area in each of the last fiv years. [19916

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not proved possible t respond to the hon. Member in the time availabl before Prorogation.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State fo Health (1) what arrangements have been made fo dental visits to care homes in Dorset; [19799

(2) how many dentists in Dorset offer a visiting servic to care homes in Dorset. [19799

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information about number o dentists offering a visiting service to care homes i Dorset is not centrally held.

However, all general dental practitioners providin national health service services are obliged to visit the NHS patients at home if those patients are housebound and live within five miles of their general dental practic

Dorset and Somerset strategic health authority advis that there are general dental practitioners across Dors who specialise in domiciliary visits and, will trav further than five miles to visit housebound patients.

The East and West Dorset community dental servic provides a domiciliary service for patients not register with an NHS dentist.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State fo Health what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) med spend and (c) administration for his Departmen advertising activity has been in each financial year sin 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [1972

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's advertisi is commissioned through the Central Office Information. Expenditure for 2002–04 and 2003–04 shown in the table. Figures for previous years can on be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies, since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196593]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 are published in the Department's annual report. The 2004 annual report was published on 29 April 2004. Copies are available in the Library.

Departmental Research

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on research into (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) Parkinson's disease, (c) Huntingdon's disease, (d) multiple sclerosis and (e) motor neurone disease in the last three years. [198224]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Technology.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service. Spend by the Department's national research programmes in the three years to 2003–04 on projects related to the diseases listed was as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	1.4
2002–03	1.6
2003–04	2.3

Over 75 per cent., of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by NHS organisations. From this funding, the NHS reported spending in support of research related to older people and on neurological conditions as follows:

£ million

	Older people	Neurological conditions
2001–02	37	not available
2002–03	34	28
2003–04	39	30

Details of individual projects can be found on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has commissioned on degenerative neurological disorders. [198225]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Projects commissioned in the national research programmes over the last three years cover a wide variety of neurological disorders and include:

investigation of the characteristics of certain conditions and of those experiencing them, for example:

- monitoring the rates and characteristics of children with cerebral palsy;
- describing the neuropathological features of CJD and other atypical dementias;
- exploring the natural history and epidemiology of multiple sclerosis research on the efficacy of various treatments, for example:

- the effectiveness of treatment for motor neurone disease;
- the cost-effectiveness of new drugs for epilepsy and Alzheimer's;
- the value of education in promoting health and independence for people with a range of progressive neurological diseases studies of the quality and accessibility of health and social care, for example:

- the access to care of people with dementia from minority communities and their carers;
- community care for older people with dementia;
- improving the training of GPs in recognising dementia.

In addition the Department has funded a major new research initiative costing approximately £2 million long-term neurological conditions. This will underpin and assess the implementation of the national service framework on long-term conditions.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total research and development expenditure is devolved to and managed locally by national health service organisations.

Dermatology

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the percentage of general practitioner consultations which concerned skin diseases in each year since 1997. [196190]

Dr. Ladyman: Detailed data on consultations with general practitioners are not collected.

Data from the general household survey suggest that there were approximately 241 million consultations in 2002–03, and the British Association of Dermatologists estimate that about 15 per cent. of all patients who see a general practitioner are seeking help with a skin problem.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many dermatology referrals there were to secondary care in each year since 1997; [196191]

(2) how many dermatology outpatient appointments there were in each year since 1997; [196192]

(3) how many finished consultant episodes dermatology has accounted for in each year since 1997. [196238]

Dr. Ladyman: No separate count of referrals is available, but the information available on finished consultant episodes and numbers of in-year admissions, is in the table. Information on outpatient appointments is not available.

Primary Diagnosis (ICD-10 L00-L99) Diseases of the skin and subcutaneous tissue: counts of finished consultant episodes (FCEs), finished in-year admission episodes and all elective (waiting list, booked and planned) finished in-year admission episodes—NHS hospitals, England 1997–98 to 2002–03

	FCEs	Finished in-year admissions	of which: elective
1997–98	239,174	222,625	138,835
1998–99	257,265	242,590	152,906
1999–2000	266,193	248,550	152,922
2000–01	279,458	258,213	155,302
2001–02	277,832	254,556	151,489
2002–03	284,366	259,143	154,062

Notes:

1. Finished Consultant Episode (FCE)

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

2. Finished in-year admissions

A finished in-year admission is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider, excluding admissions beginning before 1 April at the start of the datayear. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

3. Diagnosis (Primary Diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

4. Grossing

Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2002–03, which are not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population are affected by skin diseases; and if he will make a statement. [196196]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally. The Skin Care Campaign, which is the umbrella organisation representing the interests of all people with skin diseases in the UK estimates that up to 25 per cent. of the population will have a skin disease that warrants medical attention at some point in their life.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) maximum time was that a patient waited for a first dermatology out-patient appointment in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [196232]

Dr. Ladyman: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Diabetes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has received on possible links between the use of insulin by type 2 diabetes patients and an increased risk of cancer. [197986]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is not aware of any United Kingdom funded research in this area.

A summary of the results of a single study into insulin therapy and colorectal cancer risk among type 2 diabetes patients conducted at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine can be found at http://www.ncbi.nih.gov/Database.

Details of a small number of current American studies, including research Investigating whether insulin-like growth factor-1 is associated with an increased risk of colorectal, breast and endometrial cancer, can be found on the International Cancer Research Portfolio website at http://www.cancerportfolio.org.

Drug Misuse Treatment

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of the closure of the Harbour Drug and Alcohol Service in Plymouth to new clients until April 2005 on the treatment of patients with addiction problems; [199108]

(2) what the waiting time is in Plymouth for a person suffering from drug or alcohol addiction to receive treatment; and if he will make a statement. [199109]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made an assessment of the impact of the changes to the Harbour Drug and Alcohol Service. It is the responsibility of primary care trusts, working with the local drug and alcohol action teams, to plan and develop local drug and alcohol services and ensure that these meet local needs. The Harbour Drug and Alcohol Service is not closing, but I understand that a decision was made recently to temporarily suspend the specialist prescribing service on the ground of clinical safety.

The latest available information on waiting times for drug treatment in Plymouth is shown in the table. The Department does not hold information on waiting times for alcohol services.

	Waiting time (weeks)
Inpatient	12
Residential rehabilitation	2
Specialist prescribing	0.2
General practitioner prescribing	0.8
Day care	1
Structured counselling	0.2

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Manchester, Withington were receiving treatment for drug misuse on the latest date for which figures are available. [199125]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In 2003–04, the number of people in Manchester receiving treatment from the Manchester Drug Action Team was 2,695. These are the latest data available, published by the National Treatment Agency on 30 September.

Drug Purchasing

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what bulk discounts the national health service receives from drug companies. [199289]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the case of branded medicines (that are generally patent protected) suppliers may or may not offer discount to the national health service trusts against their list prices. Where discounts are offered for these products, they may be available simply as a discount, or as a discount for bulk purchases or commitment to purchase specific volumes. Where discounts are not offered, more often than not, NHS trusts will have access to wholesaler discounts.

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency aggregates NHS trust business for the supply of licensed medicinal products, competitively tenders this business and awards framework agreements on behalf of the NHS in England. It also awards commitment contracts on behalf of the Department.

Drug Treatment Centres

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on provision for residential drug treatment centres in England. [195789]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The current residential drug treatment sector consists of two main treatment types—in-patient treatment and residential rehabilitation. The extent of current provision is as follows:

> The National Treatment Agency (NTA)'s residential service directory lists 111 residential rehabilitation units.
> The recently completed review of in-patient treatment estimated that there are 133 in-patient treatment units.

Specific work to improve the efficiency of the system to access residential treatment, which includes: a national online database of current vacancies in residential rehab units (Bedvacs) to enable more efficient client placements; and guidance on regional commissioning models for residential drug treatment has been developed, to enable better commissioning of residential treatment places.

The NTA monitors waiting times for residential treatment. The waiting times for residential drug treatment have been reducing as shown in the following table.

Average waiting times in weeks: December 2001 to September 2004

	In-patient treatment	Residential rehabilitation
NTA target	2	3
December 2001	12.1	9.1
September 2003	3.8	4.5
June 2004	2.8	2.8
September 2004	3.8	2.7

The intensive drug interventions programme (DIP) is now in place in 66 areas with highest levels on drug-related crime. Waiting times for clients in DIP are less than the national average.

Average weighted waiting time in weeks: September 2004

	NTA target	September 2004
In-patient treatment	2	2.73
Residential rehabilitation	3	2.0

Dyspraxia

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps are being taken to improve (a) awareness of and (b) training on dyspraxia for health professionals; [190582]

(2) what research he has evaluated on the relationship between dyspraxia and (a) diet, (b) crime, (c) drug and alcohol abuse, (d) suicide and (e) homelessness; and if he will make a statement. [190597]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None. The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Technology.

The MRC does not directly commission research projects or earmark funds for particular research areas. Projects are normally funded on a competitive basis in response to proposals submitted across all areas of research relevant to human health. In addition, the MRC identifies priorities for medical research in a number of ways, including strategic reviews of specific areas of science and by responding to the Department's priorities.

We have no specific plans to raise awareness of dyspraxia among health professionals. The Department is not responsible for setting curricula for health professional training; that is the responsibility of the statutory and professional bodies. However, we do share a commitment with those bodies that all health professionals are trained so that they have the skills and knowledge to deliver a high quality health service to all groups of the population with whom they deal.

Fitness Trainers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether those who currently pay membership of private health clubs will qualify for a fitness trainer on the national health service. [199256]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Flu Vaccine

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects on funding for general practitioners shortages in supply of influenza vaccine. [197979]

Mr. Hutton: There is no shortage in the supply of the influenza vaccine. The Department purchased stock of the vaccine as part of its contingency measures and has over 19,000 doses available, and over 750,000 doses are still available.

Foundation Hospitals

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total population is from which public and patient membership can be drawn for each of the foundation hospitals where ballots have been held; how many were registered to vote; and how many voted. [197417]

Mr. Hutton: Figures for the local resident population of the first wave of national health service foundation trusts are not collected centrally due to the nature of the commissioning of healthcare. The information provided would be duplicated for other local NHS trusts and would therefore be inaccurate.

Information on elections to the board of governors of NHS foundation trusts is a matter for Monitor, the statutory name of which is the independent regulator of NHS foundation trusts. I am informed by the Chairman of Monitor that information on membership and turnout is contained in its publication: "NHS Foundation Trusts: Report on Elections and Membership (August 2004)" (IRREP 01/04), which is available on Monitor's website at www.monitor-nhsft.gov.uk. Copies are available in the Library.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [199086]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not found it practicable to assess the likely costs of compliance with the Freedom of Information (FOI) Act.

Our strategy has been to prepare staff and provide guidance that will help them to minimise costs. Apart from a small team of FOI specialists, and development of a new correspondence system that will improve overall efficiency as well as helping to monitor FOI requests, costs will be widely distributed within the Department, as responding to FOI requests will be integrated with ordinary departmental business.

General Practitioners

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people he estimates (a) reside and (b) are registered with a general practitioner in the area served by Nottingham primary care trust. [199047]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is shown in the following table. It is based on patient registrations and is constrained to Office of National Statistics (ONS) estimates as at mid-year 2002. This is the latest available validated data for both figures.

	Number[1] (head count)
Resident population	269,814
Registered with a general practitioner[2]	287,809

[1] Excludes armed forces and prisoners.

[2] The number of patients registered with GPs responsible to this primary care trust (PCT), is higher due to some of the patients living in neighbouring PCTs' areas. Conversely, some of the patients living in Nottingham's geographic area may be registered with GPs responsible to a neighbouring PCT.

Department of Health—shadow health and social care information centre.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the difference will be in (a) funding and (b) service provision between the practice based commissioning structure for general practitioner practices and the former GP Fund Holding structure. [197700]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health is currently finalising guidance on practice based commissioning and this will be published shortly.

In terms of funding, under general practitioner fund holding, fund holding practices received a management allowance to administer the scheme. Under practice based commissioning, there will be no management allowance—the costs of the scheme will be funded out of savings made by the practice.

In terms of service provision both schemes strive to engage clinicians, stimulate innovation and provide patient-centred care.

Under practiced based commissioning, primary care trusts will retain legal responsibility for the contracting process and the single national tariff will prevent competition based on price. Practiced based commissioning will instead focus on quality and efficiency.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether all Government buildings in his Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [199314]

Dr. Ladyman: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

GP Surgeries

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the general practitioner surgeries which will benefit in the (a) Adur, (b) Arun and (c) Worthing Primary Care Trust areas from funding allocations to improve or renew premises in the current financial year; by how much each will benefit; and for what improvements each allocation was made. [198001]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available in each primary care trust area for upgrading or rebuilding general practitioner surgeries in each of the last five years. [198419]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 November 2004]: Personal medical services (PMS) allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) do not identify primary care premises funding separately to other PMS services provision elements. Owing to this it is not possible to identify primary care premises allocations separately at a PCT level.

However under the new primary care medical services contracting arrangements introduced from 2004–05 it is possible to estimate these resources from 2003–04 at a national level. From 2003–04 the total resources made available to PCTs for primary care premises purposes was as follows.

	£ million
2003–04	599
2004–05	640

Health Care Acquired Infections

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he or a member of his ministerial team was informed of the National Audit Office's planned publication date for the report on health care acquired infections. [191483]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We knew in April that publication was expected in July. It was not until late June that a particular date was included in departmental documents but it was still not clear that this was a firm rather than a provisional date.

Health Services (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much capital has been invested in York district hospital in each of the last 20 years. [191178]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is shown in the following table.

York hospitals NHS trust, net book value of purchased capital additions for each year

£000

	Cash terms

Hospital Infections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has instructed commissioners to include information on infection rates of methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus in the information provided under Patient Choice. [193453]

Mr. Hutton: Information on methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) bloodstream infections is currently available to commissioners and others on the Department's website at: http://www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/08/58/93/04085893.pdf Mandatory national surveillance has been in place since April 2001 and information for the last three years is available for all acute trusts in England. As patient choice increases, information and support will be provided locally by primary care trusts to help patients choose.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the consistency across NHS trusts in methods of monitoring MRSA bloodstream infections under the mandatory surveillance system; and what steps he is taking to ensure consistency. [198181]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Protection Agency recently carried out a survey of data collection methods for the mandatory scheme and will be assessing current practice in the light of this.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is his policy to maximise the use of new medical technologies in hospitals in tackling MRSA. [198494]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We encourage the use of effective technologies to prevent and control all healthcare associated infections, including methicillin resistant "Staphylococcus aureus" (MRSA) infections. To help the national health service identify suitable products and processes, the Health Protection Agency has convened a rapid review panel to review information and evidence relating to claims concerning prevention or control of such infections.

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether hospitals are encouraged to discharge patients for treatment in the community as soon as clinically possible as part of the programme to reduce the number of cases of MRSA in hospitals; and what guidance he has given to primary care teams on funding the treatment of patients once they leave hospital. [198496]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will make a statement on rates of MSRA at (a) Barnet, (b) Chase Farm, (c) Northwich Park, (d) Royal Free and (e) Edgware Hospitals in each of the last three years. [197629]

Dr. Ladyman [pursuant to his reply, 15 November 2004, c. 1163–64W]: I regret my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

Information on the rates of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections is only available for acute National Health Service trusts and these data are shown in the table.

Data is not collected centrally for Barnet Primary Care Trust, of which Edgware Hospital is a part.

Name of NHS trust	Number of MRSA bacteraemia reports April 2001–March 2002	MRSA rate per 1000 bed-days April 2001–March 2002	Number of MRSA bacteraemia reports April 2002–March 2003	MRSA rate per 1,000 bed-days April 2002–March 2003	MRSA bacteraemia reports April 2003–March 2004	MRSA rate per 1,000 bed-days April 2003–March 2004

North West London Hospitals NHS Trust	59	0.23	44	0.16	55	0.20
Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust	122	0.41	101	0.39	98	0.34

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients contracted MRSA last year following a visit to a NHS hospital; and what plans he has to combat the spread of this disease. [198932]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information on all methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) infections is not available but 7,657 blood stream infections were reported in 2003–04. We have an on-going programme of work to prevent and control MRSA and other healthcare associated infections. Recent measures include the launch of a national hand hygiene campaign and a new target to halve MRSA blood stream infections by 2008.

Hospital Radio

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has (a) to promote and (b) to develop hospital radio. [198495]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Hospital radio stations have provided an invaluable service to patients for many years. It is up to each individual national health service trust as to how hospital radio stations are promoted and developed locally.

Influenza Vaccine

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he was informed of the problem with influenza vaccines at Chiron; and if he will make a statement. [190813]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 14 October 2004]: Chiron Vaccines notified the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency inspector responsible for the Speke site, of a potential problem with influenza vaccine on 27 August 2004. The MHRA carried out an initial inspection and informed Ministers there was a problem on 15 September 2004.

Learning Disability

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which long-stay hospitals provide accommodation for people with a learning disability; how many people with a learning disability remain in each of these; and whether each hospital will meet its agreed closure date. [197845]

Dr. Ladyman: In March 2001, when Valuing People was published, approximately 1,500 people with learning disabilities were living in long-stay hospitals. On 1 April 2004, the number was 668.

This table shows the remaining long-stay hospitals providing accommodation, the number of people in each.

Name of Hospital	Number of people at 1 April 2004
Aston Hall	54
Chase Farm	10
Earls House	6
Fieldhead	35
Gloucester Centre	20
Gorse Hill	53
Highbury	30
Lea Castle	10
Little Highwood	48
Little Plumstead	20

Oak House	2
Orchard Hill	104
Princess Marina	16
Prudhoe	30
Ridge Hill	36
St. Catherine's	34
St. Ebba's	50
Total	668

Closure dates have been agreed for all but three establishments and the responsible strategic health authorities have given assurances that these dates will be met. The remaining three dates are being negotiated within the whole closure programme of April 2006.

Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195623]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Providing information for the period requested will incur disproportionate costs.

Leukaemia (Power Lines)

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of children under 15 years of age who (a) died and (b) suffered from leukaemia in each of the last three years who lived (i) within 100 metres of and (ii) over 100 metres away from high voltage power lines. [197550]

Dr. Ladyman: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Maldon and South Chelmsford PCT

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the appointment of an official within the Maldon and South Chelmsford primary care trust with responsibility for co-ordinating healthcare policy in South Woodham Ferrers. [199121]

Dr. Ladyman: In line with "Shifting the Balance of Power" and the NHS Plan, it is now for primary care trusts (PCTs), in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to determine how best to use the funds allocated to them to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

I understand that Maldon and South Chelmsford PCT advertised the position of project manager on 15 October, with a closing date of 29 October. The advert has attracted four applicants, and interviews are scheduled to take place on 29 November. The PCT hopes to be able to announce the successful candidate in December.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the public relations budget of the Maldon and South Chelmsford primary care trust was in the first six months of the current financial year. [199123]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department allocates revenue funding to primary care trusts (PCTs) on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. In the allocations for 2003–04 to 2005–06 none of the growth money has been identified for specific purposes.

It is for PCTs, in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to determine how best to use these funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

I understand that Maldon and South Chelmsford PCT has contracted out its public relations function, at a cost of £900 per month, plus value added tax, since 2001. The contract is open ended and is not subject to inflationary increase.

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new hospital planned for Maldon will open; what the estimated cost of the project is; and if he will make a statement. [199122]

Dr. Ladyman: In line with "Shifting the Balance of Power" and the NHS Plan, it is now for primary care trusts (PCTs), in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to determine how best to use the funds allocated to them to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

I understand that Maldon and South Chelmsford PCT is at a critical stage in negotiating the purchase of a suitable parcel of land within the Maldon area on which it wishes to site the new community hospital. Subject to the negotiations reaching a successful conclusion, the PCT is planning to open the new hospital in early 2008. The estimated costs of the new community hospital under the private finance initiative is approximately £27 million.

Male Circumcision

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the health effects of circumcision of male infants. [198754]

Dr. Ladyman: Circumcision in male infants has a number of potential complications. It is largely performed for cultural or religious reasons in neonates and the postulated health benefits are contentious. Beyond the neonatal period it may be performed for medical conditions, but there is a growing view among paediatric urologists that the majority of these are better dealt with by more conservative treatment. I understand guidelines have been issued by the General Medical Council, and that the British Medical Association has advised doctors performing circumcisions on male infants to ensure that those giving consent consider all the risks and benefits associated with the procedure.

ME

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the Chief Medical Officer on (a) the clinical definition of and (b) the available treatments for sufferers of myalgic encephalitis. [199290]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministers and the Chief Medical Officer meet on a regular basis to discuss a variety of issues relating to myalgic encephalitis, the most recent meeting being with me and Lord Warner on 8 November.

Mental Health

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the acute NHS trusts in England that do not have a designated place of safety as defined by the Mental Health Act 1983. [199062]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Mental Health Act 1983 provides for people who appear to be suffering from mental disorder to be removed to a place of safety in certain circumstances. For these purposes, a place of safety includes residential accommodation provided by a local social services authority, a hospital, a police station, an independent hospital or care home for mentally disordered persons, or any other suitable place whose occupier is willing temporarily to receive the patient. The identification of preferred places of safety is a matter for local agreement. The Department does not maintain records of these places.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is in this financial year of mental health services provided by the Salisbury NHS mental health team; how many mental health patients from (a) Devizes, (b) West Wiltshire, (c) the New Forest and (d) elsewhere outside Salisbury have been treated by the team in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [197825]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the construction cost was of the Grovely in-patient ward at the Fountain Way facility of the Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust in Salisbury; what the running costs have been in each of the last five years; and what the options are for the use of the Grovely facility if the decision is taken to close it; [197826]

(2) for what reasons it is proposed to cut funding for mental health services in Salisbury by £2.5 million; and if he will make a statement; [197828]

(3) for what reasons the Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust proposes to close Grovely House; what alternative facilities will be available to patients if this facility closes; whether it is proposed to disband the local outreach team; whether additional funds will be made available to (a) general practitioners and (b) Wiltshire County Council to provide alternative care in the event that the trust reduces in-patient facilities in Salisbury; and if he will make a statement. [197829]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested on construction and running costs is not collected centrally.

It is for primary care trusts (PCTs), in partnership with other national health service bodies and stakeholders, to plan and commission appropriate levels of service for their populations. PCTs have been given increased funding to enable them to do this and South Wiltshire PCT's allocation for 2004–05 is £108.5 million, an increase in cash terms of 8.9 per cent.

Public consultation on proposals for mental health services locally is being undertaken by the NHS in South Wiltshire before any final decisions are taken.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many elderly inpatient and acute beds at the Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust's Salisbury facility are blocked; how many have been blocked for (a) three months or more, (b) six months or more and (c) one year or more; and what the length of stay is of the patient who has been at the hospital for the longest time. [197827]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data is collected centrally on delayed discharges from acute beds only. The Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership National Health Service Trust does not have acute beds and therefore no information is available.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions have been issued to staff of the National Institute for Mental Health concerning comments by them on the draft Mental Health Bill. [197982]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not given any instructions to staff of the National Institute for Mental Health in England (NIMHE) concerning their comments on the draft Mental Health Bill.

MRI/CT Scanners

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured in adverse incidents involving scanners in the NHS in (i) England and (ii) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [198239]

(2) how many adverse incidents involving (a) MRI and (b) CT scanners there have been in (i) England and (ii) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997; and if he will estimate the costs of these incidents. [198250]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Since 1997 a total of 147 incidents involving computer tomography (CT) and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scanners have been reported to the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).

110 of these involved MRI and 37 CT procedures.

Number of incidents reported to MHRA

	CT	MR	Total
1997	0	0	0
1998	0	0	0
1999	0	5	5
2000	0	4	4
2001	0	22	22
2002	4	29	33
2003	16	22	38
2004 to date	17	28	45
Total	37	110	147

The identification of strategic health authorities where these incidents occurred is only available following a more detailed interrogation of the MHRA's adverse incident database.

The costs of these incidents is not known, as this information was not reported to the MHRA at the time.

Of the 37 incidents relating to CT scanning, three have resulted in injuries to patients. These have been classified as "minor" injuries, resulting from software problems, which led to slightly more radiation than expected being delivered to the patients. These were not deemed statistically significant.

Forty-seven of the 110 incidents relating to MRI scanning have resulted in minor injuries, and there has been one fatality.

This fatality occurred when a patient who had a cardiac pacemaker in situ underwent a MRI procedure.

Cardiac pacemakers are an absolute contra-indication to undertaking MRI scans and there was a breakdown in local policies and procedures which led to this patient being scanned. Local scanning procedures and policies have been considerably revised to prevent any re-occurrence.

The MHRA attended a meeting of EUCOMED (European medical technologies industry body) in September 2004 where the issue of the compatibility of implants with MRI scanners was discussed. This meeting recommended that a further meeting dedicated entirely to this problem involving EUCOMED, COCIR (European coordination committee of the radiological and electromedical industry), representatives of major implant manufacturers, and representatives of MRI manufacturers should take place in Brussels early next year (February 2005).

The remaining injuries have mainly resulted in skin reddening, or minor burns, caused by the heating effect of the coils used in MRI scanning. Most of these appear to have been due to user error in placing the coils. Work is on-going to improve both manufacturers' information on coil usage and to ensure that operators of this equipment are fully aware of the potential for injury to patients if this advice is not followed.

Where equipment has been found to be faulty this has been addressed with the manufacturers and changes implemented.

No injuries to patients were reported prior to 2000.

Injuries caused by CT and MRI scanners reported to MHRA

2001	—	11
2002	1	14
2003	—	13
2004 to date	—	10
Total	1	50

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of (a) MRI scans and (b) CT scans were conducted as outpatient procedures in the latest period for which figures are available. [198242]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Data outlining how many outpatient procedures took place for magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scans and computer tomography (CT) scans is not currently collected centrally.

However, a count of imaging and radiodiagnostic examinations or tests by imaging modality is collected on the Department's KH12 return. Data on MRI and CT scans is given in the table.

Total number of imaging and radiodiagnostic examinations or tests, CT and MRI, England, 1995–96 to 2002–03

	CT	MRI
1995–96	1,709,244	347,817

Department of Health form KH12

MS Nurses

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the effects on local services of his Department's scheme for centrally-funded multiple sclerosis specialist nurses; [195910]

(2) which primary care trusts have received funding under his Department's scheme for centrally-funded multiple sclerosis specialist nurses, broken down by amount; [195911]

(3) which primary care trusts are awaiting confirmation of funding under his Department's scheme for centrally-funded multiple sclerosis specialist nurses; and when he expects them to receive confirmation of funding. [195912]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no outstanding applications and all successful bids have been funded. Details of the allocations have been placed in the Library.

Professor Tom Walley of Liverpool University has been commissioned to undertake a review of the scheme.

NHS Care for the Elderly

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to improve (a) intermediate care, (b) rehabilitation, (c) stroke services and (d) community care for the elderly in North Staffordshire. [198595]

Dr. Ladyman: The national service framework for older people was published on 27 March 2001. It set national standards to improve services for older people, whether they are at home, in residential care or in hospital.

Decisions on how these services are developed to meet national standards are taken locally. Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) reports that:

Over 1.5 million has now been invested in developing intermediate care in North Staffordshire with additional investment to come as part of the "Fit for the Future" project. The hospital discharge teams have, been amalgamated.

In 2003–04 1,813 patients received national health service funded intermediate care with the numbers increasing each month. There are now two community intermediate care teams, one for the city and one for the county and both are working very closely with social services. A total of £0.75 million has now been transferred from the health community to the two social services departments to further support community developments.

Intermediate care is being developed by both health and social services through in-patient and community service provision. While primary care trusts (PCTs) are leading on the majority of elderly care developments, North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare NHS Trust is working with them to pilot intermediate care in-patient provision for older people with mental health needs.

Rehabilitation at Bucknall Hospital has recently undertaken a modernisation programme with the twin intentions of improving standards of care and reducing length of stay.

A review of the total stroke care pathway across primary and secondary care is in progress taking on board the latest evidence based clinical practice.

Planning has commenced to further develop the stroke rehabilitation facility at Bucknall Hospital in line with the public consultation on post acute intermediate care linked to the "Fit for the Future" project. Interserve were appointed in the middle of June as the preferred supply chain partner to work with all stakeholders to deliver this facility.

In close collaboration with the University Hospital of North Staffordshire NHS Trust, North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare NHS Trust and Stoke and Staffordshire Social Services Departments, improvements have been made in using the community hospital beds to support step down care from acute beds primarily for older people.

NHS Direct

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of NHS Direct; and if he will make a statement. [196988]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Direct was set up to help callers access the right service at the right time and to give people reassuring clinical advice so that they can look after themselves, if that is the appropriate thing to do. NHS Direct has grown from a small pilot project to a substantial national service handling over 500,000 telephone calls and 500,000 internet visitor sessions every month. As such, it is the world's largest and most successful service of its type, empowering patients to exercise better informed choices about their own healthcare.

The National Audit Office's report on NHS Direct, published in January 2002, highlighted that NHS Direct is a very safe service and that adverse clinical outcomes associated with the service are likely to be rare. This confirmed the findings of earlier independent research by Sheffield University.

We are committed to the further development of NHS Direct, including the expansion of its call-taking capacity and the development of various channels through which patients can access the services it provides.

NHS Estate (Maintenance)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maintenance backlog to reach estate code condition B was in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997. [192785]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 9 February 2004, Official Report, columns 1205–06W.

NHS Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 28 October 2004, Official Report, column 1340W, on NHS facilities, what the cost of each of the additional facilities listed was. [199170]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Facility	Cost
Trent Access and Choice Pilot (TRAC)	£10.8 million in 2003–04 and £1.8 million in 2004–05. This covers all 19 primary care trusts (PCTs) in the Trent Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area. Nottingham PCTs received £1,890,234 in 2003–04 and £541,000 in 2004–05
Queens Medical Centre, Nottingham University Hospital National Health Service Trust
Ear nose and throat/ophthalmology unit (£ million)	18.5
Accident and emergency department (expansion and modernisation) (£ million)	6.3
Maternity unit (modernisation and refurbishment) (£ million)	1.45
Set up of patient advice and liaison service (PALS) (£)	100,000

Facility	Cost
PALS staffing (£)	74,500
Simulation and clinical skills centre (£ million)	2.48
Magnetic resonance imaging scanner (£ million)	1
Nottingham City Hospital NHS Trust

Nottingham walk-in centre	£1.2 million annual budget (includes all staffing and service provision costs and patient care)
Dental centre
Dental access centre	This cost comes under the walk-in centre figure above
Personal dental services	£142,000. This cost includes a total of six pilot sites in Rushcliffe
Dental field site in Chilwell	£3,000 of Modernisation Agency funding for information technology
Independent sector treatment centre (ISTC)
ISTC	£90 million over a five year contract period
Pharmacy
Pharmacy openings	Local information at this level is not available centrally

NHS Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department makes up the shortfall where there is a deficit in (a) ambulance service and (b) primary care trusts' budgets. [19[illegible]257]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service must live within the funding made available and all organisations are expected to plan for and deliver financial balance to achieve this. Any deficits by NHS organisations need to be matched by underspends by other NHS bodies each year to ensure the NHS as a whole remains within the funding available. In the next year, NHS organisations that overspent should make a surplus in order to ensure that other bodies can utilise the underspends from the previous year.

NHS Procurement

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to improve efficiency in NHS procurement in North Staffordshire. [198597]

Mr. Hutton: North Staffordshire is actively involved in the national supply chain excellence programme as part of a pathfinding collaborative procurement hub project. The hub will coordinate all purchasing activity in Shropshire and Staffordshire to improve performance, efficiency and generate substantial savings and benefits for all national health service trusts in the area.

NHS Professionals

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many placements have been secured through NHS professionals to date. [197922]

Mr. Hutton: NHS Professionals was established as a Special Health Authority from 1 April 2004. Since that time it has been responsible for filling a total of 935,110 placements for doctors, nurses, allied health professionals and administrative and clerical staff.

NHS Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported violent incidents against NHS staff there were in (a) England, (b) each strategic health authority and (c) each primary care trust in each year since 1997. [198246]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested was not collated centrally until 2000–01 and since then the statistics from different areas are incomplete. The available statistics on reported violent incidents, including both physical and non-physical assaults, against NHS staff for 2000–01, 2001–02 and 2002–03 in England; strategic health authorities (SHA): and primary care trusts (PCT) are summarised in the table.

Estimated number of reported violent or abusive incidents for 2000–01, 2001–02, 2002–03 in (a) England, (b) SHA, (c) PCT

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
England	84,214	112,000	116,000
SHA	45	20	11
PCT	1,156	5,802	20,767

In November 2003 the NHS Security Management Service launched a new national reporting system for physical assaults. Statistics on physical assaults against staff in the NHS will be available from 2004–05, with statistics on non-physical assault available from 2005–06.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many nursing posts in the NHS are funded by pharmaceutical companies, broken down by trust; [198626]

(2) what his policy is on hospitals employing nurses and doctors funded for wholly or in part by pharmaceutical companies. [198627]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not been possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Nottingham Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 28 October, Official Report, column 1334W, on services in Nottingham, how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed by trusts which fall wholly within the City of Nottingham local government boundary (i) in 1997 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available. [197895]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is shown in the table.

Nottingham City Primary Care Trust (PCT), Nottingham City Trust Hospital and the Queens Medical Centre National Health Service Trust have been identified by Trent Strategic Health Authority as those trusts which fall within the City of Nottingham local government boundary. PCTs did not come into existence until 1 April 2000. Therefore there is no direct comparison to 1997. Nottingham Health Authority is the closest match, but this includes staff working in a significantly larger geographical area.

Numbers of doctors and nurses employed in Nottingham (latest available information)

1997	Doctors[1]	Nurses[2]
Nottingham Health Authority	1,471	4,695
Total	1,471	4,695

2003	Doctors[1]	Nurses[2]

Department of Health non-medical workforce census.

Offender Rehabilitation

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the siting of rehabilitation facilities for offenders with learning difficulties; and what discussions he has had with the Home Secretary on the location of such facilities. [199097]

Dr. Ladyman: Local primary care trusts are responsible for commissioning health services for their local communities including those for adults with learning disabilities. This involves securing the provision of services but also the broader tasks of improving the health of the local community and integrating health and social care.

This is a matter solely for the Secretary of State for Health.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the Question tabled by the hon. Member for Bath on 22 July, ref 187176; and if he will make a statement. [197309]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Patient Choice

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on requiring primary care trusts to offer patients the choice of an independent sector provider at the point of referral. [191720]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are committed to the expansion of the national health service to offer patients greater choice. Independent sector providers are supplementing this expansion and helping to deliver the increased capacity and choice to NHS patients.

By December 2005, primary care trusts will commission four to five service providers to offer their patients choice at the point of referral. The range of providers commissioned could include NHS trusts, foundations trusts, NHS and independent sector treatment centres, independent sector hospitals and general practitioners with a special interest or other extended primary care treatment services.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the guidance given to primary care trusts on the implementation of his Department's policy to offer a choice of four or five providers to patients at the point of referral. [191721]

Mr. Hutton: The "Choose and Book—Patients Choice of Hospital and Booked Appointment" policy guidance was published on 23 August 2004. The guidance can be found on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/08/83/52/04088352.pdf Copies have been placed in the Library.

Patient Numbers

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people who are suffering from (a) Alzheimer's disease, (b) Parkinson's disease, (c) Huntingdon's disease, (d) multiple sclerosis and (e) motor neurone disease. [198226]

Dr. Ladyman: Although the Department does not routinely collect information on the number of people diagnosed with specific conditions, estimates for the United Kingdom are given in the table.

Condition	Number
Alzheimer's disease	400,000
Parkinson's disease	120,000
Huntingdon's disease	4,800
Multiple Sclerosis	85,000
Motor Neurone disease	5,000

The Department provides hospital episode statistics data, which relates to diagnostic information for in-patients in national health service hospitals. The data refers to the number of finished admission episodes and are shown in the table.

Finished admission episodes for selected diagnoses NHS hospitals 2002–03

Diagnosis	Finished admission episodes
Alzheimer's Disease	6,816
Parkinson's Disease	7,074
Huntingdon's Disease	386
Multiple Sclerosis	14,594
Motor Neurone Disease	2,240

A finished admission episode is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year. During their course of treatment over a period of time, patients may have a number of episodes of care, which are counted each time they have a stay in hospital.

Prescriptions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the income to be received by his Department from pre-payment certificates for prescription charges in real terms in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07, (c) 2007–08, (d) 2008–09 and (e) 2009–10. [198233]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It has not been possible to respond the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Press Officers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent in (a) 1996–97 and (b) the last year for which figures are available on press officers, broken down by grade. [184540]

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press officers are employed in his Department; and how many were employed in each year since 1996–97. [195357]

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press officers the Department has employed in each of the past five years. [196049]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 16 July 2004, 1 November 2004 and 4 November 2004]: The Department does not use the term "press officer" in the data recorded for management purposes about staff in its media centre. These data are instead recorded by civil service pay grade, and not by any functional attribute. In the absence of such a definition, there is no reliable record of the number of staff within the media centre, which comprises staff at a variety of grades performing a range of tasks, including administrative and managerial ones, to whom the term "press officer" could have been applicable. As a result of this uncertainty, over the course of several years, answers to Parliamentary Questions about press officer numbers have been based on "ad hoc" definitions and methodologies, giving rise to further variations in handling other contributory factors, such as:

in-year leavers and joiners;

full- and part-time posts;

vacancies;

degree of direct contact with the media by administrative and by managerial staff.

Robust data on the number of press officers employed by the Department during the financial years 1996–99 were provided in Appendix II of the report "The Government Information and Communications Service" (HC 770) published by the Select Committee on Public Administration (29 July 1998). Using the same methodology, information on media centre costs and numbers of press officers for the period 1997–98 to 2003–04 is shown in the following tables.

Cost of media centre staff, 1997–98 to 2003–04

	Cost (£ million)
1997–98	1.062
1998–99	1.122
1999–2000	1.253
2000–01	1.233
2001–02	1.279
2002–03	1.077
2003–04	1.284

Number of press officers, 1997–98 to 2003–04

	Number of staff
1997–98	15
1998–99	15
1999–2000	21
2000–01	22
2001–02	22
2002–03	24
2003–04	26

I regret that attempts to be helpful in providing substantive responses to Members' Questions have led to an unsatisfactory level of consistency with the data reported. Mechanisms are now in place to record this data on a consistent basis. We will, as a matter of routine, be carrying out an audit at the end of each financial year, on both costs and numbers of staff, the results of which will be placed in the Library.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the standard notice period is for the chief executive of an NHS primary care trust. [199124]

Mr. Hutton: There is currently no standard national contract for national health service primary care trust chief executives. The period of notice is, therefore, defined in law by the terms of each individual's contract of employment with their employer. The precise terms of a contract may vary from individual to individual. Details of individual contracts are not held centrally by the Department.

Public Health

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish a delivery plan on physical activity in relation to the Public Health White Paper. [197363]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We will publish a physical activity plan, including those commitments identified in the White Paper and other relevant departmental plans, in the spring.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the report his Department commissioned on Promoting Physical Activity—Selected International Activity. [197364]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The report has been placed in the Library. It is also available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/09/46/56/04094656.pdf.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with broadcasters in preparing the proposals set out in his Public Health White Paper on restrictions on broadcast advertising. [R] [199236]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Radio-diagnostic Equipment

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet manufacturers of radio-diagnostic equipment to discuss increasing the weight limit of 21 to 22 stones for use of such equipment. [195914]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A review of current weight limits for the major manufacturer's X-ray couches has shown that most are substantially above 22 stones. Some couches have limits of just over 21 stones when tilted, but are above 23 stones in the horizontal position. Earlier models still in service may have lower weight limits.

Nuclear medicine, where the patient is injected with a radioactive substance and then scanned to image regions of interest, becomes less effective as the patient's weight increases. In the interests of patient safety maximum doses are set by the Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee, which is part of the Department. This will limit the amount of radiation available to produce an image in heavier patients. However, these maximum doses can be exceeded on a named patient basis in special circumstances.

It is not necessary for a Minister to meet with manufacturers at this time.

Renal Dialysis

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the amount of renal dialysis provision which will be required in Warrington over the next five years if all patients requiring dialysis are to be treated locally. [197642]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 November 2004]: In January 2004, the Department published the national service framework for renal services, part one. This identifies various steps that primary care trusts and national health service trusts can make to take forward delivery.

From 2000–01 to 2005–06, up to £60 million central capital funding will be provided to support the expansion of centre-based haemodialysis to meet increasing local demand for dialysis. This includes £9 million in 2004–05 and £14 million in 2005–06.

The Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority received £504,000 in 2004–05.

Radiographers

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects of Agenda for Change on the (a) remuneration and (b) working hours of radiographers in the NHS. [199326]

Mr. Hutton: We anticipate that for the majority of existing radiographers the effect of "Agenda for Change" will be an increase in their rate of pay. Under "Agenda for Change", there will be a phased move to a standard working week for all full-time national health service staff of 37.5 hours per week. In the case of radiographers, this will mean an increase in their current weekly hours from 35 to 37.5. The changes for radiographers will be phased in over seven years, with no change at all for the first four years.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with representatives of professional groups on increasing the number of radiographers available to the NHS. [199327]

Mr. Hutton: I have regular meetings with professional bodies, including the Society of Radiographers, to discuss a wide range of topics, for example increasing the number of radiographers in the national health service.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are in the NHS for (a) radiographers and (b) radiotherapy technicians. [199328]

Mr. Hutton: Specific information on the number of vacancies for radiotherapy technicians is not collected centrally. The tables show the number and rate of vacancies lasting three months or more for radiographers and radiotherapy physicists.

wte = Whole-time equivalent.

3 month vacancy notes:

1. Three month vacancy information is as at 31 March 2004.
2. Three month vacancies are vacancies which Trusts are actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (whole-time equivalents).
3. Three month Vacancy Rates are three month vacancies expressed as a percentage of 3 month vacancies plus staff in post.
4. 3 month Vacancy Rates are calculated using staff in post from the Vacancy Survey, March 2004.
5. Percentages are rounded to one decimal place.
6. — = zero.

Staff in post notes:

1. Staff in post data is from the Non-Medical Workforce Census, September 2003.
2. — = zero.
3. September 2003 staff in post data is not available for radiotherapy physicists.

General notes:

1. Vacancy and staff in post numbers are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Calculating the vacancy rates using the above data may not equal the actual vacancy rates.
3. Due to rounding, totals may not equal the sum of component parts.
4. Strategic HA figures are based on Trusts, and do not necessarily reflect the geographical provision of healthcare.

Rheumatoid Arthritis

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make additional resources available to primary care trusts for anti-TNF prescribing for patients with rheumatoid arthritis (a) in Solihull and (b) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [199093]

Dr. Ladyman: In line with our policy to Shift the Balance of Power, responsibility for the funding and delivery of health services now rests with primary care trusts (PCTs) and funding to implement the guidance and recommendations of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence are included within their general allocations.

The national health service is currently receiving the largest sustained increase in funding in its history. The total of PCT allocations is £49.3 billion for 2004–05 and £53.9 billion for 2005–06. Over the three years 2003–04 to 2005–06 funding will increase by £12.7 billion, or 30.8 per cent.

Royal Berkshire Hospital

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to increase the number of intensive care beds in the Royal Berkshire hospital. [198985]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In line with our policy of "Shifting the Balance of Power", it is now for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to plan, develop and improve services for local people. We recognise that health services are better when management is devolved to the frontline. Within the framework set out in the NHS Plan and other policy documents, PCTs, with their specialised knowledge of the local community are effectively able to manage and improve local services.

I understand that the West Berkshire commissioners approved the addition of one additional intensive care unit bed (ICU) at the Royal Berkshire Hospital on 11 November 2004, with effect from April 2005. This will bring the total number of ICU beds available to nine.

Sexual Health

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the cost of over-the-counter contraceptives on the sexual health of the population. [198991]

Miss Melanie Johnson: As part of the White Paper on Public Health, published on 16 November, we will carry out an audit of contraceptive service provision in early 2005 and invest centrally to meet gaps in local services in particular to ensure that the full range of contraceptive services is available, good practice is spread and services modernised. People can choose to purchase some methods of contraception over the counter, namely emergency hormonal contraception; male and female condoms; other female barrier methods; spermicides and fertility devices, but the price charged is a matter for individual pharmacists.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 15 October 2004, Official Report, column 404W, on sexually transmitted diseases, if he will break down the number of cases by disease diagnosed; [192925]

(2) how many were sexually transmitted diseases diagnosed in each primary care trust in each year since 1997; and how many patients sought advice, diagnosis or treatment for suspected sexually transmitted diseases in each primary care trust in each year since 1997. [198990]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information showing the number of new diagnoses made at genito-urinary medicine clinics of each sexually transmitted diseases reported for each of the London primary care trusts between 1997 and 2003 has been placed in the Library.

Data on the patients seeking advice, diagnoses or treatment for suspected sexually transmitted diseases in each primary care trust are not held centrally.

Silzone Heart Valves

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library information collated by the UK Heart Valve Registry concerning adverse incidents involving the St. Jude Silzone heart valve. [193089]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not held by the Department.

Social Services

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to improve joint working between the NHS and Social Services in North Staffordshire in respect of care for the elderly. [198598]

Dr. Ladyman: Health Act partnership arrangements have been introduced to help break down the barriers between the national health services and local authority services by removing existing constraints in the system and increasing flexibility in the provision and commissioning of services.

Decisions on how best to improve joint working are taken locally, in response to local conditions.

Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority reports that two older people's partnership boards have been established to ensure joint working arrangements are robust in North Staffordshire.

Specialist Service Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what safeguards have been put in place by his Department to ensure that specialist services not paid for under Payment by Results will be protected in the eventuality of overspends on services which are covered by the national tariff. [195401]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 326W.

Steri-X System

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Steri-X system in killing pathogenic bacteria, including (a) MRSA, (b) E coli, (c) Legionella pneumophilia Salmonella enteritidis and (d) Pseudomonas aeruginosa; and when the Steri-X system was first added to the NHS list of approved products. [194785]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department does not assess the efficacy of such products, but we have convened a rapid review panel to review information and evidence relating to claims concerning prevention or control of such infections. The manufacturers/suppliers of Steri-X have been invited to submit their products to the panel.

The National Health Service Purchasing and Supplies Agency does not have an approved list of products.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191426]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department and its agencies have recorded losses, including thefts, to the value of £429,667 in financial years 1997–2004 to date. The Department takes the protection of its information technology systems and assets very seriously and the its security policy and procedures are kept under constant review. Table 1 shows a breakdown of individual years for the Department and the totals for the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MRHA) and the National Health Service Purchasing and Supply Agency.

Tier 2 System

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are in the Tier 2 system. [195807]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not collected by the Department.

Waiting Times

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the average waiting time for a first consultant appointment in West Derbyshire in each year since 1997. [198367]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the table.

Wanless Report

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of correspondence relating to the Government's activity target to get 70 per cent. of the population reasonably active by 2020, between his Department and the team responsible for the Wanless Report on "Securing Good Health for the Whole Population"; and if he will make a statement. [187176]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There was a close working relationship between the Department and the team responsible for assisting Derek Wanless to produce his report, "Securing Good Health for the Whole Population". I cannot, however, make public information, the disclosure of which would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion between Government officials and independent review teams commissioned by Government, such as that led by Derek Wanless. Exemption 2 (internal discussion and advice) of the open Government code of practice applies.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Renewable Energy Strategy

1. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has held with the Department for Trade and Industry on the Government's renewable energy strategy. [198953]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary State for Trade and Industry, has the lead responsibility for renewables and our two Departments are in close contact on this issue.

Organic Fruit Production

16. Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial help her Department provides to organic fruit producers. [198968]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department's Organic Farming Scheme (OFS) provides financial assistance to fruit producers to convert to organic production, deliver the environmental benefits organic farming produces and help meet consumer demand for organic food.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions (Target)

17. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set a target for UK carbon dioxide emissions for 2020. [198969]

Mr. Morley: The Government set out their longer-term goal in the Energy White Paper to make real progress by 2020 towards reducing the UK's carbon dioxide emissions by some 60 per cent. by 2050.

Fruit Farming

18. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the application of single farm payments to orchards. [198970]

Alun Michael: Traditional orchards, which are generally those with greatest amenity and environmental value, will be eligible for the new CAP Single Payment subject to eligibility criteria that are currently being defined. Commercial orchards will not be eligible for the Single Payment anywhere in the European Union, nor have they ever been eligible for CAP subsidy.

Pesticides and Herbicides

19. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of residue levels of pesticides and herbicides in fruit and vegetables. [198971]

Alun Michael: I am satisfied that our current controls on pesticide residues provide a high level of protection for all consumers.

Waste Management

20. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to reduce waste. [198973]

Mr. Morley: Defra is taking a number of steps to reduce waste. These include initiatives by the Waste and Resources Action Programme; additional funding for local authorities through the waste minimisation and recycling fund; and the Envirowise programme of advice to businesses on waste issues.

Dairy Industry

21. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last met representatives of the dairy industry to discuss the price of milk. [198974]

Alun Michael: Price negotiations are a private commercial matter in which the Government cannot and should not get involved, provided competition rules are respected. However, Ministers frequently meet representatives from all parts of the dairy supply chain and are therefore aware of the issues.

Air Pollution

22. Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to improve air quality. [198975]

Alun Michael: The Government policies to improve air quality are set out in the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, published in January 2000 and the Addendum to the Air Quality Strategy published in February 2003.

Water Customers (Benefit Payments)

23. Mr. Heyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that water customers who are in receipt of benefit who have direct payments deducted from their benefit are eligible for direct debit discounts. [198976]

Mr. Morley: If companies were to propose a discount for customers using the direct deductions scheme and could demonstrate that it reflected a cost saving, Ofwat would consider whether to approve this discount.

Single Farm Payments

24. Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on proposals for cross-compliance in relation to single farm payments. [198977]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced the key policy decisions on cross compliance by written statement to the House on 22 July 2004, Official Report, column 69WS.

Animal Cruelty

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of animal cruelty have been prosecuted in the courts (a) in England and Wales, (b) in Yorkshire and the Humber and (c) in the City of York in each year since 1994. [192421]

Paul Goggins: I have been asked to reply.

Defendants proceeded against for various offences connected with animal cruelty are shown in the table for England and Wales, Yorkshire and the Humber region and York magistrates court, 1994 to 2002.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2003 will be published on the 18 November.

[1] Principal offence basis.

[2] Staffordshire Police were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates' courts in 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data these data are not robust at a detailed level and have been excluded from this table.

Animal Transportation

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce legislation to (a) stop animal abuse and (b) improve the conditions in which animals are transported. [199245]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Animal Welfare Bill

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the planned timetable is for the introduction of the Animal Welfare Bill. [197053]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress in consultation on the draft Animal Welfare Bill. [198407]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Bees

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 November, Official Report, column 576W, on bees, how much funding the National Bee Unit will receive for the next financial year. [198519]

Alun Michael: Defra and Welsh Assembly Government funding to the National Bee Unit in 2005–06 is expected to be at the same level as the preceding year.

Bovine TB

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many positive reactor cattle subsequently proved to be free of tuberculosis; how their carcass was subsequently disposed of; and how many of them entered the human food chain. [188490]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what studies her Department has commissioned into the effectiveness of the examination of deer by (a) stalkers and (b) butchers in identifying cases of bovine TB in culled deer intended for human consumption. [197832]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle were slaughtered because of bovine tuberculosis in each year since 1997 in (a) West Derbyshire and (b) Derbyshire. [198417]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many confirmed cases of bovine tuberculosis in cattle there have been in the last five years; and what the geographical spread of the disease has been. [198418]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) farmed and (b) park deer herds have tested positive for bovine TB in each of the last five years; and how many of those were confirmed by culture or post mortem examination. [197318]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has commissioned into the effectiveness of the examination of deer at abattoirs in identifying cases of bovine TB infection in venison intended for human consumption. [197321]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what prevalence of bovine TB has been detected in culled deer in studies undertaken during the last 20 years. [197330]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many incidents of bovine TB in (a) farmed and (b) park deer have been notified as a result of identification at abattoirs in each of the past five years. [197326]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the proportion of bovine TB infection in (a) farmed, (b) park and (c) wild deer entering the human food chain that remains undetected by the current statutory reporting procedures. [197327]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had regarding bovine TB in deer with her counterparts in the Devolved Administrations. [197328]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Burnside Farm

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department was first informed of the existence of a video of Burnside Farm taken by Northumberland Trading Standards officers on 23 February 2001; and when her Department first obtained a copy of the video. [194308]

Mr. Bradshaw [pursuant to his reply, 9 November 2004, Official Report, c. 577W]: This stated that Defra recently obtained copies of the video when it was referred to in correspondence received by Defra officials on 30 September 2004. Further investigations have revealed that this date was incorrect and Defra first acquired a copy of the video at the beginning of February 2003. Copies of the video were distributed and broadcast publicly at the time of the Waugh trial in May 2002. The rest of the answer remains correct.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date a government minister was first informed of the existence of the video of Burnside Farm taken by Northumberland Trading Standards on 24 February 2001. [198004]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

CAP

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate she has made of the percentage of total income constituted by payments under the Common Agricultural Policy for farmers in the UK who receive (a) more than and (b) less than 50,000 euros a year under the Common Agricultural Policy; [195993]

(2) what estimate she has made of the percentage of farmers in the UK who both receive more than 50,000 euros a year under the Common Agricultural Policy and earn more than 50,000 euros a year from other sources of income. [195994]

Alun Michael: As the information requested will take some time to compile, I will write to my hon. Friend with the information shortly. I will place a copy of my letter and the information in the House Library.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further plans she has to advise farmers and land managers on how to adjust to the mid-term review of the common agricultural policy. [197502]

Alun Michael [holding answer 15 November 2004]: Officials are in the process of putting in place a £2.7 million contract to support farmers, land managers and advisers in understanding and implementing land-oriented cross compliance measures through the targeted delivery of advice on Statutory Management Requirements and Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition (GAEC). This contract will dovetail with separate advice contracts addressing pollution minimisation and conservation management. In addition, a new Challenge Fund project in 2004–05, piloting farmer self-help groups to enable them to take ownership of sustainable agriculture issues, will use cross compliance as one of its initial themes. We envisage that the cross compliance advice, which has a delivery window of 2004–07, will build towards the Farm Advisory System introduced from 2007.

A new brochure on the scheme, along with a handbook on cross compliance and set-aside rules, is to be distributed in early December.

We are also currently considering the extent to which the mainstream business advice that can be accessed through the Business Link network may need to be supplemented by specialist advice to assist farm businesses explore the implications of the introduction of the single payment. We will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Carbon Trust

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on collaboration between the Carbon Trust and the Clean Energy Group. [196043]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) resource budget, (b) staff numbers and (c) running costs were of the Carbon Trust in 2003–04. [196044]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Climate Change

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the level of detail which she expects from those wishing to take up climate change discounts. [191094]

Mr. Morley: Companies forming climate change agreements (CCAs) with the Secretary of State are entitled to receive up to an 80 per cent. rebate on the amount of climate change levy they are required to pay on their energy supplies.

In order to obtain a CCA, businesses are required to supply information relating to both their production processes, and energy consumption. This information is necessary to determine the scope of the facility and to enable officials to set company specific targets for energy efficiency improvements.

Small businesses may find that the level of information required in order to join and operate an agreement is such that the associated costs outweigh the financial benefits of participation. However, it is vital that compliance is verifiable, and that the environmental benefits are measurable.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she plans to undertake in response to the report from the Energy Saving Trust and the UK Climate Impact Programme, Forecasting the Future. [198944]

Mr. Morley: The joint launch of the report Forecasting the Future and Energy Efficiency Week 2004 highlighted the link between climate change and sustainable energy to consumers and those who construct and manage housing in the UK. Our Energy White Paper last year identified energy efficiency as the safest and most cost-effective way to meet our energy policy goals. A clear framework for improving energy efficiency at an unprecedented level was set out in the Energy Efficiency Action Plan, published in April.

My Department funds the UK Climate Impacts Programme to help public and private sector organisations understand their vulnerability to the impacts of climate change so that they can develop their own adaptation responses. The report, Forecasting the Future, alongside other publications from this Programme will add to the evidence base available both to stakeholders and to inform policy-making on adaptation.

Cockling

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has to introduce a licensing system for cockling (a) in Morecambe Bay and (b) elsewhere; [199151]

(2) what assistance is being offered by her Department to the Lancashire and Cumbria police in their efforts to police organised cockling in Morecambe Bay; [199154]

(3) what measures her Department has put in place to prevent further deaths of cocklers in Morecambe Bay. [199169]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the tonnage of cockles exported from England in the past 12 months; and what estimate she has made of the number of cocklers operating in Morecambe Bay. [199152]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Combined Heat and Power

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the member states' national allocation plans and the treatment of combined heat and power. [193823]

Mr. Morley: All member states with the exception of Greece have now submitted their National Allocation Plans (NAPs) to the European Commission. Eight of the NAPs, including the UK NAP, were approved in July 2004. A further eight were approved in October 2004. Five of these decisions (including the decision with respect to the UK) were conditional on member states providing additional information. The commission is expected to issue decisions on the remaining eight submitted NAPs by the end of the year or early in the new year.

The allocation to existing combined heat and power (CHP) installations will be done on the same basis as for other installations. All new and extended CHP installations which come online from 1 January 2004 onwards will be eligible to apply for allowances from the new entry reserve (NER). In addition, the Government have now decided to seek the commission's agreement to extending eligibility to apply to the NER to include significant increases in 'Good Quality' capacity of CHP schemes.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195625]

Alun Michael: Defra came into being on the 8 June 2001. A comprehensive and exhaustive list of Acts of Parliament enacted since November 1974 but not yet brought wholly into in force could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In relation to any particular Act of Parliament such information is readily available in standard legal texts such as "Is it in force?" (March 2004) which form part of the "Halsbury's Statutes" service. This publication is available in the House of Commons Library.

However I am able to provide the following information which happens to be readily available:

1991—Certain amendments to the Water Resources Act 1991 made by the Environment Act 1995 have not yet come into force.

2000—Parts of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 including paragraphs 1–5 of Schedule 7 have not yet come into force.

2003—Those parts of the Water Act 2003 not covered by the commencement Order No. 1 2003 SI No. 641 are not yet in force.

Common Agricultural Policy

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new proposals she has to aid the economies of developing nations in Africa and Asia through reforms of the Common Agricultural Policy; and if she will make a statement. [194269]

Alun Michael: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of the Common Agricultural Policy was in the United Kingdom to (a) consumers and (b) taxpayers, broken down by agricultural commodity supported by the Common Agricultural Policy in the most recent year for which figures are available. [196375]

Alun Michael: The UK makes its contributions to the EC Budget as a whole and not to individual categories within it. There is no specific UK contribution to CAP expenditure. The latest EC Budget for 2004 estimates expenditure on CAP to be some €45.7 billion (£32.2 billion). After taking account of the UK abatement, the UK share of financing the 2004 EC Budget is around 11.9 per cent.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what definition her Department uses of (a) fair standard of living and (b) agricultural community in respect of the aims of the common agricultural policy. [197582]

Alun Michael: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Community Energy

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Community Energy Programme will be extended beyond April 2005. [195945]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Contaminated Chocolate

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the storage of chocolate radioactively contaminated following the 1957 Windscale fire. [196981]

Mr. Morley: This is not a matter for this Department.

Dairy Farms

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many dairy farms there were in 1997 in West Derbyshire; how many of them have closed since; and how many there were on the latest date for which figures are available. [198372]

Alun Michael: The following figures show the number of holdings in West Derbyshire parliamentary constituency where dairy is the predominant activity. They reflect the position in the June of each year and therefore show only the net change.

	Dairy holdings
1997	423
2003	330

Note:

Figures for 1997 show main holdings only, in 2003 minor holdings are also included.

Deer Management

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the report, "Current and Future Deer Management Options", published in December 2003. [197329]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Definitions (Energy)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what definitions her Department uses of (a) incinerators, (b) thermal treatment plant, (c) combined heat and power and (d) energy from waste. [198737]

Mr. Morley: The Waste Framework Directive (WFD) (75/442/EEC as amended by 91/156/EEC and Council Decision 96/350/EC) requires anyone carrying out the waste disposal and recovery operations listed in annexes MA and MB of the directive to do so under the terms of a permit issued by the competent authority. The WFD classifies "Incineration on land" (D10) as a waste disposal operation; and "Use [of waste] principally as a fuel or other means to generate energy" (R1) as a waste recovery operation. The distinction between waste disposal and recovery operations is the subject of case law by the European Court of Justice.

The WFD is supplemented by other legislation, including the Waste Incineration Directive (WID) (2000/76/EC). Article 3(4) of the WID defines "incineration plant" and in doing so refers to "the thermal treatment of wastes" and "other thermal treatment processes". Draft guidance concerning this definition is to be found in my Department's publication "Guidance on Directive 2000/76/EC on the incineration of waste", edition 2, August 2004 which is available on my Department's website.

Combined heat and power (CHP) is defined as the simultaneous generation of heat and power in a single process. The power output is usually electricity, but may include mechanical power. Heat outputs can include steam, hot water or hot air for process heating, space heating or absorption chilling.

Energy from waste (EfW) is the general term for all processes that generate energy from the fraction of waste that has calorific value.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for her Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197293]

Alun Michael: The Department does not maintain separate records of its expenditure for advertising. The expenditure for publicity by Defra's Communications Directorate includes marketing, advertising, publications, events, shows and direct mailings and is recorded for the financial years since Defra's creation in June 2001 as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	6.6
2002–03	4.7
2003–04	2.5

This includes communications on a wide range of matters, much of it necessary or beneficial to the public and the wide range of industries in which Defra has an interest, together with local government, voluntary organisations and other bodies.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [192764]

Alun Michael: This information is not held centrally within the Department and it has not been possible to obtain this on the grounds of disproportionate cost.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the properties occupied by (a) her Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004; and what the (A) area and (B) annual rental value (1) in aggregate and (2) in each case was in each year. [196070]

Alun Michael: Defra was not created until 2001. A list of properties for 2004, as requested is tabled as follows.

Departmental Events (Funding)

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by her Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196610]

Alun Michael: The Communications Directorate of the Department undertakes publications, events, and shows for communication on a wide range of matters, much of it necessary or beneficial to the public and the wide range of industries in which Defra has an interest, together with local government, voluntary organisations and other bodies. We currently do not have a system for recording any funding or sponsorship from commercial bodies centrally but we are considering how this can be done.

Dog Fouling

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were fined for offences involving dog fouling in the last year. [198025]

Alun Michael: Last year local authorities issued 2,742 fixed penalties for dog fouling offences.

Eastern Irish Sea Fishery

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the European Commission's recovery plan to save cod from extinction in the North sea and other fishing grounds around the UK. [191579]

Mr. Bradshaw: The International Council for the Exploration of the Seas has published its advice to the European Commission on the current state of the cod stocks around the UK, taking into account of the EU measures already taken to restore the stocks.

The Commission is now considering what regulations to propose for 2005 under the EU cod recovery plan, covering limits on both permitted landings of cod, and the permitted time at sea by vessels which catch cod.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cod by-catch from beam trawlers fishing for sole in the Eastern Irish Sea was in the last 10 years for which figures are available. [192948]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information is only available on the proportion that cod made up of total landings by UK fishing vessels of fish caught in the Irish sea, as opposed to total catches of fish, and this is given as follows. The figures relate to activity by UK fishing vessels over 10 m in length. They represent the average levels over the year, and there is considerable variability seen between individual vessels and individual months of the year.

The information does not include any fish that may have been caught and then discarded before landing. Research was carried out in 2000 looking at the level of catches using beam trawl gear, which showed that cod made up on average 6 to 13 per cent. of catches using beam trawl gear in the Irish sea.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) quota allocations and (b) landings for cod for the (i) Belgian, (ii) French and (iii) Irish fleets operating in the Eastern Irish Sea were for the last 10 years for which figures are available. [192950]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the estimated level of discards were from the beam trawler fleet operating in the Eastern Irish Sea for the last 10 years for which figures are available; [192951]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effects of the use of 80mm mesh cod ends on the level of by-catch of other species in a mixed fishery in the Eastern Irish Sea, with particular reference to cod and plaice. [192959]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Emissions Trading

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on how the European Emissions Trading Scheme will apply to (a) aviation and (b) shipping. [198470]

Mr. Morley: Phase 1 of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme, due to commence in January 2005, will not cover emissions from aviation or shipping. The Government is currently considering options for increasing the scope of the scheme for Phase 2 including, for example, emissions from other transport sectors. As outlined in the 2003 Air Transport White Paper, The Future of Air Transport, the Government is actively pursuing the inclusion of intra-EU aviation in the EU ETS, and this will be a priority for the UK presidency of the EU in 2005. If the UK is successful, it is hoped that intra-EU aviation could be included within the second phase of the EU ETS, beginning in 2008.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's emissions target level is, in terms of the National Allocation Plan for EU emissions trading; and what plans she has to change the target. [198479]

Mr. Morley: The Government announced on 27 October that, subject to European Commission approval, the total quantity of allowances to be issued to UK installations in Phase 1 of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme, which will run from 2005–07, will be set at 756.1 million tonnes CO_2 or 'allowances'. Subject to Commission approval, there are no further plans to change the figures for Phase 1, as these figures have now been finalised. The total quantity for the second phase (2008–12) will be considered as part of the Climate Change Programme Review.

Environmental Offences

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many prosecutions resulted in (a) convictions and (b) custodial sentences in each year since 1999 for offences related to (i) water resources (ii) flood defences, (iii) fisheries, (iv) navigation, (v) process industry regulation, (vi) radioactive substances, (vii) waste and (viii) water quality as recorded in the National Enforcement Database; and what the average fines were where custodial sentences were awarded (A) in total and (B) broken down by region. [192317]

Alun Michael: The information available is given in the following table.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) prosecutions, (b) cautions and (c) enforcement notices there have been in each year since 1995 brought by the Drinking Water Inspectorate (i) in total and (ii) broken down by region. [192318]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Energy Efficiency

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish the study funded by her Department into health improvements for families and individuals whose homes have benefited from energy efficiency improvements under the Warm Front. [196403]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many homes in Manchester, Withington have benefited from the Home Energy Efficiency and Warm Front Schemes. [197879]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Management Committee on application of the Directive on the standardisation and rationalisation of reports on the implementation of certain Directives relating to the environment met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193400]

Mr. Morley: There were no Management Committee meetings on this issue during the Greek presidency. The Management Committee on the application of the 'Standardised Reporting' Directive (91/692/EEC) last met in 1997. In 2002 the commission started work on a new framework for environmental reporting in response to the 6th Environment Action Programme. An Expert Group was set up to discuss commission proposals for a Directive. This group last met in October 2002. There is as yet no formal proposal for a Directive, and no management committee has been convened. In the event of any meeting being scheduled, officials will, as a matter of course, liaise with their counterparts in the Scottish Executive and the other Devolved Administrations.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times during the Greek Presidency of the EU the Committee (a) for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress of the Directive on conservation of wild birds and (b) on the Community action programme in the field of civil protection met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if she will make a statement. [193401]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The Committee for the adaptation to technical and scientific progress of the Directive on conservation of wild birds (the ORNIS Committee) met once during the Greek Presidency, on 26 June 2003 in Brussels. UK representation comprised one official from my Department and one official from the Scottish Executive, together with a scientific adviser from the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. The main agenda items considered were:

> Commission's Sustainable Hunting Initiative: the Commission presented its draft guidance document on interpretation of the Birds Directive, pending further consideration of a key chapter.
> Article 4 (Special Protection Areas): member states provided updates on completing the Special Protection Area network and were updated by the Commission on progress regarding action plans for Annex I species.
> Update on EU enlargement preparations: including agreement that future Annexes to the Directive should comprise scientific names only (given the difficulty of including common names in the increasing numbers of languages), and on timeframes for implementation of the Directive as well as monitoring and peer review exercise for Accession countries.
> Other information points, including reporting by member states under Articles 9 and 12 of the Directive, management of the cormorant, information systems for NATURA 2000 and collaboration with the African Eurasian Waterbird Agreement (AEWA). The UK also highlighted recent work in relation to the ruddy duck and sought supportive action in other member states.

As a consequence of discussions at the meeting, the EU has subsequently published its guidance document on hunting on its website and, with the Government of the Netherlands, is organising a major conference in November to celebrate 25 years of the Birds Directive. The Conference will confirm the extent and coherence of the network of Special Protection Areas for Birds and further develop work on bird monitoring, indicators and reporting. The Commission has also recently invited the Council to consider its proposal to ratify the African-Eurasian Waterbird Agreement.

(b) The Committee on the Community Action Programme met twice during the Greek Presidency, on 27 February and 16 June 2003 in Brussels. UK representation comprised one official from the Cabinet Office at the February meeting. The main agenda items considered were:

27 February 2003

> The state of progress of the implementation of the Community Mechanism: the Commission reported on ongoing and planned activities in training, the CECIS communication system and the common rules for the implementation of the mechanism.
> Mid-Term Evaluation of the Action Programme: consultants reported on the programme and the recommendations were considered by the Commission in future calls for proposals.
> Draft Commission decision on the rolling plan 2000–04 of the Action Programme: members agreed unanimously on the plan to implement the programme.
>
> Other business included: a Commission presentation on the disaster medicine project, a report that the expert exchange system was now launched and information on other civil protection exercises and future meetings.

16 June 2003

> State of implementation of the Community Mechanism: the Commission reported on progress with the database of resources, standard operating procedures for the response centre, the mock up of CESIS, expert missions, training curriculum, and the EU Handbook on assistance interventions.
> Status of the Joint declaration by the Council and Commission on the use of the Community Civil Protection Mechanism in Crisis Management: delegates decided to wait for the adoption of this declaration before voting on the common rules. This would be by written procedure.
> Other business included: Commission services need to follow strict financial rules in place since 1 January 2003. There are still issues of co-financing of exercises and assistance to be solved.

As a consequence of discussions at these meetings, the EU adopted a decision on 29 December 2003 on common rules for the implementation of the Mechanism. The Commission has proposed an extension of the Community Action Programme to the end of 2006.

Farm Business Advisory Service

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for the future of the Farm Business Advisory Service. [197503]

Alun Michael: I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as possible.

Fish Processing

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to promote increased use of (a) by-products and trimmings from the commercial fish-processing sector and (b) discarded by-catch in the manufacture of fish meal and oil. [199228]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Fish Quota

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the total value in (a) sterling and (b) euros of UK fish quota entitlements held by (i) fishing licence holders, (ii) fish producer organisations and (iii) others, broken down by (A) species and (B) fishing sector areas, in each of the last five years for which records are available. [199214]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Flood Control

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations she has undertaken in the last 12 months and with whom, concerning flood control and prevention measures, with particular reference to the recent flooding of Boscastle. [198945]

Mr. Morley: The Department regularly consults on proposed policy changes, both publicly and in more focused ways through, for example, our Flood Management Stakeholder Forum. The most recent public consultation, to inform development of the Government's new Strategy for Flood and Coastal Erosion Risk Management, completed on 1 November.

The Environment Agency is the principle flood defence operating authority in England and Wales responsible for delivering the flood defence service.

Since the severe flooding in Boscastle, the Agency has consulted with individual residents and landowners, North Cornwall District Council (NCDC), the National Trust (who are major landowners in Boscastle and the Valency catchment), the Parish Council and the local County Councillor.

This consultation included meetings with residents in the village hall, the use of a drop-in centre to collect flood information, off-site meetings with the National Trust and attendance at the Regeneration Group established by NCDC. In addition, on-site meetings have been held with individual residents and landowners where required. All discussions were confirmed in writing and plans/drawings of proposed work have been produced.

Newsletters have also been produced and information has been placed on the NCDC website.

The Environment Agency used its emergency powers at Marine Terrace (on the River Jordan) where it is necessary to progress the most urgent work without delay. In doing so, the Agency has worked closely with residents and the local planning authority.

Elsewhere in Boscastle, work is being done in accordance with normal consultation and procedures.

The Agency will continue to consult as appropriate, aiming to meet the challenging target set by the community of certain elements of work being completed before the 2005 holiday season.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who in her Department has seen the video of Burnside Farm, taken by trading standards officials on 24 February 2001; and if she will make a statement. [196530]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether (a) Ministers and (b) officials in the (i) Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and (ii) her Department had been informed of the existence of the (A) James Dring Report, (B) Northumberland Trading Standards video and report, (C) scientific test samples sent to Pirbright and (D) results of those test samples, all in respect of the Burnside Farm, Heddon-on-the-Wall, foot and mouth disease outbreak in 2001, (1) prior to and (2) during the period of the Dr. Iain Anderson FMD Inquiry in 2001–02; [196678]

(2) whether the (a) James Dring report, (b) Northumberland Trading Standards video and report, (c) scientific test samples sent to Pirbright and (d) results of those test samples, in respect of the Burnside Farm, Heddon-on-the-Wall, foot and mouth disease outbreak in 2001, were (i) supplied to the Chairman of the Lessons to be Learned Inquiry in 2001 and (ii) the subject of minuted informal meetings in (A) the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and (B) her Department in (1) 2001 and (2) 2002; [196679]

(3) what assessment was made of the suitability of the (a) James Dring report, (b) Northumberland Trading Standards video and report, (c) scientific test samples sent to Pirbright and (d) results of those test samples, in respect of the Burnside Farm, Heddon-on-the-Wall, foot and mouth disease outbreak in 2001, to be forwarded to Dr. Iain Anderson for his inquiry in 2001–02. [196680]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department first received (a) a video and (b) other documentary evidence from Northumberland Trading Standards Department in respect of the 2001 foot and mouth disease outbreak at Heddon-on-the-Wall. [196682]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before prorogation.

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the Northumberland Trading Standards video of Burnside Farm at the time of the 2001 foot and mouth disease outbreak was not submitted to the Anderson Inquiry. [197501]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether samples were taken from feed destined for consumption by pigs at Burnside Farm, Heddon on the Wall in 2001 and subjected to a compositional analysis; [198822]

(2) whether samples or parts of samples taken from feed destined for consumption by pigs at Burnside Farm, Heddon on the Wall in 2001 have been retained; [198823]

(3) whether samples were taken from feed destined for consumption by pigs at Burnside Farm, Heddon on the Wall in 2001 and tested for the presence of (a) animal proteins that had not been modified by heat and (b) sheep proteins. [198825]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether there was an internal inquiry conducted by her Department and its predecessor into the conduct of Senior Veterinary Officer, Mr. Jim Dring, with regard to inspections at Burnside Farm, Heddon on the Wall, prior to the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in 2001; and if she will make a statement. [198824]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 16 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on which farms which were registered swill feeders animals succumbed to the 2001 epidemic of foot and mouth disease. [198826]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 16 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely costs to her Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [199085]

Alun Michael: Defra has not made an assessment of the likely cost of complying with the Freedom of Information Act during the first quarter of 2005 because it is not possible at this stage to predict with any assurance the volume of requests that the Department is likely to receive. The Department has been working actively to ensure that our staff are aware of the Act's requirements and have the support they need to deal efficiently with any requests they receive.

Government Buildings (Disabled Access)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether all Government buildings in her Department within the Greater London area are fully accessible to disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [199316]

Alun Michael: I am assured that all Defra buildings within the Greater London area offer reasonable access facilities to disabled employees and visiting members of the public.

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects on levels of (a) carbon dioxide and (b) other greenhouse gases achieved through use of an organic system of agriculture and of a biogas plant to recycle animal manures. [198746]

Mr. Morley: A 2003 Defra-funded study OF0405, entitled "An assessment of the environmental impacts of organic farming", reviewed the impacts of organic farming on levels of carbon dioxide (in terms of both carbon dioxide emissions and carbon sequestration), and the other greenhouse gases nitrous oxide, methane and (the indirect greenhouse gas) ammonia. The review report can be found at http://www.defra.gov.uk/science/project data/DocumentLibrary/OF0405/OF 0405 909 TRP.doc

The EC MIDAIR project focuses on mitigation options for organic and conventional dairy production at a system and region specific level. Details of a Defra-funded study (CC0250) forming part of the project can be found at http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/proiect data/More.asp?l = CC0255&M = KWS&V = cc0255&SCOPE = 0

Proceedings of the International Conference "Greenhouse Gas Emissions from Agriculture—Mitigation Options and Strategies", held in February 2004 in Germany, is part of the MIDAIR project and contains reports of numerous, relevant assessments.

Defra has funded two recent projects to assess the effects of anaerobic digestion (biogas plant) on carbon dioxide (via the use of methane generated in the plant as a replacement for non-renewable fossil fuel) and on other greenhouse gases (primarily via the capture and combustion to carbon dioxide of methane which might otherwise be released to the atmosphere—methane having a global warming potential many times that of carbon dioxide). Details of these studies can be found at http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project data/projects.asp?M = KWS&V = cc0222&SCOPE = 0 and at http://www2.defra.gov.uk/research/project data/projects.asp?M = KWS&V = c c0240&SCOPE = 0

Anaerobic treatment options for animal manures (including biogas plants) and their effects on levels of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases were recently reviewed by C.H.Burton and C.Turner (2003) in "Manure Management" second Edition, Chapter 7, pp 273–320, ISBN: 09531282 6 1, Silsoe Research Institute, as part of the EU Accompanying Measure project, MATRESA.

Home Composting

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to measure the contribution of home composting towards recycling targets. [199054]

Mr. Morley: The Government is working with expert bodies, including the Waste and Resources Action Programme, to develop a robust methodology to calculate the amount of waste diverted from the household waste stream through home composting schemes. If a workable and auditable methodology is found, the Government will then review whether and how home composting can be incorporated into future local and national recycling and composting figures.

The impact of home composting on waste reduction is already reflected at local level by Best Value Performance Indicator 84, which measures kilograms of household waste collected per head of population. Home composting activity will also be reflected in local and national progress towards meeting targets under the Landfill Directive to reduce the amount of biodegradable municipal waste sent to landfill.

Hunting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has undertaken of the impact of a ban on hunting on those who live in tied housing; and what steps will be taken to protect existing tied tenants. [198531]

Alun Michael: Tied housing is a private arrangement between landlord and tenant, but any tenants evicted by their landlords as a result of a ban on hunting will have the same recourse to their local services as any other evicted citizen. No assessment has been made by Defra of the effect of a ban on hunting on those living in tied housing as this issue is not covered in Lord Burns' comprehensive report and did not feature significantly in the evidence given to the Portcullis House hearings.

Industrial Fisheries

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to support a reduction in the use of fish meal and oil in aquaculture and agriculture; and what steps are being taken to promote the development of vegetable substitutes for these products. [197210]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government are concerned to protect vulnerable stocks of fish in the production of fishmeal and fish oil and we support measures that may be needed to help stock recovery and sustainability.

Within the EU, the use of fishmeal in the agriculture sector is currently restricted to monogastric animals (eg pigs and poultry). Fishmeal and fish oil are used widely throughout the aquaculture industry and any reduction in usage would have implications for product quality. The issues are complex and are being considered in the context of the EU strategy for the sustainable development of European Aquaculture (Com. (2002) 511 final).

Defra is helping to fund collaborative cod trials which are designed to test different levels of fishmeal replacement with vegetable proteins. Defra has also invested in highly strategic research to transfer the genes in marine algae responsible for the health beneficial components of fish oil to oilseed rape. This research at the Centre for Novel Agricultural Products at the University of York has just been completed. It could lead eventually to the development of oilseed rape varieties providing a vegetable oil based supply which incorporates the key components of fish oil.

Insect Population

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the UK (a) fly, (b) mosquito and (c) cockroach population; and what the predicted numbers are in the event of a (i) 1 per cent. (ii) two per cent. and (iii) three per cent. increase on current average temperatures due to climate changes. [192304]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Kyoto Protocol

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the decision of the Russian Government to sign the Kyoto Protocol. [191123]

Mr. Morley: We are delighted that President Putin has signed the Kyoto Protocol, and eagerly anticipate its deposition at the United Nations shortly. The Protocol will come into force ninety days after its deposition, and we look forward to working with Russia both in achieving our Kyoto goals and at the forthcoming Tenth Conference of Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress with ratification of the Kyoto Protocol; which countries have yet to ratify; and what recent discussions she has had with them. [191128]

Mr. Morley: In order for the Kyoto Protocol to enter into force it must be ratified by 55 countries including developed countries accounting for 55 per cent. of this group's carbon dioxide emissions from 1990. With these criteria satisfied, the Protocol would come into force 90 days after the last required ratified instrument was deposited at the United Nations.

127 countries have, at present, ratified the Protocol, and in the absence of ratification by the US, Russia—which in 1990 produced 17 per cent. of the world's CO_2 emissions—will provide the final signature to bring Kyoto into force. The Federation Council and Duma (Russia's upper and lower Houses of Parliament) approved the Protocol in late October this year, and President Putin put his signature to the document on the 5 November. We now await the document's deposition at the UN, and its eventual coming into force.

My officials and I have regular discussions with our counterparts in other countries, including the US and Australia, about the urgent need for serious action to tackle climate change. The 10th Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change in December in Buenos Aires will provide a further opportunity to exchange views.

Land Management

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that conditions are attached to future stewardship schemes to secure land management practices that reduce the risk of flooding. [198182]

Alun Michael: We hope to launch our new Environmental Stewardship scheme, which is currently awaiting EU approval, early next year. Details of the scheme options and conditions will be released nearer the time.

It is our intention that the scheme will include some measures designed to reduce soil erosion and run-off in high risk areas. It will also include options that may contribute to flood management in both river and coastal situations.

Defra has completed initial research to establish current knowledge of the extent to which changes in land management practices impact on flood events. This has shown that there is great uncertainty about the impacts at other than local scales. Future research in the next few years will consider these impacts upon wider catchment areas. Further conditions or options may be included in future scheme revisions once the scientific evidence is clearer.

Landfill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received regarding the measurement of waste disposal by landfill by volume rather than weight. [198795]

Mr. Morley: This issue is raised occasionally in debates and parliamentary Questions in this House and in correspondence from members of the public. In the main, however, it is recognised that developing an effective system of measuring waste by volume is not straightforward (for example, waste tends to be compacted at various stages during the disposal process). Moreover, as all EU legislation measures waste by weight, a robust and acceptable method of conversion from volume to weight would also be needed.

League Against Cruel Sports

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when (a) she and (b) Ministers in her Department last met representatives of the League Against Cruel Sports; and if she will make a statement. [199190]

Alun Michael: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Milk Prices

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has entered into with supermarkets and co-operatives regarding the farm-gate price of liquid milk; and what the responses of those companies have been. [198373]

Alun Michael: Price negotiations between producers and processors, or processors and supermarkets are private commercial matters in which the Government cannot and should not get involved, provided competition rules are respected. However, Ministers frequently meet representatives from all parts of the dairy supply chain and are therefore aware of the issues.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in her Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191436]

Margaret Beckett: The number of mobile phones held by the Department as at October 2004 is 3,398, of which 46 are the responsibility of the Department's Secretariat. No information is held centrally on the number of phones which have been lost or stolen.

The total payment made to our primary mobile phone contractors for the 12 months to October 2004 is £498,350.46. This includes rental, call charges, mobile phones and accessories. All contracts in place comply with the OGC negotiated contract.

Centralised records were not established until last year, so no details are available for earlier years.

Nickel-cadmium Batteries

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to improve collection and recycling rates for nickel-cadmium batteries. [199281]

Mr. Morley: This is a matter for the Department of Trade and Industry.

Organic Farming

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent in support of organic farming in each of the last three years. [197644]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table shows Defra's spending in the last three financial years on support for organic farming:

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Financial support
Under the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS)[1], which is part of the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP) (£ million)	13.6	14.7	10.4
Other support
Organic Conversion Information (OCIS)(£)	330,293	300,975	237,998
Defra funding for organic farming research projects (£ million)	2.1	1.8	1.9

In the 2004–05 year, payments to the end of October, were as follows:

	2004–05
Financial support
Under the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS)[1], which is part of the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP) (£ million)	4.1
Other support
Organic Conversion Information (OCIS)(£)	106,206
Defra funding for organic farming research projects (£ million)	1.9

[1] Payments made under this scheme are administered by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA).

Over-thirty-month Scheme

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions her Department has had with the Scottish Executive regarding the Over-30-month scheme; and if she will make a statement. [193716]

Alun Michael: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Parliamentary Questions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the question, reference 198471, from the hon. Member for Vale of York. [199350]

Mr. Morley: I replied to the hon. Member's question on 17 November 2004.

Peat Bogs

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her letter of 10 October (her ref: 203663/JF) regarding peat bogs, when she expects the consultation on the designation of (a) Bolton Fell Moss and (b) Solway Moss as special areas of conservation to be concluded. [197081]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Peregrine Falcons

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the size of the peregrine falcon population in the UK (a) at present, (b) 10 years ago, (c) 20 years ago and (d) 30 years. [198389]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Public Telephones

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of coverage of public telephone kiosks in rural areas; and what discussions she has had with British Telecommunications and other telephone suppliers on this matter. [190063]

Alun Michael: I have not made an assessment or had discussions with telephone suppliers. The Government takes access to all public services in rural areas seriously and all telephone providers are subject to the universal service obligation.

Universal service is a concept fundamental to the regulation of telecommunications in the UK. It means that basic telephone services should be available to everybody upon reasonable request and at an affordable price. This includes the provision of public call boxes and call box services in the UK.

This is a matter for the Office of Communications (Ofcom), which took over responsibility for telecommunications regulation in December 2003. The universal service conditions and directions applying to public call boxes can be found on Ofcom's website. Ofcom is currently reviewing the universal service obligation and intends to publish a document for consultation later this year.

Publications

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the Department's publications, copies of which have been mailed unsolicited in the most recent 12 months for which information is available; and how many copies of each publication were printed. [197723]

Alun Michael: The Department's Communication Directorate issued some 109 mailings during the most recent 12 months. These mainly consist of forms and guidance to farmers dealing with Common Agricultural Policy issues and consultation documents targeted at stakeholders and other interested parties.

The number of copies printed is determined by the number of addresses on the appropriate mailing list; this could range from a few hundred for some consultations to 200,000 for a circulation to all farmers.

During the period we issued 33 mailings to farmers; 27 consultation documents and 49 containing general information to regional and specialist groups.

Raptors

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what legislation is in force to protect raptor bird populations; and whether she has plans to amend the legislation. [198377]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what effect the existing legislation to protect raptor birds has had on their population in the UK. [198388]

Mr. Bradshaw: All birds of prey are strictly protected under UK law. The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 (for Great Britain) and the 1985 Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order, as amended by other legislation such as the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 and the Nature Conservation (Scotland) Act 2004, establish the legal basis for the protection of these and other bird species.

Illegal persecution constrains populations sizes and distribution. The population of hen harrier is now at a level which jeopardises the continued existence of the species in England. However other species are in the process of recovering former distribution and population size, apparently as a consequence of recent lessening of levels of illegal persecution directed at them. Thus the Buzzard currently appears to be re-establishing its former range in lowland Britain.

The population status of birds of prey is affected not only by their legal status, but also by a range of other factors some of which are under different forms of legislative or policy regulation. Thus in recent decades the populations of Peregrine and Sparrowhawk have been recovering their former distributions and numbers as a consequence of progressive legal restrictions on the use of persistent organo-chlorine pesticides formerly used in agriculture, leading to the ultimate banning of the use of DDT in 1986.

Land-use changes (many of which are under legislative or policy control), such as open-ground afforestation, have affected UK raptor populations in a range of ways—and have had different impacts consequent on species' different ecological requirements. Meanwhile species such as White-tailed Eagle and Red Kite have been the subject of active re-establishment programmes. Information on the main drivers of population change for each species of UK raptor is summarised in Annex 4 of the 2000 report to Ministers of the UK Raptor Working Group, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Recycling

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of (a) domestic refuse, (b) commercial refuse and (c) industrial refuse was recycled in (i) Leicester and (ii) England in the last year for which figures are available. [198662]

Mr. Morley: Results from the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey 2002–03 show Leicester with a household recycling rate of 11.5 per cent. The household recycling rate for England over the same period was 14.5 per cent.

The latest results available for industrial and commercial waste, reused or recycled are from the Environment Agency, National Waste Production Survey, 1998–99. Results for England show a commercial recycling rate of 24.2 per cent. and an industrial recycling rate of 42.2 per cent. The corresponding recycling rates for Leicester are not available.

Regulatory Impact Assessments

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the aggregate annual cost measured by the regulatory impact assessments is of compliance with all the regulations introduced by her Department since 1997. [196560]

Alun Michael: All proposals which impact on business, charities or the voluntary sector require a regulatory impact assessment (RIA) which includes details of the costs, benefits and risks of the proposal. RIAs are subject to public consultation and copies of final RIAs are available from the House Libraries and on departmental websites.

River Thames (Sewage)

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to avoid a repetition of the flooding of the River Thames with raw sewage in August; and if she will make a statement. [199155]

Mr. Morley: The sewage collection system serving London is comprised largely of combined systems which collect and transport for treatment both domestic and industrial waste water, and rainwater run-off. As sewers and sewage treatment works have a maximum capacity, it is a design feature of combined systems to have overflows which discharge in some wet weather conditions to prevent sewers from flooding, and sewage treatment works from being overloaded. Therefore, although we hope the environmental effects of the sewage discharge in early August aren't repeated, the overflows will continue to operate during some wet weather conditions.

As agreed in the last Periodic Review of water company price limits for 2000–05, Thames Water, the Environment Agency, Defra and the Office of Water Services (Ofwat) have been involved in a Strategic Study of the environmental impact of intermittent storm sewage discharges to the Thames Tideway. The remit of the study was to identify objectives for improvement, and to propose potential solutions, having regard to costs and benefits.

As a result of the study, the Final Guidance by the Secretary of State to the Director-General of OfWat, published on 4 October 2004, and the draft price limits published by Ofwat on 5 August 2004, include provision for further measures to address sewage discharges to the Thames Tideway.

In the medium term this will result in improvements to the capacity and quality of treated effluent from three sewage treatment works (Beckton, Crossness, and Mogden) which discharge to the Thames Tideway. These improvements are also to include reducing the frequency of intermittent discharges from the storm water storage tanks at Mogden, which made a significant contribution to the pollution in August.

In addition a scheme to improve the treated effluent at Riverside sewage treatment works, is identified to improve water quality in the river and protect fish.

Also, as set out in the Final Guidance, we have asked Thames Water and the Environment Agency to undertake further work on a long-term solution proposed by the Strategic Study group, and on other smaller-scalemeasures that could bring earlier improvements on intermittent discharges.

Sand Eels

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the advice by the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea recommending a reduction in fishing for North Sea sand eels; and if she will support lower catch limits for industrial feed fisheries within EU waters at the next EU Fisheries Council. [199229]

Mr. Bradshaw: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

School Milk

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will ensure that milk is available under the school milk scheme to pupils in all schools. [197779]

Alun Michael: Member states are required to make the EU school milk subsidy scheme available to primary and nursery schools wishing to participate; participation is, a matter for the school or local education authority.

Set-aside Rules

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish details of the new set-aside rules. [199298]

Alun Michael: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Single Farm Payment Scheme

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how different types of tenanted farms are to be treated in respect of their eligibility for National Reserve payments under the proposed Single Farm Payment system. [198820]

Alun Michael: The precise way in which the national reserve will operate in certain circumstances is still being considered. I anticipate a further announcement soon.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether tenancies secured under the provisions of the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1986 will be treated as entitled to payments from the National Reserve under the proposed Single Farm Payment system. [198821]

Alun Michael: In applying the provisions of the national reserve, leases of six years or more (five in some circumstances) may be considered as equivalent to purchase and lead to an award under the "investors" category. The 1986 Act Tenancies are essentially one-year renewable tenancies. We are still considering whether they can be considered as long-term tenancies for this purpose.

Sugar

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) discussions she has had and (b) agreements she has reached with her colleagues in the (i) Department for Trade and Industry and (ii) Department for International Development in respect of the UK position on the future of the EU Sugar Regime. [198760]

Alun Michael: Reform of the EU sugar regime has been the subject of normal inter-departmental consultation. The welcome which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the European Commission's latest Communication at the July Agriculture Council, as an important step in the right direction, reflected these discussions.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what decisions the Government have taken in respect of European Council negotiations on the future of the EU Sugar Regime. [198761]

Alun Michael: The Government have welcomed the European Commission's July Communication on sugar reform as an important step in the right direction and continues to urge the need for early progress, including on an Action Plan to address the concerns of existing preferential suppliers to the EU market.

Formal negotiations will not begin until the Commission comes forward with detailed legislative proposals.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) the timetable for (i) future negotiations and (ii) decisions and (b) future entitlement to quota ownership in respect of the EU Sugar Regime. [198827]

Alun Michael: The European Commission has tabled a Communication setting out their preferred approach to sugar reform, but have not yet made formal legislative proposals for a new regime. It is for the Commission to decide when to put such proposals to the Council and for the Presidency in office to bring discussions to a successful conclusion.

We do not have a view on future entitlement to quota ownership at this stage of discussion.

Timber

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what policy directions on procurement of legal and sustainably sourced timber she has issued applying to (a) Lottery funded bodies and (b) private finance initiative contracts; and if she will make a statement. [198222]

Alun Michael: Lottery distributors who are responsible for issuing instructions to Lottery funded bodies, are intended to be, independent of Government, but they are obliged to take into account policy directions from the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. These directions set out the framework for the wider aims of Lottery funding, and include the need for the distributing bodies to further the objectives of sustainable development when awarding Lottery grants. The Lottery distributing bodies are strongly committed to sustainable development, including the procurement of timber from legal and sustainable sources.

Advice on implementing sustainable development policy through public private partnership contracts can be viewed in the Guide at www.hm- treasury.gov.uk/media/851/A5/PPP_GreenPublicPrivatePart.pdf. This advice contains a number of references and links to the Government's timber procurement policy, including a specific reminder of the commitment in Annex A under the heading Materials.

The OGC first issued guidance to departments on the procurement of legal and sustainable timber in their construction projects, including through PFI contracts, in an Information Note (IN 9/2002) in December 2002. That Note included the following text. "Departments must review their existing arrangements for the purchase of legal and sustainably-produced timber and timber products, such as joinery, fittings, furniture and veneers. To help ensure that suppliers are fully aware of the Government's commitment and what it means to them, the Minister for the Environment wrote to Green Ministers on 13 May 2002 asking them, inter alia, to review their procurement of timber and timber products. The letter enclosed a model specification clause for use in Government contracts. Anyone who is developing or managing a public private partnership, including PFI projects involving capital investment should take account of this latest letter to Green Ministers when writing their output specification. The Green Public Private Partnerships guide gives advice on writing the output specification as well as issues for contractors to consider when drawing up their tender."

The OGC issued further advice in the light of Defra's January 2004 guidance and revised model contract specification clause on timber procurement, in a subsequent Information Note (IN 5/2004) in May 2004 to update that given in IN 9/2002.

Tobacco-growing Industry

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what level of financial support has been given to the tobacco-growing industry in the EU in each of the last five years. [193507]

Alun Michael: The level of financial support (premiums) for the tobacco-growing industry in the EU in each of the last five years is shown in the table.

Under the agreement reached by the Council of Ministers in Luxembourg in April of this year, direct support for tobacco will be brought to an end by 2010. Between 2006 and 2010 producer member states will have the option of retaining up to 60 per cent. of the tobacco premium as a coupled payment. From 2010, aid will be completely decoupled from production with 50 per cent. being transferred to the single farm payment and the remaining 50 per cent. to be used for restructuring programmes under the rural development programme.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the disposal of toxic waste. [199064]

Mr. Morley: Significant changes in the management of hazardous waste are being brought about by implementation of the Landfill and Hazardous Waste Directives. Earlier concerns that the UK would have insufficient landfill capacity to deal with arisings of hazardous waste following the end of co-disposal on 16 July 2004 have not materialised. There is sufficient landfill capacity to meet demand at present and fly tipping has not increased.

The Government and the Agency are working together to prepare for the full implementation of the Landfill Directive waste acceptance criteria (WAC) in July 2005. The WAG set leachate limits on waste going to landfill, and will require some hazardous waste to have additional treatment prior to landfill. It is important that producers of hazardous waste in particular, are aware of their obligations, and that they are liaising with the waste management industry as necessary. To that end Defra has organised a seminar on the issue next month. In addition, a comprehensive web portal www.hazardouswaste.org.uk, has been established to provide links to advice, guidance and details of regulatory requirements.

The Hazardous Waste Forum also meets regularly to discuss a variety of issues, including disposal.

Warm Front

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households in England are eligible for assistance under the (a) Warm Front and (b) Warm Front Plus programmes; how many additional households become eligible for Warm Front Plus as a result of pension credit being added to the range of qualifying benefits; and if she will make a statement. [196953]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what discretion her Department allows Warm Front scheme managers to (a) repeat grants for households which have already benefited from Warm Front and (b) fast-track exceptionally vulnerable households; [199209]

(2) what mechanisms are in place to monitor private landlords' compliance with the requirement to freeze rents for a one or two year period after a Warm Front improvement. [199210]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Waste Management (PFI)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to establish a taskforce to help local authorities which may use private finance initiatives to develop waste management infrastructure and facilities. [198231]

Mr. Morley: The private finance initiative is one of the main mechanisms through which local government funds investment in value for money waste services.

In 2003, Defra set up a Waste Implementation Programme (WIP) to facilitate improved local authority performance, boost the take up of wider options for waste management and to co-ordinate funding more effectively. Action taken by WIP has already led to an increase in the number of waste PFI projects coming forward, including through close working with local authorities, the waste industry and the public-private partnerships programme (the 4Ps).

A new Waste Management Procurement Pack has been developed by the 4Ps to provide specific assistance to local authorities in England with the procurement of waste management projects through the PFI—strongly supported by Defra, Partnerships UK and the Waste and Resources Action Programme. This guidance, which all local authorities can use, will enable the initial delivery of projects to a higher standard, reduce the time taken for them to reach contract signature, and act as a guide and invaluable tool throughout the whole procurement process.

The WIP programme is committed to ensuring that ongoing support is made available to local authorities to maintain the healthy levels of good quality potential waste PFI projects that we are currently seeing. The need for further specific support measures is currently under consideration.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has put in place to permit waste disposal authorities, which will be introducing new private finance initiative waste management contracts, to suspend any fines prior to the full introduction of the contract under the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme. [198480]

Mr. Morley: None; under Section 9(2) of the Waste and Emissions Trading Act 2003 a waste disposal authority (WDA) automatically becomes liable for a (financial) penalty if the amount of biodegradable municipal waste it sends to landfill in any one scheme year exceeds the amount authorised by the number of landfill allowances it holds for that year. Before that position is reached, however, a WDA will be able to trade or borrow allowances in a six month reconciliation period that follows the end of a scheme year, in order to balance its books. Alternatively, a WDA can make a case to the Secretary of State for her to use her powers to waive a penalty if the reason for the breach was beyond its control.

Water Bills/Metering

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking in accordance with the Water Act 1999 to ensure that metered customers of water companies have the choice of remaining on a metered bill or changing to a rateable value bill; and if she will make a statement. [198268]

Mr. Morley: The Water Industry Act 1999 provides that household customers charged for their water on an unmeasured basis have the right to continue to pay on that basis in their current home. They also have the right to change to a measured basis free of charge and have the corresponding right to revert to an unmeasured charge within the first year.

It is the responsibility of Ofwat to ensure that companies charge fairly and keep their customers well-informed of their rights and the choices open to them.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the net change in the number of household customers charged for water on the basis of metering was in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [191045]

Mr. Morley: The following table shows the change in the number of households with a metered supply for the years (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. The figures take account of households who have requested a metered supply, households who have been metered at the water company's initiative and new household properties that are almost all metered. The numbers reported in the table include the effect of any reduction in the number of measured households during the year.

Period	Increase in number of measured household properties over this period
31 March 2001 to 31 March 2002	387,478
31 March 2002 to 31 March 2003	384,782
31 March 2003 to 31 March 2004	427,447

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in (a) Hemsworth constituency and (b) England use water meters. [198747]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Windfall Tax (Oil and Gas)

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions her Department has had with HM Treasury on (a) the case for a windfall tax on excessive profits made by oil and gas producers and (b) the use of revenues from such a tax to fund a domestic energy efficiency programme; and if she will make a statement. [198503]

Mr. Morley: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Worcester

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the Worcester constituency, the effect of changes to departmental policies since 1997, on the Worcester constituency. [198382]

Alun Michael: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

I will write to my hon. Friend with the information as soon as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

"Reducing Crime, Changing Lives"

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he had prior to the publication of his response to the Carter report. [155611]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the proposals set out in, Reducing Crime, Changing Lives, on 6 January, were not subject to the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultations in relation to (a) prior consultation with stakeholders and (b) the minimum 12-week consultation period. [155957]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Accession State Worker Registration Scheme

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for the Accession State Worker Registration Scheme have been received since 1 May; what the latest figures are for the average times taken between the receipt of an application and (a) the return of the applicant's passport and (b) the issue of a registration certificate; and what the target time is for processing applications. [193990]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Alcohol Industry

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in securing voluntary contributions towards the cost of policing disorder from the alcohol industry. [198909]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Anglia Water

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the (a) level of customer service and (b) effectiveness of sub-contractor management provided by the Anglia Water Group in respect of approved premises contracts over the past 18 months. [194319]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 28 October 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Anguilla

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK and EU passports have been (a) applied for and (b) obtained by Anguillan citizens in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement on levels of immigration from Anguilla. [197491]

Mr. Browne: British passports are issued to British nationals in accordance with the Nationality Act 1981. Anguilla is an overseas territory of the United Kingdom and on 21 May 2002, the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 came into force.

British Overseas Territory Citizens (previously British Dependent Territory citizens) with a connection with Anguilla will have become a British citizen with the introduction of this Act. They are eligible to apply for a British passport in one of two designs; a EU style passport showing them as a British citizen or a non-EU passport showing their national status as British Overseas Territory Citizen Anguilla.

Unfortunately, we are unable to provide details of non-EU passports issued broken down into different categories nor do we have the facility to establish how many passports are issued showing a specific country of birth. There are also no figures available for the number of British Dependant Territory citizens who have obtained British citizenship before 2002 and then applied for a British passport.

It is not possible to say from centrally held information what the levels of immigration from Anguilla are.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evidential basis was for point one of the Home Office response to twelve questions raised by Dan Lyons, uncaged campaigns, about Imutran Xenotransplantation research licensed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [198553]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether lethal endpoints were expected in (a) project licence authorities and (b) other communications between the Home Office, the Animal Procedures Committee and Imutran in relation to Imutran xenotransplantation procedures with a moderate severity limit. [198557]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1895W, on animal experimentation, on what date the Animal Procedures Committee was informed that Imutran primates on moderate procedures had been found dead; and what form the communication took. [198558]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what infringement action has been taken under section 6(6) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 against, (a) named day-to-day care persons and (b) named veterinary surgeons employed by Huntingdon Life Sciences, in respect of failures to make arrangements for the care or destruction of primates in Imutran xenotransplantation procedures where breaches of the moderate severity limit occurred as identified at paragraph 5.14 of the chief inspector's compliance review. [198560]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Antisocial Behaviour

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to tackle antisocial behaviour in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198588]

Ms Blears: The Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 is the single biggest package of measures tackling antisocial behaviour. It was introduced after widespread consultation with communities and practitioners. These powers are part of the Government's TOGETHER campaign to help local people and agencies tackle the menace of yob behaviour. The Act and Together apply across all of England and Wales including the hon. Member's Constituency.

To achieve this there has been the provision of centrally funded Anti-Social Behaviour Co-ordinators and for which Newcastle-under-Lyme have received £10,000 in 2003–04 and £25,000 in 2004–05.

An audit of crime and disorder within the borough of Newcastle identified antisocial behaviour as one of the priority issues. The Newcastle Community Safety Partnership has responded by developing an Antisocial Behaviour Strategy that seeks to develop a co-ordinated approach to tackling antisocial behaviour. The strategy focuses on three key work areas:

Continual review of hotspots via consultation.

Supporting local people who have been the victim of antisocial behaviour and raising awareness and understanding of hard to reach groups, who are vulnerable to antisocial behaviour.

Focused intelligence gathering on, and challenging of prolific offenders. This includes identifying persons responsible for antisocial behaviour and targeting positive interventions and enforcement.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government have taken to promote stronger and safer communities in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198590]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on tackling drugs misuse in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198591]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198592]

Ms Blears: The number of notifications received by the Home office of antisocial behaviour orders issued, up to 30 June 2004 (latest available), where the restrictions imposed are specific to Newcastle-under-Lyme, is 13.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of antisocial behaviour orders issued in the Vale of York in each of the last three years. [198647]

Ms Blears: The number of notifications received by the Home Office of antisocial behaviour orders issued in each of the last three years within the North Yorkshire magistrates courts committee (MCC) area, which includes the Vale of York, is given in the table.

The number of ASBOs issued in North Yorkshire, as reported to the Home Office, by period

Asylum

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the meetings in his diary for the rest of 2004 on delivering the Government's strategy on asylum. [192008]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have taken place under section 2 of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004; how many of these are being dealt with in magistrates courts; and how many have been referred to Crown courts. [192789]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Asylum and Immigration Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost was of enforcing section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 in each year since 1997. [198903]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Asylum Appeals

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals against refusal of political asylum were waiting to be heard on 1 October. [198885]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the building of the proposed asylum accommodation centre at Bicester to (a) commence and (b) be completed; when he expects the building to be ready to accept asylum seekers; what plans have been made for the build-up of occupation of the centre by asylum seekers; and if he will make a statement. [199030]

Mr. Browne: It is expected that construction of the accommodation centre near Bicester will commence in early 2005.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he has in place to keep track of people waiting for asylum applications to be processed. [191270]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum there were per month in each of the last 10 years. [191450]

Mr. Browne: The table shows the number of asylum applications (principal applicants) received in the UK from January 1994 to December 2004.

Information on asylum applications are published on a quarterly and annual basis. The publication covering the third quarter of 2004 (July to September) was published on 16 November on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

The Prime Minister's pledge to reduce by a half the number of applications by September 2003 (using a baseline of October 2002) has been achieved. A range of initiatives has contributed to this success, including the introduction of juxtaposed controls, the deployment of New Detection Technology in France and Belgium, an informed and robust visa strategy, a network of airline liaison officers and close co-operation with carriers, port authorities and our EU colleagues.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers he expects to remove in the next 12 months. [193255]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his proposals to decide asylum applications offshore. [193257]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Home Office initial decision-makers in relation to asylum applications were in the post on 1 September in each of the last seven years. [193311]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many accommodation centres for asylum seekers are operational; and if he will make a statement. [193312]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: None. A contractor has been appointed to design, build and operate the first centre near Bicester; now that the local authority's legal challenge of the planning process has concluded we expect construction on this centre to begin in early 2005.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are currently processing the exceptional indefinite leave to remain exercise applications; whether there is a backlog; and if he will make a statement. [195470]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of initial decisions on asylum applications have been successfully appealed in the last 12 months. [195471]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the status is of (a) an asylum seeker, (b) a failed asylum seeker and (c) their dependants in each case if a spouse is granted the right to work in the UK as an EU citizen under the Workers Registration Scheme. [195895]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the rate of removals of failed asylum seekers in each of the last five years. [196621]

Mr. Browne: The latest available information on the number of asylum seekers removed is shown in the table.

Removals, voluntary departures[1], assisted returns, of asylum applicants, January 1999 to June 2004[2]

Provisional statistics for the number of persons removed during the third quarter of 2004 was published on 16 November, on the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 601W, on asylum seekers, for what reasons some local authorities in certain years have negative net expenditure on asylum. [199008]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated number of asylum seekers residing in each parliamentary constituency is. [199015]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been dispersed to each parliamentary constituency in (a) the two years up to the end of 2003 and (b) the latest two-year period for which data is available. [199128]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my right hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for (a) which countries of origin and (b) what periods since 1997 it has been the policy of his Department not to enforce the return of failed asylum seekers. [193308]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Since 1997, the Home Office has had a policy of not enforcing the return of failed asylum seekers to the countries listed below, for the periods specified.

Prior to October 2002, Exceptional Leave to Remain (ELR) was granted to asylum applicants from particular countries on a country basis. The blanket use of ELR for certain countries ended in October 2002 and since then the issue of return has been considered solely in terms of the individual circumstances of each case.

Since the end of blanket ELR policies the only country for which there has been a general policy not to enforce the return of failed asylum seekers has been Zimbabwe. Enforced returns of failed asylum seekers to Zimbabwe were temporarily suspended between 15 January 2002 and 16 November 2004.

Country	Period Specified
Afghanistan	January 1995—October 2002

[2] policy in place since late 1980s

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people originally granted exceptional leave to remain have been (a) refused and (b) granted indefinite leave to remain in each of the last five years. [193309]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 25 October 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the grant regime to local authorities for funding unaccompanied asylum seeking children; and if he will make a statement. [198174]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 15 November 2004]: The instructions for payment of grant in this financial year 2004–05 to local authorities supporting unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASCs) were issued to local government organisations on 10 November 2004. The grant regime is broadly similar to that applying in previous years and allowed a 2.5 per cent. uplift for inflation.

Badger Baiting

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of badgers killed illegally by badger baiters in each of the last five years. [195349]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Binge Drinking

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the steps that have been taken by the brewing and licensed trade industry to combat binge drinking. [199192]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

British Crime Survey

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the (a) usefulness and (b) accuracy of the British Crime Survey. [196701]

Ms Blears: The British Crime Survey (BCS), is the most authoritative source for assessing crime levels. It measures the crimes most people experience most of the time and measures peoples' direct experiences of crime. It is not affected by reporting or recording changes and has consistently measured crime the same way since it started in 1981.

Within Government it is used to inform and monitor policy and to assess performance. Police forces use BCS results to measure statutory performance indicators and target performance. They also compare their local data with BCS findings and use the survey as a tool for designing their own surveys.

The BCS is an internationally renowned reference work that is used in academia.

The Home Office has ensured that the survey data are available through the ESRC data archive, and it has also awarded grants for analysis by external academics.

About 50 external academics have published articles based on BCS data, and more have used it without leading to peer-reviewed publications.

Statistics from the BCS are released quarterly under the national statistics protocol which means they are assured for quality, timeliness and freedom from political interference. The BCS was reviewed in 2000 (Lynn and Elliot) and all recommendations from the review have been implemented.

Burglaries (London)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many burglaries there were in each London borough in (a) each year since 2001 and (b) each month to date in 2004. [199241]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Business Case Assessments

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department has received from the Cabinet Office on the timing of business case assessments in respect of major projects. [198870]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Car Thefts (London)

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many car thefts there were in each London borough in (a) each year since 2001 and (b) each month to date in 2004. [199242]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Child Pornography

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the steps that have been taken by credit card companies to combat the purchasing of child pornography on the internet. [199194]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further steps his Department intends to take to ensure that credit card companies do all they can to combat the purchasing of child pornography on the internet. [199195]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Church of England Charities

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how long he expects Church of England charities to remain excepted charities. [199114]

Fiona Mactaggart: The draft Charities Bill would end the system of exceptions from the requirement to register. Initially, excepted charities with an annual income above £100,000 would be required to register. Any decision to lower that threshold would be made only after further consultation with key stakeholders, including the Church of England. Before any plans are drawn up to lower the registration threshold for excepted charities the Government intend to monitor and report on the actual costs and benefits of the registration of those charities with an annual income above £100,000.

Civil Servants (Yorkshire)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent jobs (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies had in (i) Yorkshire and the Humber and (ii) the City of York in (A) 1997 and (B) the latest year for which figures are available. [191852]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Closed Circuit Television

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what schemes exist to provide financial assistance for the extension of closed circuit television in town centres. [198610]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the level of funding for CCTV security cameras was in Bournemouth in each year since 1997; and how many CCTV security cameras were switched off in Bournemouth in each year since 1997. [197973]

Ms Blears: Between 1997 and 2001 the Home Office provided Bournemouth with £100,463 for Closed Circuit Television systems. Between 2001 and 2004, they received an additional £255,000 for crime reduction initiatives from miscellaneous Home Office funding streams, providing for 176 CCTV cameras.

The operation of CCTV cameras is a matter for Bournemouth borough council and Dorset police.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195621]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account the maximum funded cost for a community support officer takes of higher police pay in London. [192536]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 188W, on community support officers, for what reasons each of the 31 detentions under the detention power pilot resulted in release after the arrival of a police officer; and if he will make a statement. [199056]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Consultancy Projects

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193429]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 25 October 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Consultants

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much expenditure his Department has incurred in each year since 2002 on employing external consultants to deal with the press and public relations of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [195382]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent in each year since 2002 on employing (a) external management consultants and (b) external human resources consultants; and if he will make a statement. [195763]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Correspondence

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the director of Ofcom to reply to the letters of 28 June and 11 September from the hon. Member for Normanton relating to correspondence with the Home Secretary. [196964]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the waiting time for consideration of (a) urgent and (b) non-urgent cases by the Criminal Cases Review Commission (CCRC) was in the last period for which figures are available; what estimate he has made of the budget the CCRC would require to have the same capacity in 2005–06 as in 2004–05; and what estimate he has made of the resources the CCRC would require to consider (i) priority cases urgently and (ii) non-priority cases within a year. [197658]

Paul Goggins: The Criminal Cases Review Commission has always sought ways of minimising its case waiting times and this remains one of its key targets.

The Commission does not divide applications into urgent and non-urgent. Applications that require no more than five days case work are allocated for review as soon as all the necessary papers are to hand and these account for 51 per cent. of applications. A further 31 per cent. of applications are dealt with on a largely administrative basis, usually because the applicant has yet to exhaust the normal appeals process.

The remaining applications (18 per cent.) are placed in a queue, distinguishing between those in custody, which have priority and those at liberty. Within those cases awaiting allocation, a small number are accorded priority over others for particular reasons such as age, state of health, deterioration of evidence, witness availability and public interest. Such cases are allocated without delay. This practice continues. At 31 March 2004, the maximum delay before allocation to a caseworker was one year for in custody cases and two years for those at liberty.

My estimate is that to enable the Commission to achieve the same performance next year as this I would need to provide a broadly similar level of resources for 2005–06 as I have for 2004–05. The budgets for 2005–06 have yet to be delegated and that for the Commission will have to be set in the light of competing priorities.

Housing

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on police funding of the Government's proposals for housing growth in the South Midlands and Milton Keynes area. [197604]

Keith Hill: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Home Office are working together to assist police authorities in planning future needs in the Milton Keynes-South Midlands (MKSM) Growth Area.

Funding for policing is based on an assessment of the relative need for police resources across the 43 police areas in England and Wales. That assessment is based on the police funding formula, which takes account of population data and socio-demographic factors including density, sparsity and deprivation.

In addition, the three relevant police forces (Thames Valley, Northamptonshire and Bedfordshire) have recently commenced a joint project to consider the implications for policing of the proposals contained within the revised draft MKSM sub-regional strategy. This includes community safety (as understood in the context of section 17 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 and subsequently by Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships) particularly in relation to the physical design of neighbourhoods and infrastructure, but also the wider context of crime, disorder and accident reduction.

Identity Cards

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent consultants from PA Consulting are advising his Department on the design of the National Identity Card Programme; what the average annual cost per consultant is; what the total cost of the consultants is; and if he will make a statement. Infection Training

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make infection control induction training mandatory for all NHS medical staff; when this training will begin; and what the estimated cost of this training will be per year. [193452]

Mr. Hutton: National health service medical staff already receive training on infection control and trusts should provide suitable induction training for all staff.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome was of the Justice and Home Affairs Council held on 25 to 26 October; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [194504]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Juvenile Offenders

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed by juvenile offenders in (a) Haltemprice and Howden, (b) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (c) the Humberside police authority area in each of the last four quarters for which figures are available; and how many cautions were issued. [194980]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Knives

Dr. Jenny Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) police and (b) local authorities regarding people carrying knives. [198889]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mental Health Act

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that each police division has access to a designated place of safety as defined by the Mental Health Act 1983. [199061]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Methadone (Prisons)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many methadone-related suicides there have been in prisons in each year since 1997. [199020]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Migrant Workers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department into how many languages the leaflets produced for migrant workers, resulting from recommendations from the Operation Gangmaster, have been translated. [196757]

Mr. Browne: Operation Gangmaster is a Government initiative designed to bring different Departments and agencies together to tackle abuses by rogue labour providers. This initiative has not produced any specific recommendations to translate information for migrant workers. However, the Government have been active in making translated information available and has had regard to recommendations previously made on this issue by the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Committee, of which my hon. Friend is a member.

Earlier this year, the Home Office produced a leaflet and guidance notes for applicants to the accession worker registration scheme in relevant languages. These outlined the details of the scheme and gave advice to workers rights. The Trades Union Congress also produced their own leaflet on workers' rights and the Home Office met the cost of producing translations of this leaflet in Hungarian, Estonian, Czech, Latvian, Slovak and Polish.

In response to specific concerns about the mistreatment of workers, the Department for Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office have worked with the Portuguese community and the TUC to produce leaflets explaining the rights of workers in Portuguese. The DTI has also worked with the Polish and Lithuanian Governments to produce bilingual leaflets on employment rights for their nationals. These were launched in June.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the National Association of Citizen Advice Bureaux on the issuing of advice to migrant workers. [196758]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Ministerial Expenses

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [191409]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action members of the public who see drivers using mobile phones whilst driving should take. [198500]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up a free phone number that members of the public can ring in to give the car registration numbers of those drivers who break the law on using mobile phones while driving. [198501]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the appropriate authorities should take when a member of the public makes a complaint against a driver who was using a mobile phone while driving. [198502]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Motoring Offence Fines

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were issued fines for motoring offences in each year since 1997; and what proportion of those fines were paid in each year. [199270]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Multiculturalism

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's strategy is further to improve integration and boost multiculturalism among young British citizens. [190134]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Cheryl Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the introduction of the concept of contestability within the National Offender Management Service. [190117]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the risk assessment that has been carried out in respect of the implementation of National Offender Management Service. [198475]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 16 November 2004]: As part of the setting up of the National Offender Management Service, a comprehensive risk management strategy has been established, providing for the assessment, monitoring and managing of risks across the change programme. In keeping with normal practice across Government, it is not intended to publish the findings from these assessments.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what risk assessment he has carried out on (a) prison capacity and (b) workload at the National Offender Management Service; and what the outcome was. [198476]

Paul Goggins: As part of the setting up of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS), a comprehensive risk management strategy has been established, providing for the assessment, monitoring and managing of risks across the change programme. The results have been agreed with the NOMS directors and reported to the NOMS board and to other governance bodies within the Home Office.

The assessments cover all aspects of the programme, including policy, implementation, people and process issues. The registers are continually updated as the programme evolves and the risks change.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the business case in respect of the National Offender Management Service will be published. [198873]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

National Probation Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons were for the delay in completing the National Probation Service Pay and Reward Review. [198026]

Paul Goggins: The Employers' Side of the National Probation Service (NPS) National Negotiating Committee (NNC) has been meeting with the Trade Union Side about the introduction of new pay and grading arrangements. The discussions have been wide-ranging and complex. Until very recently it was expected, by both sides, that the 2004-05 annual pay settlement would be subsumed within any agreement reached. This has not proved possible. Discussions will continue.

Nationality Applications

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for the granting of British nationality are waiting to be dealt with by his Department. [194137]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

New EU Members

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens from the new members of the European Union have registered for work in Britain in each of the last five months; and how many have registered under contractors' arrangements. [193077]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

OASys

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in rolling out the OASys offender assessment tool in (a) prisons and (b) probation; how many prisons have access to the system; when roll-out will be complete; and if he will make a statement. [198911]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Offences Statistics

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were charged with offences in each month since 1 July 2003. [199150]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Open Prisons

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many open prisons there are in the United Kingdom; and how many prisoners have absconded from open prisons in the last year. [198351]

Paul Goggins: On 31 October 2004, there were 15 establishments in England and Wales designated as open prisons: Askham Grange, East Sutton Park, Ford, Grendon/Spring Hill, Hewell Grange, Hollesley Bay, Kirkham, Leyhill, Moorland Open, North Sea Camp, Standford Hill, Sudbury, Thorn Cross, Usk/Prescoed and Wealstun. In the 12 months to 31 October 2004 1,002 absconds were reported from open prisons.

Those prisoners who choose to abuse the trust placed in them, leaving the prison without authority, are considered to have absconded rather than escaped, because they have not had to breach significant security measures.

Information about prisons in Scotland and Northern Ireland is available from the Scottish Executive and Northern Ireland Office respectively.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were committed by prisoners who escaped from open prisons in the last three years. [199004]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoner escapes there have been from open prisons in England and Wales in the last three years. [199005]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are absent without authorisation from prisons in England and Wales; and how many were in open prisons when they absconded. [199006]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Paedophiles

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to protect children from paedophiles operating on the internet. [198191]

Paul Goggins: The Government is determined to ensure that children are protected from the insidious use of the internet by paedophiles.

In 2001 The Home Secretary's Task Force on Child Protection on the Internet was established, with the aim of making the UK the best and safest place in the world for children to use the internet, and to help protect children the world over from abuse fuelled by criminal misuse of new technologies. Much good work has been initiated through the Task Force to assist in working towards these objectives.

The Task Force has recently launched its fourth national awareness campaign to help keep children safe on the internet, and Government has spent over £3 million on the development of these campaigns. We have also provided guidance for young people, as well as parents and carers. In 2003 the Task Force developed and published models of good practice for providers of chat, instant messaging and web services, the first of their kind in the world. These encourage clear and accessible safety messages, advice and user-friendly ways of reporting abuse. The Task Force is currently reviewing these models. This year, following discussions with the Task Force, the UK mobile operators published a self-regulatory Code of Practice for new forms of content on mobile phone services, and furthermore a Code of Practice has also been developed by the mobile operators on passive location based services. We have also been working with industry to look at the issues which are raised by moderation in interactive services (such as chat rooms), and a draft good practice model for companies offering such moderation is nearing completion. These are just some of the examples of the work of the Task Force in seeking to protect children online.

The Government is also ensuring that legislation provides an adequate deterrent to those who might consider doing harm to children. The Sexual Offences Act introduced a new criminal offence, developed by the Task Force, to tackle the "grooming" of children by paedophiles online or offline. The Act also included the creation of a Risk of Sexual Harm Order which relates to behaviour towards a child for an illegal or harmful sexual purpose.

Law enforcement agencies in the UK are at the cutting edge of developing new techniques to detect and combat paedophile activity on the internet. We fully support effective intelligence-led policing to help forces effectively investigate paedophiles using the internet. In addition the Home Office is also considering with the Association of Chief Police Officers as part of the police reform agenda, how crimes which by their nature are not confined to geographical force areas, such as online paedophilia, are best dealt with within force structures.

The Government is also aware that child abuse on line is an international problem that can only be combated through effective international co-operation. We continue to work within international fora to encourage practical and other measures to remove images of child abuse wherever they are hosted, and to increase child safety online.

Parliamentary Questions

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason he has not yet answered the question tabled on 7 September by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, ref 187980.

with regard to the commencement of the remainder of the Adoption and Children Act 2002, with particular reference to section 112. [190618]

Mr. Blunkett: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 15 November 2004, Official Report, column 1084W.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a substantive response to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Cambridge for named day answer on 22 July, reference 184736. [195544]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the question from the hon. Member dated 28 June, ref. 181105. [192167]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the written question tabled by the hon. Member for Woking for answer on 2 November 2004, reference 195473. [199115]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the written questions with references (a) 195466, (b) 195467 and (c) 195469 to 195472, tabled by the hon. Member for Woking for answer on 1 November 2004. [199116]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the written questions tabled by the hon. Member for Woking for answer on 25 October 2004, references 193310 to 193312. [199117]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the written questions tabled by the hon. Member for Woking for answer on 21 October 2004, references (a) 193248 to 193255, (b) 193257, (c) 193262, (d) 193264 and (e) 193265. [199118]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Parole Board

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department where the video showing the Parole Board at work, produced during 2002–03, is available. [150193]

Paul Goggins: Extracts of the Parole Board video can be found on the Parole Board website, which is www.paroleboard.gov.uk. Alternatively, copies of the video are available from the Parole Board, for a fee of £5.00.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference between the number of prisoners eligible for parole and the number of those who have applied since 2000. [150194]

Paul Goggins: The table sets out the number of prisoners each year since 2000–01 who have been eligible to apply for parole and who have declined to do so. No analysis has been made of the reasons why prisoners decline to apply for parole.

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Total number of prisoners eligible for parole	6,662	6,640	7,032
Number of prisoners who decline to apply for parole	1,086	1,126	1,020
Percentage of prisoners who decline to apply for parole	16.3	17	14.5

Passport Checks

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the average time UK and other EU arriving passengers have to wait to pass through immigration compared with 12 months ago. [185394]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Police

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police Basic Command Units there were in each of the last six years; and how many BCUs he estimates there will be in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06. [155049]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the changes in the regime for local authority funding on the ability of Kent police to meet their crime reduction target; and if he will make a statement. [193911]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether an assessment has been made of the extent of racist attitudes within the police service. [194865]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the integration of police IT systems. [194920]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response the police service has made to the review of the special priority payments; and if he will make a statement. [194922]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards reaching the target of seven per cent. ethnic minority police officers by 2009; and what measures (a) are in place and (b) will be introduced to reach the target. [194924]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about pension payments for Leicestershire police authority for the year 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [197427]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is available to the police on appropriate interviewing methods for (a) prisoners who are witnesses in historical sex abuse cases and (b) vulnerable or intimidated witnesses. [197435]

Ms Blears: Guidance for police on appropriate techniques for investigating allegations of historical child abuse is included in the Senior Investigating Officer's Handbook—the Investigation of Historical institutional Child Abuse produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers. This includes prisoners. This is currently being reviewed to ensure the guidance is kept up to date and includes lessons to be learnt from more recent cases.

Guidance on interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses is contained in "Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance for Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses, including Children", issued in January 2002. This guidance became operational in May 2002 when it superseded "Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings". Victims in sexual offence proceedings are considered to be vulnerable. Other witnesses in these cases—but not the accused—may also be treated as vulnerable.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has conducted an audit of police compliance with guidelines for the interviewing of prisoners in historical sex abuse cases. [197436]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was spent on policing per head of population in each police force in England and Wales in each year since 1997. [198910]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how police numbers in Great Yarmouth have changed in each year since 1997. [186702]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) recorded crimes, (b) violent crimes, (c) burglaries and (d) vehicle thefts there were in each of the last 10 years in the Bury division of the Greater Manchester police. [197265]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the funding of Staffordshire police since 1997. [198586]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Police Complaints Commission

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total cost of (a) salaries and (b) travel expenses for those employed in the office of the Police Complaints Commission for England and Wales has been in each of the last three years. [188651]

Ms Blears: It is assumed that the question refers to the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) which was established under the Police Reform Act 2002 and commenced operations on 1 April 2004. It replaced the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) which ceased operations on 31 March 2004.

Figures on salaries for the PCA from 2000–01 to 2002–03 are in the table. Information on travel expenses for those years is not available.

PCA salary costs	£
2002–03	2,985,859
2001–02	2,589,239
2000–01	2,106,788

Police Funding

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional funding is available to police authorities from central funds to implement (a) the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 and (b) the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [195295]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of police funding in each local police authority area was provided by (a) the Government and (b) council tax in each of the last four years. [195297]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (David Davis) on 15 June 2004, Official Report, column 870W.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated cost to police authorities is in this financial year of increased British Medical Association recommended charges for police surgeons. [195299]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the police received in funding from the Government in (a) 1997 and (b) 2003. [195551]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been allocated to police funding in each year since 2001. [196814]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Police Recruits

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is made in the training schedule for new police recruits for dealing with domestic violence; whether the schedule has been changed in terms of (a) time allocation and (b) content during the past two years; and if he will make a statement. [187976]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Police Training

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the level of budget change for the Centrex Training Centre in Harrogate is for 2004–05; and what proposed changes in staffing and recruitment will result from the changes. [179208]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 June 2004]: CENTREX's overall resource budget for 2004–05 is £74.8 million. Last year the budget was £91.0 million, and CENTREX are also liable to pay VAT in this year, which they did not have to pay last year. The Home Office does not provide grant-in-aid by individual centre. I understand that, in order to realise efficiency savings and cost reductions, staff numbers in Harrogate have been reduced by approximately 18, primarily through redeployment.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of the police training centre at Bruche, Warrington. [183044]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Policing

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) level of police grant, (b) total police budget, including itemised special project funding and (c) the number of police officers and community support officers in Cheshire was in each of the last seven years. [193627]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) community support officers have been employed by Nottinghamshire Constabulary in each year since 1997 for which figures are available. [196503]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Ports

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many weapons have been seized at ports of entry to the United Kingdom in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) type of weapon and (b) location of seizure. [198995]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on providing security at ports in each year since 1997, broken down by location. [198997]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) immigration and (b) security officials have been based at each major port of entry to the United Kingdom, broken down by location, in each year since 1997. [198998]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Press Officers

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many press officers are employed in his Department; and how many were employed in each year since 1996–97. [195356]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 1 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many press officers the Department has employed in each of the past five years. [196048]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 4 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Press Releases

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many press releases have been issued by his Department in each month of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [195381]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prison Building Programme

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what grounds he will not publish the case he is making to the Treasury to close smaller prisons and build larger prisons. [153952]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prison Education Programmes

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per week on average (a) basic skills training and (b) purposeful activity are undertaken per inmate at each (i) prison and (ii) young offenders institution; and what his targets are for each establishment. [198277]

Paul Goggins: The average number of weekly hours spent by prisoners on basic skills and overall purposeful activity is shown in the table.

While prisons are not allocated targets for the number of basic skills hours per prisoner, each establishment's target for purposeful activity is shown.

A number of establishments listed have not recorded their basic skills hours. This is because the activities involved may be counted differently at local level under other categories of purposeful activity, and their inclusion would skew the representation of the table. These non-recording establishments are still delivering basic skills awards.

The way the Prison Service measures progress in prisoner education has changed from the hours of education-related purposeful activity, to achievements which reflect positive outcomes for prisoners prior to release. In recent years Key Performance Indicators have been introduced to measure the number of prisoners achieving basic skills qualifications and also the number leaving prison with an education, training or employment place arranged.

Establishment	Function	Basic and key skills up	Purposeful activity	Target

Prison Population

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports his Department has commissioned regarding (a) sentencing and (b) the management of offenders since 1997; on what dates these reports were commissioned; who carried out the reviews; at what cost; and when his Department received each report. [163985]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prison Service Advertisements

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used to allow advertisements in prison catering by HM Prison Service; what revenue was raised from advertising; and what the total cost was of the publication. [198593]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prisoners

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners there are, broken down by category of offence. [199003]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prisons

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the number of prisoners serving short sentences has increased. [148889]

Paul Goggins: Changes in the number of prisoners serving short sentences are affected by custody rates, average sentence lengths, the number of people sentenced, and seasonal factors such as the reduction in the number of court sitting days over bank holiday periods.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) the sick arrangements and (b) holiday entitlements are for staff at each privately run prison establishment. [187100]

Paul Goggins: There are currently four contractors operating privately run prison establishments.

Each contractor has different sick management arrangements and holiday entitlements for their staff in the various grades they employ.

Staff terms and conditions are a matter between each Contractor and its staff. There are no minimum requirements set down in any contract.

Detailed information can be found in the following tables.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisoners interviewed by the police in relation to historical sex abuse cases were taken to (a) an external location and (b) a specially equipped suite for their interview in each of the last five years. [197440]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the running costs for each establishment in the prison service and (b) the average number of prisoners held at that establishment in each of the last three financial years for which figures are available. [198477]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 16 November 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proportion of prisoners who entered drug rehabilitation programmes in the last 12 months for which figures are available went on to complete those programmes; and what proportion failed to complete; [198913]

(2) what proportion of prisoners who were given detoxification in the last 12 months for which figures are available entered one of the Prison Service's drug rehabilitation programmes. [198912]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fires there were in prisons between 1 January and the end of October, broken down by prison; and whether (a) prison staff and (b) prisoners were hurt in each case. [199337]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons are fitted with sprinkler equipment; and which areas of each prison are protected by the sprinkler system. [199338]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used to determine whether sprinkler equipment should be installed in prisons and detention centres. [199339]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will commission an independent review of the Prison Service fire advisers. [199344]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Fire Safety Section of the Prison Service has been restructured; and if he will make a statement. [199345]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Peterborough (Mrs. Clark) of 2 November 2004, Official Report, column 196W, on prisons, what criteria are used to determine which fire fighting equipment is available in each prison; and what assessment he makes of (a) the materials used in the construction of, (b) the location of and (c) the water pressure available in the vicinity of prisons and detention centres in making such decisions. [199346]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of (a) how much it would cost and (b) how long it would take to install sprinkler equipment in all prisons and detention centres. [199347]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Prisons (Fire Safety)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisons have been inspected under the Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations in each of the last five years; and how many were found to be fully compliant; [188586]

(2) how many prison inspections under the Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations are planned for 2004–05. [188587]

Paul Goggins: The number of inspections of prisons in England and Wales under the Fire Precautions (Workplace) (FP(WP)) Regulations in each if the last five years was as follows:

	Number of Inspections
1999–2000	17
2000–01	34
2001–02	27
2002–03	5
2003–04	5

It is only possible to say that a premise is compliant at the time of the inspection. The FP(WP) regulations place a duty on the responsible person to review the risk assessment whenever there is a change in conditions.

The prisons to be inspected in 2004–05 are:

Haslar[1]
Haverigg
Castington
Acklington
Dover[1]
Leeds
Askham Grange
Durham
Garth
Wymott
Northallerton

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193979]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Probation Hostels

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that probation hostel resources are targeted at (a) very high risk and (b) high risk offenders. [198876]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places were available in probation hostels in England and Wales on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many were occupied by high-risk offenders. [198877]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Probation Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a business case has been prepared in respect of the Probation Service Workload Management Tool. [198028]

Paul Goggins: An initial business case for the development and piloting of the Work Measurement Tool (WMT) was agreed in August 2002. Since that time the tool has been developed by a user group comprising representatives from eight probation areas, Napo, Unison and the Probation Boards Association. The Tool was then formally piloted within five areas.

A full meeting, involving the National Offender Manager, National Probation Directors, Chief Officers, the trade unions and members of the user group took place on 15 October 2004 and identified the next steps for the WMT. As a result of this meeting the Office of Government Commerce has been invited to carry out a health check of the WMT and review the business case for its future development and use. This work is currently being undertaken.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the Probation Service Pay and Reward Review was not implemented in April. [198029]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Proceeds of Crime Act

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been recovered under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002; and if he will introduce further legislation to increase the powers of the (a) police and (b) courts to seize all (i) property and (ii) money gained from illegal activities. [199243]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Racial Offences

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many racially aggravated offences have taken place in the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [198886]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Re-offending

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government funding for initiatives to reduce re-offending by individuals in custody. [196874]

Paul Goggins: The Government are committed to reducing re-offending and, since 1997 have invested significant new funding to support offenders' rehabilitation and resettlement.

Offenders in custody have achieved over 130,000 basic skills awards since April 2001. Funding for this activity is £82 million in 2004–05. Since April 2003 over £14 million per year has been invested in the Custody to Work initiative, which aims to increase the number of prisoners who have education, training or employment places and stable accommodation on release. Additional new prison funding to deal with drugs has also risen to nearly £70 million this year. A further £55 million has also been made available for throughcare and aftercare as part of the drug interventions programme to all DAT partnerships in England and Wales from April 2004.

Recorded Offences (Knives)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded offences were committed, in each of the last five years, in which knives were used. [198807]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to (a) increase the penalties for carrying knives in public and (b) bring forward proposals for revising the sentencing guidelines to magistrates and judges in such cases; and if he will make a statement. [198808]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Refugees

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of refugees residing in each parliamentary constituency. [198981]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Regional Offender Managers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the regional offender manager job descriptions will be made public. [198871]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the duties are of the regional offender managers in the National Offender Management Service for each region in England and Wales. [198899]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

(9) on what date Sussex police received the report of the investigation by the Metropolitan police into the conduct of the investigation by the Sussex police into the murder of Mr. Richard Watson; and if he will make a statement. [190621]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Secure Training Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2004, Official Report, column 1134W, on secure training centres, how many of the hospital admissions were as a result of non-accidental injuries. [199348]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197773]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to finalise the functions of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency; and what the functions will be. [190714]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Sex Abuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have been made to the Association of Chief Police Officers' guidelines on safeguards for those subject to accusations of sex abuse before they are charged. [191522]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether policing trends have been identified as problematic by the Criminal Cases Review Commission in their review of historical sex abuse cases. [195496]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been conducted on the public's perception of the level of sex abuse against children. [197447]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the findings of the pilots on suspect interviews. [197448]

Ms Blears: The pilot study on the introduction of visual recording of police interviews with suspects was carried out in five police force areas between May 2002 and September 2003.

Evaluation of the scheme was carried out by independent researchers aimed at identifying the implications of the recording technology and the benefits to the criminal justice system.

The evaluation followed the progress of over 6,000 interviews subject to visual recording of interviews with suspects and compared results with progress on 2,000 audio-only recorded interviews. The research found no discernible difference in terms of criminal justice outcomes.

The report is being assessed by independent external reviewers, potentially with a view to publication on the RDS website in spring 2005.

Sex Offenders/Offences

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sex offenders are absent without authorisation from prisons in England and Wales. [199001]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners convicted of sex offences escaped from open prisons in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [199002]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the right hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer to Question 182382, on sexual offences, if he will make a statement on the differences between the number of recorded offences and the number of successful prosecutions; and what his policy is on the prosecution of such offences. [187718]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people reported being the victim of a sex offence in each of the past five years. [196642]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been conducted on the effects sex offences have on victims; and what the findings were. [196647]

Paul Goggins: The 2001 British Crime Survey (BCS) included a self- completion module which looked at both the extent and nature of sexual victimisation.

Full results from the module are published in Home Office Research Study 276 'Domestic violence, sexual victimisation and stalking: findings from the British Crime Survey'.

Additionally, Chapter 6 of Home Office Research Study 237 'Rape and sexual assault of women: the extent and nature of the problem—findings from the British Crime Survey' provides further information from the 1998 and 2000 BCS on the impact of sexual victimisation. Copies have been placed in the House Library.

Soham Murders

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the independent inquiry he has announced into the effectiveness of police intelligence in the Soham case will (a) include an assessment of the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998 which request the deletion of records on cases which do not lead to a prosecution and (b) examine the compatibility of these provisions with the need to carry out checks for employment purposes. [145386]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 5 January 2004]: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was spent on recruitment programmes for the Special Constabulary over the last five years; and how much of this was spent on advertising. [193893]

Ms Blears: Home Office expenditure over the past five years on advertising to support recruitment activity for the Special Constabulary is as follows:

1999–2000	900,000
2000–01	0
2001–02	500,000
2003–04	2,700,000

The expenditure in 2003–04 was to support the 'Could You Volunteer?' media campaign.

In addition since 2000 the Home Office has spent £95,000 on publications and other materials to support recruitment activity for the Special Constabulary.

Expenditure by individual forces on recruitment activity is not collated centrally.

We announced in December 2003 the provision of funding of up to £70,000 for each of the 43 police forces in England and Wales under the Special Constabulary Capacity Building Scheme. The funding is to assist forces implement good practice, improving the recruitment, management and deployment of Specials.

Stop and Search

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the change in the rate of stop and searches of people of Asian origin since 2001. [196626]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Street Crime Operations

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 13 September 2004, Official Report, column 1408W, on immigration, if he will make it his policy to collect data on the ethnic background of those who are (a) stopped and (b) arrested under joint multi-agency street crime operations. [198914]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Sudbury Prison

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners at HMP Sudbury absconded during (a) 2003 and (b) 2002; and how many in each case had been convicted of (i) murder, (ii) grievous bodily harm and (iii) sexual offences. [198350]

Paul Goggins: Sudbury is an open prison, which holds around 550 prisoners. Prisoners are only sent to open prisons following a thorough risk assessment. Only those who have been assessed as presenting a low risk to the public should they abscond are placed in open prisons.

65 absconds were reported from Sudbury in 2002 and 75 in 2003.

Two of those absconding in 2002 and five of those absconding in 2003 had been convicted of murder.

None of the absconders had been convicted of grievous bodily harm, and Sudbury does not take sex offenders.

Open prisons hold prisoners who have been assessed as being of low risk to the public, and who can be trusted to spend time outside of prison, released on temporary license. The purpose of open prisons is to prepare prisoners for permanent release, and the emphasis is upon resettlement activity, which includes gaining local work placements. Open prisons give prisoners the opportunity to find permanent employment, reintegrate into the community, restore family ties, and find suitable long-term accommodation where necessary.

Terrorism

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on co-operation of EU states against terrorism. [196625]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason the number of instances of stop-and-search under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000 has risen in Hampshire between 2001–02 and 2002–03; and how many (a) arrests, (b) charges and (c) convictions have resulted from these in connection with (i) terrorist-related and (ii) non-terrorist-related suspected offences. [177982]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 June 2004]: The following table shows the statistics for section 44(1) and 44(2) stop and searches in Hampshire in 2001–02 and 2002–03.

	2001–02	2002–03
Vehicles/occupants	10	256
Pedestrians	2	38
Arrests	0	8

The statistics for charges and convictions are not cross-referenced with the searches and arrests for individual forces in this way and could be collated and verified only at disproportionate cost. Hampshire police force is best placed to supply operational analysis.

Stop and searches increased across the country following 11 September 2001 as police forces tightened security around key sites.

Terrorist Suspects (Belmarsh)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the detention of the terrorist suspects at Belmarsh prison held under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001; [184736]

(2) what plans there are to charge the remaining 12 terrorist suspects detained at Belmarsh prison under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001; and if he will make a statement. [185021]

Mr. Blunkett: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Tetra Mast Signals

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has evaluated on the possible effects of Tetra mast signals on (a) breathalysers, (b) speed cameras, (c) lawnmowers, (d) computers and (e) pacemakers. [198630]

Caroline Flint: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Transsexual People

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 14 September, Official Report, column 1560W, on transsexual people, if he will make it his policy to record the number of incidents reported to the police in which hatred of transsexual individuals is involved. [190298]

Ms Blears: There are no plans to record transphobic crimes as a distinct category within hate crime reporting.

Under-age Drinking

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers are available to (a) the police and (b) licensing authorities to persuade shops selling alcohol to refrain from selling to those whom they know or suspect intend to supply it to a young person. [194733]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

Uninsured Drivers

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were prosecuted for driving cars while uninsured in each police authority area. [198834]

Caroline Flint: Available 2002 data taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database for the offence of using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks is given in the table. Data for 2003 will be available early in 2005.

Prosecutions at magistrates courts for the offence of using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks[1], total offences by persons[2], England and Wales.

[1] An offence under the Road Traffic Act 1988 s. 143(2).

[2] Excludes companies, local authorities etc. One person may be proceeded against more than once on the same occasion.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of drivers involved in fatal traffic accidents were (a) uninsured and (b) were driving a car that did not have a valid MOT. [198845]

Caroline Flint: The information is not collected centrally by my Department.

Victim Support

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support is available for victims in sex abuse cases after they give their testimony; and what percentage of victims make use of this support. [195483]

Paul Goggins: There are a number of specialist groups providing support and other services to victims of sexual offending. We are providing £4 million over two years to support the development of such services. This will include increasing the number of Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs) and developing a range of complimentary services to address short and longer-term individual need—many of which are provided by voluntary and community sector organisations. Information about the funding can be viewed on the Government funding web site.

Victim Support is a national organisation that provides support to victims and witnesses of crime, including victims of sexual offending. This year Victim Support have been offered £30 million grant-in-aid funding from the Home Office to enable them to provide this support.

If a victim of a sexual offence gives their express consent then the police will refer their details to Victim Support. The British Crime Survey and Victim Support data indicates that in 2003–04, approximately 31 per cent. of victims of reported sexual offences were referred to Victim Support.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what treatment and support is available for child victims of physical abuse; and what percentage of known victims made use of this help, in each of the last five years. [195728]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities have a statutory duty, under Section 47 of the Children Act 1989, to make inquiries where they have reasonable cause for concern that a child may need protection. The Government's guidance, "Working Together to Safeguard Children" (1999), sets out the inter-agency processes to be followed where there are concerns about a child's welfare.

All referrals and allegations, whatever their origin, must be taken seriously. The main objectives of such inquiries are to establish the facts about the circumstances giving rise to the concern; decide if there are grounds for concern; identify sources and level of risk and decide protective or other action in relation to the child and any others.

If, following these inquiries, the child is considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm, a child protection conference should be convened to decide what future action is needed to safeguard the child and promote his or her welfare, how that action will be taken forward, and with what intended outcomes. If a child is considered to be at continuing risk of significant harm and all agencies decide that the child requires a child protection plan, the child's name should be placed on the child protection register, a key worker should be appointed and a child protection plan drawn up.

Children should be registered under one or more of the categories of physical, emotional, or sexual abuse or neglect, according to a decision by the chair of the child protection conference. Where a child's name is placed on the child protection register, social services have lead responsibility in providing support and services, together with other agencies, in accordance with the child protection plan. Provision could include services from social services, health services, education and voluntary agencies according to the assessed needs of the child and family.

The national health service (NHS) provides physical treatments for physical injuries sustained as a result of abuse. The NHS within child and adult mental health services (CAMHS) also provides treatment for children who suffer mental health problems and disorders as a result of abuse.

Information relating to the number of known child victims of physical abuse over each of the last five years is not collected centrally. We do, however, collect information relating to the number of children named on the child protection register. Statistics for the last three years are as follows:

Children and young people on child protection registers in England who had been classified under the "physical abuse" category.

At 31 March 2002—4,200 children and young people listed.

(This compared with an overall total of 25,700 children and young people on child protection registers at that time.)

At 31 March 2003—4,300 children and young people.

(This compares with an overall total of 26,600 children and young people on child protection registers.)

At 31 March 2004—4,100 children and young people.

(This compares with an overall total of 26,300 children and young people on child protection registers.)

We are unable to provide statistics from child protection registers in England relating specifically to physical abuse for the last five years as, prior to 2002, local authorities were asked for data relating to physical abuse which was categorised as "neglect, physical injury and sexual abuse", "neglect and physical injury", "physical injury and sexual abuse" and "physical injury alone".

Violent Crime

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures (a) are in place and (b) he plans to introduce to reduce the level of violent crime. [196699]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to my hon. Friend in the time available before Prorogation.

West London CCP Programme

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the costs are of each project funded by the West London Community Cohesion Pathfinder programme in the last 18 months; [167995]

(2) what budget has been allocated to the West London Community Cohesion Pathfinder programme in each year since it was initiated; and how much in each year has been (a) spent and (b) allocated. [167996]

Fiona Mactaggart: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Wildlife Crime

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and (b) others concerning wildlife crime; and if he will make a statement. [197713]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in each police authority area in England and Wales are assigned to tackling wildlife crime. [197714]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on links between wildlife crime and serious and organised crime; and if he will make a statement. [197722]

Ms Blears: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Work Permits

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of work permits issued in 2003 were long-term permits. [194123]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the report by Stephen Shaw on the fire at Yarl's Wood in February 2002 to be published; and if he will make a statement. [186150]

Mr. Browne: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the report by the prisons and probation ombudsman on the incident at Yarl's Wood detention centre in February 2003; and if he will make a statement. [195706]

Mr. Browne: The report by the prisons and probation ombudsman, Stephen Shaw, of the investigation into the serious disturbance at Yarl's Wood immigration removal centre was published on 16 November 2004.

My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary announced this, by way of a written ministerial statement to the house.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to implement the report by the Prisons and Probation Ombudsman into the disturbance and fire at the Yarl's Wood Removal Centre. [199340]

Paul Goggins: It has not proved possible to respond to the hon. Member in the time available before Prorogation.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether schools which (a) have already gained specialist status and (b) are involved in private finance initiative projects may apply for academy status. [199164]

Mr. Miliband: The Academies Programme is not governed by an application process, nor does it involve a simple change of status for existing schools. Academies are a completely different type of institution—independent charitable companies—which replace poorly performing schools in disadvantaged areas. This process involves the statutory closure of any predecessor schools and the creation of a completely new school, with a new ethos, governance and organisational structure and, in most cases, new buildings.

It is, therefore, possible for any school which meets these criteria to be closed and for an academy to open in its place. However, there are some technical issues around the closure of PFI schools, particularly those which are part of a larger PFI package, which may make their replacement by an academy impractical.

Adoption and Children Act

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he intends to bring in the commencement of those parts of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 not yet commenced, with particular reference to section 112. [199092]

Margaret Hodge: I refer my right hon. Friend to the response given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Office on 15 November 2004, Official Report, column 1086W.

Agency Temporary Staff

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many agency temporary staff have been working for the Department in each of the last five years, excluding those working for agencies for which no data is kept centrally. [196054]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My Department was established in June 2001. Statistics for temporary agency staff are recorded by days worked and the information, detailed in the following table, is available from November 2001 to March 2002, the financial years 2002–03, 2003–04 and April to September 2004.

Financial year	Days worked
2001–02	11,448
2002–03	30,353
2003–04	23,458
April to September 2004	8,565

CAFCASS

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) cancelled appointments and (b) non-attendances there were at each Children and Family Court Advisory and Support

Service contact centre in the last year for which figures are available; and what percentage of appointments made this represents in each case. [194750]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS does not consistently collect statistics in relation to non-attendance or cancelled appointments at Child Contact Centres. The National Association of Child Contact Centres takes responsibility for the collection of national statistics, so as to develop a national perspective. It is not a mandatory requirement at the present time that NACCC member contact centres keep such statistics.

CAFCASS has a broadly purchaser-provider relationship with 180 contact centres through a variety of partnership agreements. In addition, CAFCASS is aware of more than 100 contact centres, which though not directly funded by CAFCASS, also provide services to families. This may include providing services to families in cases where CAFCASS has prepared reports under section 7 of the Children Act 1989. CAFCASS is significantly involved in the running of nine contact centres through the direct employment of staff, and in some cases, the provision of premises.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the waiting times are for the completion of private law cases in each of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service regions. [194214]

Margaret Hodge: There is an expectation that private law reports are completed within 10 to 12 weeks of the request date to CAFCASS. Teams that are unable to meet this requirement generally make arrangements with their courts to extend the timetable for preparing reports.

At regional level and for Wales the times taken to complete reports, for the period 1 April to 30 June 2004, were as follows:

East Midlands—four teams met the 10 to 12 week standard and one team met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable;

Eastern—three teams met the 10 to 12 week standard and two teams met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable;

Greater London—four teams met the 10 to 12 week standard, one team met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable, one team met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable, one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

North East—one team met the 10 to 12 week standard, two teams met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable and one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

North West—two teams met the 10 to 12 week standard, four teams met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable, four teams met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable and one team met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

South East—five teams met the 10 to 12 week standard, one team met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable and six teams met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable;

South West—two teams met the 10 to 12 week standard, three teams met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable, one team met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable, two teams met the extended over 17 weeks timetable;

West Midlands—three teams met the 10 to 12 week standard, two teams met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable and three teams met the extended 15 to 16 weeks timetable;

Yorkshire and Humberside—10 teams met the 10 to 12 week standard and two teams met the extended 13 to 14 weeks timetable;

Wales—nine teams met the 10 to 12 week standard.

On a case by case basis timescales may be extended by the courts where the needs of the case require it. This would apply across all regions and is not related to resource issues.

CAFCASS has been given an additional £12 million this year to improve performance. A new Board was appointed in April 2004 and a new Chief Executive was appointed on 1 September. They are committed to driving forward improvements in the service.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, what proportion of families involved in separation and divorce cases were referred to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [194218]

Margaret Hodge [pursuant to her reply, 1 November 2004, Official Report, c. 29W]: I wish to clarify that the number of private law referrals to the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) for 2001–02 was not collected or reported until October 2001. The number of referrals shown in my earlier reply (17352) is the number of referrals reported from 1 October 2001 to 31 March 2002.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many guardians are employed by the Children and Family Court Advisory Support Service; and what their principal responsibilities are. [197074]

Margaret Hodge: At 1 November 2004, CAFCASS employed 1,292 (full-time and part-time) guardians. In addition, there were 424 self-employed guardians contracted to CAFCASS during August 2004 (the latest month for which figures are available).

Under the Children Act 1989, CAFCASS provides a children's guardian in specified public law proceedings. These include applications for care or supervision orders and applications for contact or residence orders (in public law cases). Children's guardians are also appointed in those adoption and freeing (for adoption) cases where the courts may have to dispense with parental consent.

Guardians are appointed by family courts in order to represent the interests of children and inform the court of the child's wishes and feelings. They are qualified and experienced in social work, and they are independent of social services, parents and other parties involved in the case.

In particular, guardians will:

appoint a solicitor for the child;

investigate and inform the court about the circumstances of the application; and prepare reports for the court. These reports are informed by time spent with the children, relatives, teachers, social workers and health visitors. Guardians attend meetings on behalf of the child; check records and read reports and statements and they may recommend that other professionals be asked to assist (such as paediatricians or psychologists). The reports must provide advice to the court about the child's wishes and feelings.

Guardians also critically appraise a child's care plan, drawn up by the local authority.

Careers Guidance

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the End to End Review of Careers Education and Guidance. [199215]

Margaret Hodge: The findings of the Careers Education and Guidance (CEG) End to End Review are being used to inform the development of the Youth Green Paper.

Commencement of Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what pieces of legislation passed in the last 30 years that the Department is responsible for remain to be brought into force, broken down by year of enactment. [195622]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Providing the information for the period requested would incur disproportionate costs. The following table, therefore, sets out a broad overview of primary legislation from 1997 for which the Department for Education and Skills is responsible and parts of which remain to be brought into force. The table does not include provisions which have never been in force and are now repealed or spent.

Commercial Sponsorship

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the (a) conferences, (b) publications, (c) initiatives, (d) projects and (e) receptions organised by his Department which have received funding from outside commercial bodies since May 1997, broken down by (i) funding body and (ii) amount paid. [196598]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Details of individual amounts of sponsorship valued at more than £5,000 have been published in my Department's Annual Reports since 2002. Copies of the Annual Reports are available in the Library of the House.

Details of individual amounts of sponsorship were not held centrally prior to 2001–02 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Details of sponsorship in the current financial year to date, valued at more than £5,000 in cash or kind, are given in the following table.

Correspondence

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects to reply to correspondence from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Withington, dated 21 June, 29 July and 26 August, on behalf of a constituent, Mrs. Rebecca Clark, of Chorlton, Manchester. [199126]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department has records of correspondence from the right hon. Member on behalf of his constituent Mrs. Rebecca Clark of Chorlton, Manchester, dated 21 June and 9 July. My right hon. Friend Margaret Hodge replied to both letters on 1 August.

Departmental Advertising Costs

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost of (a) creative work, (b) media spend and (c) administration for his Department's advertising activity has been in each financial year since 1997–98, broken down by contractor. [197301]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Expenditure for creative and media activities by DfES is identified for the previous two years. Information prior to 2002–03 can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Expenditure information provided is net of VAT:

Departmental Estate

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the properties occupied by (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2004, showing (A) for each and (B) in aggregate the area; and what in aggregate the annual rental value was. [196368]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The list of properties occupied by my Department and its agencies in 1997 and 2004 including area and aggregate annual rental value is as follows:

	2004		1997
Properties	Area in square feet	Rental value (£)	Area in square feet	Rental value (£)
Caxton House (leasehold)	19,504	8,174,500	19,504	6,510,000

Vincent House (leasehold)	—	—	1,836	104,000
Wales Bar (freehold)	1,817	33,000	1,817	50,500

Notes:

1. Where information is not provided, this indicates that the Department did not occupy/own the property.
2. The rental value for freehold properties has been assessed using the rateable values as set by the Valuation Office. To obtain an accurate figure would result in disproportionate costs.

The Department for Education and Skills did have an agency in 1997, Employment Service, who had approximately 1,300 properties. Data is not held centrally and this would require a departmental trawl at disproportionate costs.

Disabled Pupils

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking to (a) monitor and (b) improve provision of facilities for sports and physical recreation for pupils with disabilities who attend mainstream schools. [197765]

Margaret Hodge: All schools have a duty under Part 4 of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA)1995 prepare an accessibility plan for increasing over time the accessibility of schools to disabled pupils. The plan is expected to cover increasing access to the curriculum (including PE and sport) and the physical environment of the school, so that disabled pupils can take advantage of education and associated services. Ofsted monitors how schools are carrying out the planning duties as part of their ongoing inspections of schools. In the first planning period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2006, some £300 million is being made available to local education authorities in England through the Schools Access Initiative for projects to improve the accessibility of mainstream schools to disabled pupils.

In 2003, DfES published a training CD-ROM "Success For All". This features a series of filmed case studies showing how teachers in mainstream and special schools include pupils with a range of disabilities in PE and sport. The disc offers lesson plans and points users to relevant resources. Our PE, School Sport and Club Links Strategy aims to increase the numbers of 5 to 16-year-olds who spend a minimum of two hours each week on high quality PE and school sport and makes clear that all children, including disabled children should be able to participate.

Early Years Education

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pre-school places for (a) under 3-year-olds, (b) 3-year-olds and (c) 4-year-olds, were available in Bury, North in each of the last seven years. [198327]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

Figures on the number of free early education places taken up by 3 and 4-year-olds in Bury local education authority area are shown in the table.

Number of free early education places[1, 2] taken up by 3 and 4-year-old children in maintained nursery and primary schools and private, voluntary and independent providers, Bury local education authority area, 1998 to 2004

Position in January each year	3-year-olds	4-year-olds

2000	1,000	2,100
2001	1,100	2,200
2002	1,300	2,100
2003	1,500	2,300
2004	1,500	2,200

[1] Part-time equivalent number of free early education places taken up by 3 and 4-year-old children.

[2] A free early education place comprises five two and a half hour sessions of early years education per week, for 33 weeks of the year, usually three terms of 11 weeks.

The latest figures on provision for 3 and 4-year-olds in England were published in a Statistical First Release "Provision for children under five years of age in England-January 2004" which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

From April 2004, six months ahead of our original target, all 3-year-olds in England whose parents want one, are eligible for a free, part-time early education place.

Education (Staffordshire)

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the surplus or deficit was of each school in Newcastle-under-Lyme at the end of the financial year 2003–04. [198667]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is submitted to the Department according to local education authority areas, rather than districts within an LEA. Newcastle-under-Lyme forms part of Staffordshire LEA. Staffordshire LEA has yet to submit its full section 52 statement and a complete Consistent Financial Reporting return for 2003–04. I will write to my hon. Friend once this information has been received and validated.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes there have been in (a) GCSE and (b) A level results achieved by students in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198668]

Mr. Miliband: The results shown in the following tables are for schools and colleges in the parliamentary constituency of Newcastle-under-Lyme.

(a) GCSE/GNVQ achievement of 15-year-old pupils 1997 to 2003

	Percentage of 15-year-olds achieving
	5+A-C at GCSE/GNVQ*	1+A-G at GCSE/GNVQ*

2002	46.7	94.7
2001	45.2	95.1
2000	43.0	94.4
1999	41.1	94.7
1998	37.5	92.6
1997	38.1	91.6

(b) A level and vocational equivalent achievement 1997 to 2003

	Average point score per
	A level candidate	examination entry
2003	168.2	66.7
2002	207.5	68.9
2001	12.4	4.3
2000	12.8	4.3
1999	12.0	4.1
1998	11.7	3.9
1997	11.3	4.1

A new point scoring tariff was adopted by UCAS in 2002. The School and College Achievement and Attainment Tables changed to reflect this. The change is illustrated below.

Grade at A level	Points 1997 to 2001	Points 2002 to 2003
A	10	120
B	8	100
C	6	80
D	4	60
E	2	40

Note:
AS levels count as half an A level and VCE Double Awards count as 2 A levels.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent on improving (a) science and (b) sports facilities in schools in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198673]

Mr. Miliband: This information is not held centrally.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been invested in improving school buildings in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Newcastle-under-Lyme in each year since 1997. [198674]

Mr. Miliband: Information on capital funding invested in improving school buildings broken down by primary and secondary schools is not held centrally. Decisions on how resources should be invested in schools are taken locally in accordance with locally prepared asset management plans. The Department does not hold details of capital allocation by constituency. The following table shows capital resources allocated to schools in Staffordshire local education authority and its schools, since 1997.

Staffordshire LEA

	£000
1997–98	7,421
1998–99	25,935
1999–2000	15,549
2000–01	31,145
2001–02	22,996
2002–03	26,601
2003–04	35,529
2004–05	41,071

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures have been taken to improve basic literacy and numeracy for (a) children and (b) adults in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198675]

Mr. Miliband: Since 1997 raising attainment in literacy and numeracy, for both children and adults, has been a key priority.

The Primary National and Key Stage 3 Strategies are the chief means by which we support schools to improve standards of teaching and learning in literacy and numeracy. The National Strategies work with and through LEAs to provide high quality lesson planning and continuing professional development materials, training for headteachers, teachers, and support staff, and hands-on support through a network of consultants. We also offer tailored support to individual LEAs. Staffordshire LEA is currently participating in programmes to improve the quality of leadership and to address low attainment in its schools.

National curriculum test results tell us that this focus is paying dividends. In Newcastle-under-Lyme, the percentage of 11-year-olds achieving the expected level (level 4) in maths has risen from 62 per cent. in 1997 to 75 per cent. in 2003, and from 66 per cent. to 76 per cent. in English. At KS3 the percentage of pupils achieving the expected level for their age (level 5) between 1997 and 2003 has increased from 57 per cent. to 69 per cent. in maths and from 61 per cent. to 71 per cent. in English. 2004 constituency level data will be published in the new year.

We are similarly working hard to improve levels of literacy and numeracy for adults. Since the launch of the Skills for Life Strategy in 2001, Staffordshire Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has had responsibility for addressing the literacy and numeracy skills of adults in Newcastle-under-Lyme. According to information provided by the LSC, an estimated 10,800 young people and adults participated in the Staffordshire Local LSC Skills for Life programmes in the last year (2003–04). Of these learners, an estimated 4,200 will achieve at least one qualification counting towards the Skills for Life target.

Newcastle-under-Lyme College has been active in developing provision in the area, for example by supporting an E Learning bus, which provides state of the art ICT equipment to support adult learners. It offers users the chance to gain nationally recognised qualifications in literacy and numeracy using on-line facilities. Newcastle-under-Lyme is also one of the Region's Testbed Learning Communities and support to improve levels of literacy, numeracy and language skills will be a key strand of this development.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps have been taken to reduce class sizes in (a) infant and (b) junior schools in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198676]

Mr. Miliband: The infant class size limit was introduced in the School Standards and Framework Act 1998. This required all 5, 6 and 7 years from the 2001/02 school year to be taught in classes of no more than 30 with one qualified teacher. The Government have fully funded the implementation of the infant class size limit by making £775 million available between 1998–99 and 2002–03. This is enough for 6,000 new teachers and 2,000 additional classrooms. Between 1997 and 2004, the pupil teacher ratio in primary schools in Newcastle-under-Lyme fell from 26.3 to 25 in Key Stage 1 and from 28.9 to 26.9 in Key Stage 2.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the average pay of teachers has changed in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198679]

Mr. Miliband: Information on the average pay of teachers is not available at constituency level.

The average salary of full-time regular qualified teachers in the maintained sector schools in Staffordshire local education authority in March 1997 was £24,200. By March 2003 the latest date for which information is available, this had risen to £29,900 (provisional).

The figures include all allowances and cover all grades.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many families have benefited from Sure Start in Newcastle-under-Lyme; [198682]

(2) how much has been invested in Sure Start in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198684]

Margaret Hodge: Sure Start provision in Newcastle-under-Lyme consists of a children's centre, based on a former Sure Start local programme and a neighbourhood nursery. The centre was designated a children's centre in October 2004 and offers services to 580 families.

The total capital funding available for the children's centre is £2,269,000. Funding comes from a number of sources, including the Sure Start local programme and neighbourhood nursery funding, Staffordshire local education authority and the European Regional Development Fund. The Sure Start capital investment totals £830,000. The Sure Start local programme revenue allocation for 2004–05 is £727,750.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many free nursery or pre-reception class places have been created for (a) five, (b) four and (c) three-year-olds in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; [198683]

(2) how many free part-time nursery places have been created in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; and at which locations. [198685]

Margaret Hodge: All 4-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All 3-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by 3 and 4-year-olds in Newcastle-under-Lyme parliamentary constituency and Staffordshire local education authority area is shown in the tables. Information for private and voluntary providers is available for Staffordshire but not for Newcastle-under-Lyme.

Annual Schools Census.

The latest figures on early education places for 3 and 4-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 39/2004, "Provision for Children Under Five Years of Age in England—January 2004 (final)", which is available on the Department's website: www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what changes there have been to the level of funding for further education in (a) North Staffordshire and (b) Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; [198720]

(2) how much expenditure is planned for investment in the new further education college in Newcastle-under-Lyme; [198721]

(3) what changes have taken place to the funding of Staffordshire Learning and Skills Council since its establishment. [198728]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-16 learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). The LSC decides on allocations at individual college and local LSC level. Information about these allocations is not collected by the Department. This is a matter for the LSC. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, will write to the hon. Gentleman with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes there have been to the number of (a) 16 to 18-year-olds and (b) adults taking vocational qualifications in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198722]

Mr. Miliband: Information is only available on those achieving, rather than taking, national vocational qualifications (NVQs) and vocationally related qualifications (VRQs); and at local education authority (LEA) level. Therefore the following figures apply to Staffordshire LEA.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what estimate he has made of the number of students who have received the education maintenance allowance in Stoke-on-Trent; [198723]

(2) what estimate he has made of the effect of the education maintenance allowance upon post-16 staying-on rates in Stoke-on-Trent. [198724]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since the start of this academic year and up to the end of October, 1,050 16-year-olds entering year 12 had received at least one EMA payment in the Stoke-on-Trent LEA area.

Based on extensive piloting, the projection is that EMA will increase participation in education at Y12 by 3.8 percentage points, and by 4.1 percentage points among Y13s. This will be the biggest impact of any single initiative on participation levels since the introduction of GCSEs in 1987. However, the impact will vary depending on the area, and pilot areas such as Stoke-on-Trent will have experienced much of this impact already. We estimate that around 1,400 16-year-olds in full time education in Stoke-on-Trent are eligible on income grounds for EMA. This estimate is based on a range of assumptions around participation and income profiles and is therefore subject to some uncertainty.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of students who have benefited from the introduction of the Newcastle Achievement Scheme in further education in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198725]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of changes to staying-on rates following the introduction of the Newcastle Achievement Scheme in further education in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [198726]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps have been taken to improve training and skills in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; and if he will list the relevant initiatives. [198727]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Skills Strategy White Paper (published July 2003) introduced a range of policies to meet shortfalls in skills—especially at Level 2, and in some sector-specific areas at Level 3. These include mechanisms to identify and address sectoral and regional skill priorities, to engage employers better in training and enable providers to be more responsive to employers.

The strategy set out our intention to introduce a new entitlement for any adult in the labour force to have access to free tuition for their first full Level 2 qualification. We started trialling the entitlement in the North East and South East regions in September 2004, and will start national roll-out from next year.

In September 2003, we started piloting the new Adult Learning Grant (ALG), offering up to £30 per week to adults on low incomes studying full time for a first full Level 2 qualification, and for first Level 3 qualifications for those under 30. We have now extended the ALG trials from 10 pilot regions into the SE and NE regions as part of linked trials of key initiatives announced in the Skills Strategy

18 Employer Training Pilots (ETPs) are testing new financial support measures to improve access to training and enable employees to attain basic and Level 2 skills. As at the end of October 2004, 13,474 employers and 92,987 learners had registered for ETP.

Trade unions and their Union Learning Representatives (ULRs) are making a major contribution to the Skills Strategy. After seven years of the Union Learning Fund, a further 46 new projects in 27 unions have been approved to start from April this year. These projects are in both small and large unions and in both public and private sectors. They will provide new learning opportunities for thousands of workers. In the last year alone, the fund helped to encourage over 25,000 workers back into learning.

For the economically inactive, we will improve the support to the low-skilled through the New Deal for Skills (NDfS) by creating a new intensive skills guidance service, co-located with Jobcentre Plus where possible, and improving mechanisms of financial support for those for whom training provides a route back to work.

Skills for Life, the national strategy for improving adult literacy, language and numeracy skills, was launched in March 2001. It aims to help create a society where adults have the basic skills they need to find and keep work and participate fully in society, thereby increasing the economic performance and social cohesion of the country. So far we estimate that 550,000 adults achieved a qualification in literacy, language or numeracy and current projections show that we are on track to meet the target of 750,000 achievements by July 2004. In terms of participation, it is estimated that 2.3 million learners will have taken up 4.7 million learning opportunities between April 2001 and July 2004. Staffordshire has a Basic Skills Strategy Group with representation from all key partners including colleges, work-base learning providers, Job Centre Plus, probation, voluntary and community sector and the LSC. The partnership is working to improve levels of literacy, numeracy and language across the area.

The growing network of UK-wide, employer-led Sector Skills Councils (SSCs) has a key part to play in taking forward these national skills strategies. Each SSC has a key goal of increasing opportunities to boost the skills and productivity of everyone in the sector's work force, including taking action on equal opportunities.

We recognise that there are variations in the skills base of different regions. This is being addressed by Regional Skills Partnerships which are being established in each region, co-ordinated by Regional Development Agencies and involving LSC, Jobcentre Plus, Small Business Service and Skills for Business Network. They are bringing together skills and work force development with support for innovation and business development and labour market services in an integrated approach to deliver Regional Economic Strategies. The Regional Skills Partnership in the West Midlands will be launched in January 2005.

On 10 May the Government announced their intention to put in place a family of apprenticeship programmes to suit a variety of needs from aged 14 upwards. These will include: Junior Apprenticeships for 14 to 16-year-olds, a pre-apprenticeship route within the existing Entry to Employment programme, Apprenticeships at NVQ Level 2, Advanced Apprenticeships at NVQ Level 3 and a strengthened progression route into higher education, including vocational Foundation Degrees. In addition we are developing Apprenticeships for Adults in those sectors with the greatest need.

Since April 2001 the Learning and Skills Council has been responsible for the planning and funding of all post-16 learning outside Higher Education. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, will write to my hon. Friend with information about learning and skills in Newcastle-under-Lyme and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes have taken place to (a) the funding of and (b) the numbers of students attending (i) Keele University and (ii) Staffordshire University since 1997. [198729]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows the changes in funding and associated student numbers for Keele and Staffordshire Universities. The figures do not include Teacher Training Agency (TTA) or national health service (NHS) funded provision. Overseas students have also been excluded.

Education Funding (Bury)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total allocation of capital expenditure to (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Bury Metropolitan borough council area was in each of the last seven years. [198326]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The following table shows capital resources allocated to Bury local education authority and its schools, since 1997. Information on the split between primary and secondary schools is not held centrally. Decisions on how resources should be invested in schools are taken locally in accordance with the locally prepared asset management plans.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in the Selby constituency are receiving the education maintenance allowance. [198783]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Since the start of the academic year, as of 31 October, 1,579 young people in the North Yorkshire area had received payments under the national EMA scheme. The number is increasing at a steady rate and we expect it to continue to do so. The EMA scheme has proved its effectiveness in the pilots we have run, and it will allow young people from lower income households to succeed in a wide variety of vocational and academic courses.

We are unable to provide numbers down to constituency level.

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list institutions with students aged 16 to 18 years who are in receipt of an education maintenance allowance, broken down by number of students. [197505]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are currently around 2,875 schools and colleges across England with students enrolled on the EMA system (EMASYS). Over 200,000 young people have received EMA payments so far.

The following information lists the schools and colleges in the Black Country and the number of students enrolled on EMASYS in each up to 31 October. A copy of the full list, including an electronic version, will be placed in the Library.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many 16-year-olds in full-time education in Tower Hamlets are eligible for an education maintenance allowance; [198866]

(2) how many and what percentage of young people starting post-16 education in Tower Hamlets in 2004 have been awarded education maintenance allowance; and what percentage of those have received a (a) £30, (b) £20 and (c) £10 award. [198867]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We estimate that around 1,400 16-year-olds entering Year 12 in Tower Hamlets are eligible for EMA on income grounds.

Since the start of the academic year, as of 31 October, 1,416 young people in the Tower Hamlets LEA area had received payments under the national EMA scheme. The number is increasing at a steady rate and we expect it to continue to do so. We are unable to breakdown the figures at LEA level to show specifically how many young people are receiving £10, £20 and £30 payments.

Education/Training (West Derbyshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of (a) GCSE and (b) sixth form students have continued to higher education in (i) West Derbyshire, (ii) the East Midlands of England and (iii) England in each year since 1990. [198362]

Dr. Howells: The available information on participation rates by region shows the proportion of 18-year-olds entering full-time undergraduate courses in the UK via the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS), and is given in the table. Comparable figures for the years prior to 1994 are not available centrally.

It should be noted that the proportions in the table are based only on the number of 18-year-olds entering full-time HE. This is a different definition to the Department's main measures of HE participation: the Age Participation Index (API), which measures the proportion of UK domiciled students who enter full-time HE by the age of 20, and the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR) which measures the proportion of 17–30 year old English domiciled first time entrants to full or part-time HE. Neither the API nor the HEIPR are calculated for each LEA, because of the lack of detailed data at local authority level.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people in (a) West Derbyshire and (b) the East Midlands have entered (i) an advanced modern apprenticeship and (ii) a foundation modern apprenticeship since the schemes' inception. [198363]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not available for West Derbyshire as requested by the hon. Gentleman. However, information is available for old Training and Enterprise Council (TEC) areas and new Learning and Skills Council (LSC) areas. The following table shows the number of starts on Apprenticeships in Derbyshire Learning and Skills Council (LSC) between the 26 March 2001 and the end of July 2004, as well as the number of starts from the inception of the programmes until 25 March 2001 in the three TEC areas that became part of Derbyshire LSC area. The table also shows the number of starts in the East Midlands region in these periods.

Entry to Employment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received on funding reduction in Entry to Employment courses and training opportunities. [197938]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have received correspondence from MPs, training providers, and members of the public about the reduction in funding to the E2E programme. However, there is no reduction in the funding allocated by the LSC for 2004/05: £238 million, the same level as last year.

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total budget was for the Entry to Employment programme for the year 2003–04; and what funding will be available for the programme for the year 2004–05. [196478]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the council's chief executive, will write to my hon. Friend with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Examination Results

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average A-level points score was for (a) school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) general further education colleges in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [197267]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 4 November 2004, Official Report, column 368W.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) individual students were awarded level three qualifications and (b) level three qualifications were awarded in English further education colleges in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [197824]

Mr. Miliband: Figures are only available on a broadly consistent basis from 1994/95 onwards. The following tables show particular qualification types and combinations which equate to a full level 3 qualification. The information in the tables comes from a variety of data systems over time and it is not possible to match data across these sources for individual students. Therefore, it is possible that some individual students appear in more than one column.

Notes:

1. The number of GNVQs are not fully consistent over time, figures from 2000/01 onwards are taken from the Secondary School and College Performance Tables Database, figures for earlier years are taken from NISVQ.

2. The figures for two or more GCE A Levels includes those gaining a combination of one GCE A Level and 2+ GCE AS Levels in the same year. Those gaining four AS Levels within the year are excluded and shown separately given they will be double counted when they complete their full A Level course. For this reason, it is not appropriate to add across the rows to form a total figure.

3. The Full VRQ Level 3 figure is for Vocationally Related Qualifications accredited by QCA as having 80 to 100 per cent. width.

4. Advanced GNVQ/VCE includes Advanced GNVQs, VCE 12 Unit, 2 VCE 6 Unit qualifications or equivalent combinations of VCE 6 unit and 3 unit qualifications.

Foster Carers

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures he plans to take to address the shortage of foster carers. [195086]

Margaret Hodge: In February this year we produced a Fostering Publicity Pack designed to help local authorities to run targeted local campaigns to recruit new foster carers for looked after children. We have also awarded a 3-year grant of £180,000 to the Fostering Network to support Foster Care Fortnight, which has a particular focus on recruitment.

In addition, the Choice Protects grant, which provides funding of £113 million over three years, has a specific emphasis on fostering services. £1.5 million of the funding available through the grant in the current financial year is being used to develop a number of new initiatives to improve the status, support and training of foster carers. These include the development of a national award ceremony, a national advice line, measures to improve the support given to foster carers who are subject to allegations and new training resources for foster carers.

Most recently, the Government have tabled amendments to the Children Bill which would enable regulations to be made prescribing a national minimum allowance to foster carers in England and Wales.

Free School Meals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to assess alternatives to eligibility to free school meals as the trigger point to other benefits, with particular reference to free transport. [198548]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We are investigating with the Department for Work and Pensions the increase in family income that results from a move from unemployment into work on the minimum wage and above. In doing so we must consider what can be done for the many low income working and non-working families who are not eligible for school transport, as many are paying commercial bus fares for their children to travel to school. Our aim is to develop a system that helps as many low income families as possible to have access to affordable transport on the home to school journey, where walking or cycling is impractical.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to improve take-up of free school meals, with specific reference to rural areas; and what measures he plans to take to reduce the stigma attached to take-up of free school meals. [198549]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We are currently in discussion with the Inland Revenue and the Department of Work and Pensions about ways in which the system for checking free school meal entitlement might be streamlined. Key to these discussions is the need to agree a system that will be easy for parents to access and to remove the need for specific details of Government support payments to be shown to school or local authority staff in order to have their child's free school meal eligibility assessed.

A DfES sponsored research report, commissioned by the Child Poverty Action Group, entitled "Improving the Take-up of Free School Meals" was published in May 2001. The findings of the research suggested that a major factor in poor take-up was parents' perception that school meals were of poor quality. We are revising secondary school lunch standards to reduce sugar, salt and fat content and are considering if primary school meals require similar changes. Changes when implemented will improve quality and, therefore, will encourage greater take up of free as well as paid for school lunches in both rural and urban areas.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in (a) Leicester South and (b) each unitary authority in England claim free school meals; and what estimate he has made of those eligible to claim free school meals in each case. [198657]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is shown in the table.

Pupils are recorded as being eligible for free school meals if a claim has been made by them or on their behalf by parents and either the relevant authority has confirmed their eligibility or the school or LEA have seen the necessary documentation. Eligibility requires the parent (or pupil) to be in receipt of either income support, or income-based jobseekers allowance, or support under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, or child tax credit but not working tax credit and have an annual income (as assessed by the Inland Revenue) that which for when the above information was collected in the tax year 2003/04, would have been £13,280.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children living in the London borough of Wandsworth were entitled to free school meals during the last 12 months. [198883]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the likely costs to his Department in the first quarter of 2005 of compliance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if he will make a statement. [199084]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Based on the anticipated additional volume of requests for information, it is estimated that the cost of compliance with the Freedom of Information Act during the period January to March 2005 will cost around £606,000, an average of £152 per request.

Further Education

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of funding per pupil in further education was in (a) Leicester South, (b) the Unitary Authority of Leicester City and (c) England in each year since 1997. [198666]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-16 learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). The LSC decides on allocations at individual college and local LSC level. Information about these allocations is not collected by the Department. This is a matter for the LSC. Mark Haysom the Learning and Skills Council's Chief Executive will write to the hon. Member with details of further education spend per pupil in (a) Leicester South, (b) the Unitary Authority of Leicester City. A copy of his letter will be placed in the House Library.

The following table shows funding per full-time equivalent student in further education in England from 1997–98 to 2004–05. These are cash figures that show total funding for the further education (FE) sector. The figures include monies provided for participation and certain funding for earmarked purposes, including capital, the Standards Fund and other special grants to colleges. These figures are consistent with those published in the 'Departmental Annual Report 2004'.

GCSE Results

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) males and (b) females achieved five A*-C grades at GCSE in 2004; and how many (i) males and (ii) females achieved 5 A*-C grades at GCSE in the (A) 10 per cent. most deprived wards and (B) 10 per cent. least deprived wards in 2004. [196374]

Mr. Miliband: The information provided is the latest available and is shown in the following tables. The information has been provided on two bases—one showing the information based on the location of schools, the other based on the residency of the pupil.

(i) Numbers of males and females achieving 5 or more A–C Grades at GCSE and equivalents: 2004 (provisional)*

10 per cent. least deprived areas[1]	63.1	26,296	57.6	26,456	68.8

(ii) Numbers of males and females achieving 5 or more A–C Grades at GCSE and equivalents: 2003 (final)*

	All pupils	Males		Females
	Percentage	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
Based on pupil residency:
All	52.9	152,026	48.0	177,278	58.1
10 per cent. most deprived areas[1]	28.9	8,400	24.2	11,676	33.7
10 per cent. least deprived areas[1]	73.3	19,341	68.2	21,340	78.5

[1] The measure of deprivation used is the 2004 Index of Multiple Deprivation based on Super Output Areas (SOAs), rather than the 2000 Index of Multiple Deprivation based on Wards. The SOAs are a new geography designed by the Office for National Statistics for the collection and publication of small area statistics. They have been designed to provide an improved basis for comparison across the country because the units are more similar in population size.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many departmental Green Ministers there have been since 1997. [198311]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: There have been four Green Minister appointments in the Department for Education and Skills and its predecessor, the Department for Education and Employment, since 1997.

Higher Education

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many entrants to higher education there were from (a) sixth form colleges and (b) further education colleges in each of the last 10 years. [197823]

Dr. Howells: The latest available information is shown in the table.

[1] Figures cover only those students who provided details of their previous educational establishment. Over the last 10 years the proportion of acceptances who did not provide this data varied between 15 per cent. and 20 per cent.. In 1998, the categorisation of individual schools/colleges was updated to take account of changes in school/college status; as a result, the figures for 1998 and later years are not directly comparable with those for earlier years. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest hundred.

Higher Education Funding Council

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the Higher Education Funding Council will report on its proposals to secure the financial position of the Open University. [195607]

Dr. Howells: The board of the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) has convened a panel to consider submissions from the Open University and Birkbeck College. The HEFCE panel has been asked to respond to the HEFCE board by the end of January 2005 at the latest.

Information Technology (Schools)

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what proportion of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) Wansdyke and (ii) Bath and North East Somerset are equipped with (A) interactive whiteboards and (B) broadband technology. [196760]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The available information is as follows:

For England, my Department estimates that 63 per cent. of primary schools and 92 per cent. of secondary schools were equipped with electronic interactive whiteboards in 2004. The latest figures were published in SFR 27/2004 "Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2004", which is available on my Department's website: www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/

31 per cent. of primary schools and 91 per cent. of secondary schools were equipped with broadband technology in 2003; the latest figures were published in the Statistical Bulletin "Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2003", which is available on my Department's website: www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/

Both sets of figures were derived from a sample of schools.

The British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (BECTA) compile figures on broadband connectivity as reported by local education authorities. South Gloucestershire LEA reported that all of its maintained schools were equipped with broadband technology and Bath and North East Somerset LEA reported that 53 per cent. of its maintained schools were equipped with broadband technology.

Integrated Children's System

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money it will cost to implement the Integrated Children's System. [195334]

Margaret Hodge: The Integrated Children's System (ICS) is derived from the social services functions under the Children Act 1989 and the Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000. It provides a national framework for social services to undertake their functions in a systematic manner. It does not impose any additional duties or responsibilities on them. Funding has been provided to assist local authorities upgrade their IT systems to help them perform their functions effectively. We do not gather information on the detailed costs for individual local authorities of developing and running the ICS or existing systems which support their social services functions.

The LASSL(2003)7 "Children's Social Services Funding 2004–05" set out the main aspects of the 2004–05 local government finance settlement which is relevant to the funding provided for children's social services. It announced a capital grant of £10 million to support the development of information technology systems for children's social services. The £10 million is the first tranche of a total grant of £30 million payable in 2004/05 and 2005/06.

LAC(2004)22 provided more detailed guidance. It required the grant to be spent on building the information technology systems required to support the implementation of the Integrated Children's System (ICS). This grant is therefore primarily concerned with enabling staff to record and manage electronically case record information about children being served in the context of the Children Act 1989. The Integrated Children's System (ICS) will be quite different from the information database(s). The ICS is a national framework for Councils with Social Services Responsibilities' (CSSRs') to help them work with children in need and their families. It provides a single approach for assessment, planning, intervention and reviewing based on an understanding of children's developmental needs in the context of their families and communities. It is signed to improve outcomes for children in need. The information gathered in the course of working with children and their families must be recorded by social services. These records have traditionally been paper-based but a growing number of councils have electronic record keeping systems in place. As part of implementing the integrated children's system, social service records will all be kept electronically, replacing paper-based systems. The ICS is simply a better way to maintain and meet existing record keeping requirements and, therefore, requires no legislative provision.

The ICS will provide a more effective way of keeping and accessing records relating to social services work with children and families than exists at present. This will help improve standards of service to children and families.

The grant, which was announced in LASSL(2003)7 "Children's Social Services Funding 2004–05", is allocated in a way that reflects the size of local children's social services operation. The FSS formula is used for this purpose. This grant is in addition to the Capital Grant for Improving Information Management supporting Information for Social Care described in Local Authority Circular LAC(2003)17. £25 million was paid in 2003–04 to CSSRs for the purposes of the developmental, improvement or acquisition of systems for improving information management.

In total, we have provided an extra £90 million this year to support councils in improving their services to safeguard children including responding to the recommendations made in Lord Laming's report and the Joint Chief Inspectors' Report, "Safeguarding Children". No conditions have been attached to this money to enable councils the freedom to choose how to target the extra resources so that they can maximise the outcome for children's services in their area. It is open to local authorities to use some of these resources to improving their IT and recording system, as well as for training their staff.

It is for local authorities to decide how best to provide support and services for all children in need in its area. There is no current specific earmarked funding for services; instead, Government funding is allocated to councils with social services responsibilities on the basis of the needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each body's target fair share of available resources. It is, therefore, for councils, working in partnership with relevant local stakeholders, to determine their spending priorities on the basis of local needs.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what data the Integrated Children's System will hold; and who will have access to it. [195335]

Margaret Hodge: The IT system, to support the use of Integrated Children's System (ICS), will enable councils with social services responsibilities to hold information electronically about children in need who are in receipt of their services. It will contain information gathered in the course of working with children and their families, which has been recorded by social services. These records have traditionally been paper-based but a growing number of councils have electronic record keeping systems in place. As part of implementing the ICS, social service records will all be kept electronically, replacing paper-based systems.

The legislation on access to personal information held by social services departments is the same for paper-based and electronically kept case records.

The Access to Personal Files Act 1987 gave people the general right to see social work records which related to them produced after 1987. The Data Protection Act (DPA) 1998, which came into force on 1 March 2000, enhances these rights and abolishes the time limit. Any living person, who is the subject of personal information held and processed by a social services authority, has the right of access to those records. The right of access only extends to the person who is the subject of those records, or someone acting on their behalf.

A person does not have the right to know what is recorded about someone else, even someone who is a member of the same family, without that person's consent. Requests from parents to see records relating to a child can be dealt with under these arrangements only where they are acting in the interests of a child who is unable to act for himself, rather than on their own behalf.

The right of access extends to children and young people under 18 who understand what it means to exercise that right. If they do not have sufficient understanding to make the request, a person with parental responsibility can make the request on their behalf.

Local authorities have a general duty in common law to safeguard the confidentiality of personal information, which they hold in connection with their social services functions.

However, there are circumstances in which personal information can be disclosed. For example, an authority may disclose information to social services staff directly involved in a case, or to anyone who cares for one of their clients, such as a voluntary body or foster carers. An authority will also need to disclose personal information to various bodies with the power to order disclosure, when ordered to do so, such as the police, the courts and statutory inquiries.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans there are to pilot the Integrated Children's System. [195340]

Margaret Hodge: Following the publication of the consultation document, "Integrated Children's System—Working with Children in Need and Their Families", in December 2002, a programme of work was set up in partnership with local authorities with social services responsibilities to pilot its introduction and test the integrity of the Integrated Children's System (ICS). This will allow the components of the system to be amended and revised before full introduction.

Pilot Studies

There are two separate but inter-related pilot studies funded by the Government in England and Wales:

> The first study is to assess the development of a multi-agency and integrated approach to implementing the ICS for children in need and their families. It is a two-year study ending in March 2005. There are four pilot sites: York, London borough of Richmond-upon-Thames and Lancashire county council in England and Neath Port Talbot in Wales.
> A second study aims to investigate how the ICS operates within local authorities with social services responsibilities. It is a two-year study which commenced in April 2004. It has a particular focus on piloting the system with disabled children and black and minority ethnic children and their families. There are four pilot sites: West Sussex and Newcastle in England, and Flintshire and Wrexham in Wales.

[1] The measure of deprivation used is the 2004 Index of Multiple Deprivation based on Super Output Area (SOAs), rather than the 2000 Index of Multiple Deprivation based on Wards. The SOAs are a new geography designed by the Office for National Statistics for the collection and publication of small area statistics. They have been designed to provide an improved basis for comparison across the country because the units are more similar in population size.

Key Stage 2 Results

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) males and (b) females achieved level 4 or above at Key Stage 2 in (i) English, (ii) mathematics and (iii) science in the (A) 10 per cent. most deprived wards and (B) 10 per cent. least deprived wards in 2004. Labour Market Participation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the participation of Muslim women in the labour market. [198379]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

Labour Force Survey Spring 2004[1] data shows 34 per cent. of Muslim women are active in the labour market compared with 73 per cent. of all women. We have a strategy in place to help disadvantaged ethnic minority groups improve their access to employment, including those from Muslim communities, and this is being taken forward by the Ethnic Minority Employment Task Force.

Muslim women have access to the full range of help offered by Jobcentre Plus both mainstream programmes and specific measures, such as Ethnic Minority Outreach, to help attract and support those facing significant barriers to work.

We are undertaking research to improve our understanding of the problems faced by ethnic minorities in getting jobs. Current research projects include a survey of the barriers faced by inactive and unemployed Pakistani and Bangladeshi people, both men and women.

[1] Labour Force Survey four quarter average to spring 2004.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if he will require the Learning and Skills Council to make payments to higher education colleges to cover the costs of interest and bank charges arising from late payments of Learning and Skills Council funds; [198516]

(2) what assurance he has sought from the Learning and Skills Council that higher education college funding will be allocated on time for financial year 2005–06. [198517]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is responsible for the planning and funding of post-16 learning and it is for the LSC to agree funding arrangements with higher education colleges. As the information requested relates to the LSC's operational responsibilities, the LSC's chief executive, Mark Haysom, will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

We are in regular dialogue with the LSC as it progresses its planning and funding arrangements with colleges and providers. As planning and funding allocations are the operational responsibilities of the LSC, Mark Haysom, will write to the hon. Member with information on the timetable and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Literacy

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions he has held with the Chancellor on improving financial literacy in areas of economic deprivation; and if he will make a statement. [198748]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There have been no recent discussions between the Chancellor and the Secretary of State on improving financial literacy in areas of economic deprivation.

However DfES has been working with HM Treasury on the Community Finance and Learning Initiative (CFLI) and Savings Gateway pilots. The outcomes of the CFLI pilots will be published shortly. The Savings Gateway pilot will finish shortly, with the evaluation due in spring 2005.

The Department is also funding a financial literacy project as part of "Skills for Life", the national strategy to improve adult literacy and numeracy skills. This has included the development of a range of financial literacy teaching and learning resources and guides, as well as trialling innovative methods of delivery and developing local partnerships between tutors and the advice sector. The Department is working closely with the Financial Services Authority to ensure its work supports the National Financial Capability Strategy.

In addition, personal finance education is covered in the national curriculum as part of personal, social and health education (PSHE) and citizenship education. The curriculum for citizenship (introduced as a statutory subject in secondary schools in 2002) provides the opportunity for teaching about the economy, business and enterprise. The Department published guidance for teachers, "Financial Capability through Personal Financial Education", in 2000.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will ensure that the sparsity factor in local education authority grant funding for 2005–06 will take account of (a) the costs to schools of the workforce reform agenda, (b) the number of small schools in a local education authority, (c) broadband connection costs and (d) the cost of school transport. [199120]

Mr. Miliband: The calculation of Education Formula Spending Share includes a factor for sparsity in both the primary sub-block, recognising the higher costs of maintaining small schools, and in the LEA block, recognising the higher costs of transport in sparse areas.

We intend that the sparsity factor in the primary sub-block be enhanced in 2005–06 to reflect the slightly higher costs faced by small schools due to workforce reform (although the smallest School Standards Grant band has been increased in 2005–06 as the main way of dealing with the higher costs of workforce reform for small schools).

The sparsity factor is already designed to take into account the fact that sparse areas have a greater proportion of small primary schools and that these small schools will face higher running costs, including broadband connection costs, and that sparse areas face higher transport costs.

Medicine

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students have been admitted to university to read medicine on courses which lead to registration as doctors with (a) less than three Bs at A level and (b) less than three Cs at A level as a result of widening participation schemes in each of the last five years. [198255]

Dr. Howells: Admission of students to medical, and other, courses is a matter for individual institutions. The main scheme for widening participation is Aimhigher which aims to raise the attainment levels of young people, their aspirations towards university, and improve progression. Most activities are not subject-specific, although some locally arranged activities are designed to raise awareness of and encourage progression to specific subjects such as medicine. Aimhigher does not include the delivery of degree or other higher education programmes. Information on the pre-entry qualifications of students entering first-degree courses in medicine is, however, provided in the following table.

Students from England entering first degree courses in medicine

		Of which, those with scores equivalent to:

Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA). Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many schools are taking part in widening participation schemes for entry to university to read medicine; [198256]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of programmes for widening participation in the study of medicine at university; [198400]

(3) which universities (a) offer and (b) plan to offer extended medical degree programmes or their equivalent for students seeking to study medicine with a view to registration as a doctor under the Government's widening participation schemes; [198401]

(4) how many students have been admitted to universities this year to read medicine under widening participation schemes; and what estimate he has made of the number of students who will be admitted in each of the next five years. [198402]

Dr. Howells: The Government's aim is that everyone with the potential to benefit from higher education should have an opportunity to do so. The main scheme for widening participation is Aimhigher, a programme jointly funded by the Department for Education and Skills, the Learning and Skills Council and the Higher Education Funding Council for England. Since August 2004, Aimhigher has been a national programme, operating most intensively in disadvantaged areas.

Aimhigher aims to raise the attainment levels of young people, their aspirations towards university, and improve progression. Most activities are not subject specific, although some locally arranged activities are designed to raise awareness of and encourage progression to specific subjects such as medicine. The Department does not collect information on the exact nature of locally arranged activities, their cost, or the number of schools involved. Aimhigher does not include the delivery of degree or other higher education programmes.

Foundation Years may contribute to the widening participation activities undertaken by universities. Foundation Years in medicine are designed to assist potential students to gain the knowledge and learning skills needed for degree study, including allowing students with good grades in non-science subjects to study the basic science needed to start a medical degree course. Information on the number of students who have entered a degree programme in medicine having completed a foundation year is not available.

Ministerial Visits (Wandsworth)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Ministers from his Department have visited the London borough of Wandsworth in each of the last five years; and what the purpose was of each visit. [197123]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: From the information available, the following visits to the London borough of Wandsworth have been undertaken by Ministers in this Department and its predecessor, the Department for Education and Employment, in the last five years.

	Number of visits by Ministers	Purpose
1999	0
2000	1	South Thames College/Wandsworth Adult College—for the opening ceremony of the Millennium Centre
2001	0	—
2002	4	Actors' Graduation Ceremony BP Modern Apprenticeship Event HE/FE Community Partnership Conference Visit to Sir James Barrie School
2003	3	Visit to Chestnut Grove School Visit to Battersea Technology College, and Southfields Community School. Ravenstone Primary School, opening of school grounds
2004	5	Visit to South Thames College Southfields Secondary School (Launch of Chartered London Teacher Scheme) Elliot School (Modern Foreign Languages related visit). Allfarthing Primary School (Modern Foreign Languages related visit) Visit to a family in Wandsworth during Share the Care week

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress has been made by the Modern Apprenticeships Task Force in encouraging businesses to participate in the Modern Apprenticeship scheme. [198852]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Apprenticeships Task Force chaired by Sir Roy Gardner, Chief Executive of Centrica plc, was asked to focus on increasing the number of employers taking on apprentices. A significant part of the Task Force's work has involved members championing Apprenticeships within their sector and the wider business community through identifying and promoting the business benefits their companies enjoy from employing apprentices. In addition members are leading by example by increasing the number of apprentices recruited by their companies. The Task Force has also played a key role in supporting the Learning and Skills Council in its ongoing marketing campaign aimed at employers, such as a recent series of articles in the business section of The Mail on Sunday. More information about the work of the Task Force is available on their website www.employersforapprentices.gov.uk and in its Interim Report, which is due to be published shortly.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many young people aged 16 to 25 years have successfully completed a modern apprenticeship in Hertfordshire within the last five years; and what the figures are in Lancashire; [198854]

(2) what proportion of places on the Modern Apprenticeship scheme are in electrical engineering. [198853]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Modern Apprenticeships have been (a) started and (b) finished since their inception, broken down by trade. [198856]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 16 November 2004]: The total numbers of government supported Apprenticeships to have been (a) started and (b) finished, up until the end of July 2003 are shown in the table.

Training and Enterprise Council (TEC) management information

Because of learners transferring between programmes, it is not possible to estimate the number in learning from the starts and leavers figures given in the table.

It is not possible to break these figures down by trade. However, the more recent data are broken down by sector framework and published on the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) Apprenticeship Frameworks website: http://maframeworks.lsc.qov.uk/.

Motor Servicing/Vehicle Industry

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of skilled technicians entering the motor servicing industry in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [198857]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not collect overall data on the number of skilled technicians entering the motor servicing industry. However a major route for entry is via a Motor Industry apprenticeship.

In 2002/03 there were 3,471 people who completed a Motor Industry apprenticeship and gained a full framework or NVQ achievement (source http://maframeworks.lsc.gov.uk).

Automotive Skills, the Sector Skills Council for the automotive industry, will be undertaking research into skills shortages and skills gaps affecting the sector in the future.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many fully qualified motor mechanics there have been in each of the last 30 years. [198859]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not collect data on the number of fully qualified motor mechanics.

Automotive Skills, the Sector Skills Council for the automotive industry, will be undertaking research into skills shortages and skills gaps affecting the sector in the future.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provision is in place to train motor mechanics in new computerised automated motor vehicle technologies. [198860]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The LSC has, in the last three years, recognised 10 Centres of Vocational Excellence (CoVEs) in motor vehicle technology, resulting in a significant increase in the capacity to support the delivery of training in this specialist area. This investment will have a continuous effect through the key role of the CoVEs as disseminators of good practice and quality improvement across the whole college network.

On-going developments in this area will be taken forward through the joint working between the LSC and Automotive Skills, the Sector Skills Council for the industry within the Sector Skills Agreement Process. Additionally, manufacturers and equipment suppliers also provide training in this area.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to introduce nationally-recognised qualifications for the UK motor vehicle industry. [198810]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There are a range of National Vocational Qualifications and Vocationally Related Qualifications available for both motor vehicle manufacture and retail service. These qualifications are nationally accredited by the Qualifications Curriculum Authority for England, and Awdurdod Cymwysterau, Cwricwlwm ac Asesu Cymru (ACCAC) for Wales.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average amount of training delivered per technician given by the motor manufacturing industry was in England in 2003–04; and which motor vehicle manufacturers provided levels of training (a) above and (b) below the average. [198811]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The statistics collected on training in the motor manufacturing sector do not separate technician training from training for other employees such as managers. However People Skills Scoreboard, which is a joint Engineering Employers Federation/Science, Engineering and Manufacturing Technologies publication provides information on general training in the sector. Participation in the Scoreboard, which is used for benchmarking purposes, is voluntary. For more information on People Skills Scoreboard see website www.peopleskillsscoreboard.com

Of the larger companies (over 200 employees) taking part in the People Skills Scoreboard, the following firms provide five days per person or more off-the-job training for their employees:

Nissan Motor Manufacturing (UK) Ltd

TKA Talent

Delphi Diesel Systems

Glacier Vandervell Inc

Ryobi Aluminium Casting (UK) Ltd

A P Hydraulics Ltd

Plaxton

Siebe Automotive (UK) Ltd

The companies with below average off-the-job training days per employee, tend to be small companies (there are no companies in the "bottom 10" with more than 50 employees).

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what plans he has to publicise best practice in the motor vehicle maintenance trade in the UK; [198812]

(2) what assessment he has made of the robustness of methods for assessing technical competence in the UK motor vehicle maintenance industry. [198815]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The DFES has licensed and funded a new Sector Skills Council, Automotive Skills, who are working with the sector's professional bodies and trade associations—the Retail Motor Industry Federation (RMIF), the Institute of the Motor Industry (IMI) and the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (SMMT) amongst others—to explore the scope for a coherent response to raising skill levels across the industry.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will introduce ongoing effective technician competence assessment in the UK motor industry. [198813]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The UK Motor Industry is considering this issue at present. The Institute of the Motor Industry are currently piloting off-the-job competence testing of technicians and keeping other key partners, including the DTI, the Automotive Skills SSC and the Consumer Association, informed of progress.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what financial assistance is available to the UK motor vehicle maintenance industry to improve standards of training and competence. [198814]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Automotive Skills, the recently approved SSC for the automotive sector, will be responsible for establishing the requirements for the sector and developing the responses to these. Automotive Skills will be eligible for up to £5 million of assistance from the Sector Skills Development Agency over the next three years for carrying out its work.

Employers are eligible for financial assistance towards training for a wide range of employer developed schemes/qualifications. These include National Vocational Qualifications Level 2 (through the Employer Training Pilots, currently operating in 20 of the 47 LSC areas) and Apprenticeship training.

Nursery Classes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) three and (b) four-year-olds in Pendle attended nursery classes in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2003. [197032]

Margaret Hodge: All four-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All three-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by three and four-year-olds in Pendle parliamentary constituency and Lancashire local education authority area is shown in the tables. Margaret Hodge: All four-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All three-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by three and four-year-olds in Dagenham Parliamentary Constituency and Barking and Dagenham local education authority area is shown in the tables. Information for private and voluntary providers is available for Barking and Dagenham local education authority area but not for Dagenham.

Annual Schools' Census

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 39/2004 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2004 (final)", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Office of Fair Access

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to issue his final guidance to the director of the Office of Fair Access. [197847]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State's letter of guidance to the Director of Fair Access, Sir Martin Harris, was placed in the House of Commons Library on 25 October.

Physical Education

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average amount of time allocated for physical activity in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools is; and if he will make a statement. [196505]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: This information is not collected in the format requested. However, data on the amount of time 5 to 16-year-olds from school sport partnership schools spend on high quality physical education (PE) and school sport is collected through the annual PE, School Sport and Club Links survey. The results of the 2003–04 survey, in which 6,500 schools took part, were published on 29 April and copies were placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The 2003–04 survey found that, on average, primary schools within a school sport partnership devote 96 minutes curriculum time each week to PE, and that secondary schools, on average, devote 110 minutes per week.

In addition, the survey found that, overall, 62 per cent. of pupils in schools within a school sport partnership were spending at least two hours in a typical week on high quality PE and school sport. 44 per cent. received this entirely within curriculum time.

Playing Fields

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether, under new guidance restricting the sale of school playing fields, 100 per cent. of the proceeds from such land sales must be spent in the local community; and what definition of 'local community he uses in such guidance. [197268]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The new Guidance restricting the sale of school playing fields sets out the criteria against which applications for consent to dispose, or change the use, of school playing fields are assessed. The three main criteria are:

> schools' needs: that playing field provision and curriculum requirements at the school making the disposal, and at other schools in the local area, are met;
> Community use: that community use of a school's playing fields is taken into account, with alternative facilities made available if necessary; and
> finance: that any sale proceeds must be used to improve outdoor sports provision wherever possible, so that local authorities will have to provide first class outdoor facilities for schools before introducing new indoor sports or other educational buildings;

There is no requirement to use proceeds from the sale of school land to provide local community facilities. We encourage all schools, wherever possible, to open up on site facilities to help them become the centre of the communities that they serve.

Pre-School Learning

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what guidelines he issues to pre-school settings to ensure that pupils are ready to be taught in English in year R; [199162]

(2) what proportion of pupils in each local education authority are not able to be taught in English in year R. [199163]

Margaret Hodge: All providers in receipt of Government funding to deliver early education are under a statutory obligation to deliver the Foundation Stage Curriculum—the first stage of the National Curriculum. The Foundation Stage is a distinct phase of education, to meet the needs of children aged from three to the end of the reception year in primary schools. There will be children in Foundation Stage settings who will have a home language other than English. Practitioners plan to meet the needs of all children, including those from diverse linguistic backgrounds. The curriculum states that learning opportunities should be planned to help children develop their English by, for example, providing a range of opportunities for children to engage in speaking and listening activities in English with peers and adults.

Information on the proportion of children not able to be taught in English in the reception year is not collected centrally.

Prison Education

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who has responsibility for providing the (a) funding and (b) management of diplomas and higher education courses for prisoners. [198041]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Policy responsibility for the learning of offenders in prisons rests with the Department for Education and Skills, working closely with Prison and Probation Services. My Department provides funding to the Prison Service in support of the range of learning needs.

Since 2002, we have provided £728,000, working with the Prisoners' Education Trust to support undergraduate students on Open University courses and to support the introduction of new "Openings" courses, which provide access to HE courses for those without suitable prior qualifications. Other charitable bodies such as the Franklin Trust, also support some distance learning and higher education.

(b) The management of particular programmes within prison is the responsibility of establishments themselves. Almost all prisons now have a Head of Learning and Skills to lead and manage the service. Provision is provided according to a needs analysis which takes into account factors such as the individual's needs, the priorities of the prison and labour market needs.

Pupil Exclusions

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people have been excluded by each local education authority in Greater London in each of the last three years. [198884]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is shown in the table.

Pupil Referral Units

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the level of attainment at Key Stage 4 of pupils in Pupil Referral units. [194764]

Mr. Miliband: Through the pupil level annual school census (taken in January of each year) it is possible to identify which pupils are recorded on the roll of a school. Pupils in Pupil Referral Units can also be recorded on the roll of a mainstream school. In these cases the pupil is counted at the mainstream school, leaving only those pupils solely registered at a PRU contributing towards results for PRUs. The majority of pupils should only be in Pupil Referral Units (PRUs) for a short time, as the focus should be primarily on getting them back in to a mainstream school as soon as possible.

Levels of attainment by pupils solely registered in PRUs are variable. Provisional figures for 2004 indicate that 0.4 per cent. of 15-year-old pupils in Pupil Referral Units in England achieved 5 or more grades A*-C at GCSE and Equivalent, 4.7 per cent. achieved 5 or more grades A*-G and 48.6 per cent. achieved at least one pass in an approved qualification.

The attainment by pupils, who are solely-registered at a PRU at the time of the Pupil Level Annual School Census, over the last 3 years is shown within the table:

	Number of 15-year-old pupils in PRUs	Proportion of 15-year-old pupils in PRUs achieving:			Proportion of 15-year-old pupils Nationally achieving:
		5+ A-C*	5+ A-G*	Any passes	5+ A-C*	5+ A-G*	Any passes

2003	3,999	0.4	4.4	36.5	52.9	88.8	5.2
2002	2,960	1.5	8.6	63.0	51.6	88.9	5.4

[1] Provisional.

The 2004 figures quoted within the table relate to results in GCSEs and a wide range of other qualifications approved for use pre-16 which are being reported for the first time this year. Figures shown for 2002 and 2003 are based on results on GCSEs and GNVQs only.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reasons data on pupil attendance are not published for pupil referral units. [196996]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: While providers of alternative provision have a common law duty of care to ensure the health, safety and welfare of a pupil, there is no legislation requiring them to keep attendance records. As a result, the Department can neither collect nor publish data on pupil attendance at pupil referral units or other alternative provision.

School Finance

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost per pupil of education in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools was in the latest year for which figures are available. [198839]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is contained within the following table.

Unit cost per pupil in primary and secondary schools in England

	2002–03 (£)
School based expenditure[1,2] per pupil
Primary education	2,530
Secondary education	3,230
Combined LEA and school expenditure[3,4,5] per pupil
Total expenditure	3,440

[1] School based expenditure includes only expenditure incurred directly by the schools. This includes the pay of teachers and school-based support staff, school premises costs, books and equipment, and certain other supplies and services, less any capital items funded from recurrent spending and income from sales, fees and charges and rents and rates. This excludes the central cost of support services such as home to school transport, local authority administration and the financing of capital expenditure.

[2] Pupil numbers include only those pupils attending maintained establishments within each sector and are drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[3] The combined LEA and school based expenditure includes all expenditure on the education of children in LEA maintained establishments and pupils educated by the LEA other than in maintained establishments. This includes both school based expenditure and all elements of central LEA expenditure except youth and community and capital expenditure from revenue (CERA).

[4] In 2002–03 the combined LEA and school based expenditure is calculated by Section 52 Outturn Table A line 51 net current expenditure (NCE) plus line 60 NCE (with adjustments to income to take account of School Standards Grant and Standards Fund scored here) plus lines 61 to 74 NCE.

[1] Pupil figures include all pre-primary pupils, including those under 5s funded by the LEA and being educated in private settings, pupils educated in maintained mainstream schools and other LEA maintained pupils. The pupil data for pupils attending maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools are taken from the DfES Annual Schools Census. Private voluntary and independent (PVI) under 5 pupil numbers are taken from the Early Years census but are only included for 1999–2000 onwards. Other LEA maintained pupils are also included in the pupil count and this includes all pupils attending schools not maintained by the authority for whom the authority is paying full tuition fees, or educated otherwise than in schools and pupil referral units under arrangements made by the authority drawn from the Form 8b submitted to the DfES. Also included as other LEA maintained pupils are all pupils attending pupil referral units who are not registered at a maintained mainstream school drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census. All pupil numbers are adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

Note

Figures are rounded to the nearest 10 as reported by the LEA (as at 10 November 2004).

School Meals

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support his Department gave to National School Meals week; and if he will make a statement. [199055]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We were not asked to support National School Meals Week this year. However, in past years we have provided messages of support, and in 2001, Jacqui Smith attended the official launch.

Schools (Newcastle)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether Building Schools for the Future investment in Newcastle-upon-Tyne depends upon the acceptance of a city academy proposal. [199032]

Mr. Miliband: It is an absolute requirement for Building Schools for the Future (BSF) proposals that local education authorities (LEAs) come forward with hard-edged proposals for how the significant investment we are making through BSF will raise standards in all secondary schools in the area. In doing that, we require all LEAs to give serious consideration to whether the establishment of an Academy would benefit one or more schools.

Schools Admission Policies

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it remains his policy that secondary schools should be given no notification of the ranking awarded to the school by parents applying for a school place, as set out by the Minister for School Standards in the 8th Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation on 12 March 2003, column 15. [199087]

Mr. Miliband: Under co-ordinated admissions, individual admission authorities—LEAs and governing bodies—retain the right and duty to set and apply their own admission arrangements for their schools. Some admission authorities give priority in their school's oversubscription criteria to applicants who name the school as their first preference and for these schools this ranking is made available.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to require (a) specialist schools, (b) voluntary aided schools, (c) city technology colleges, (d) academies and (e) foundation schools to accept (i) looked after children, (ii) permanently excluded children and (iii) children with statements of special educational needs as part of their overall admission policies; and if he will make a statement. [196943]

Mr. Miliband: All maintained schools and academies must have regard to the School Admissions Code of Practice. The code encourages all admission authorities to give top priority in admission arrangements to looked after children. LEAs and others may object to the independent Schools Adjudicator if they do not. So far all such cases referred have been upheld.

Permanently excluded children must be treated in the same way as all other applicants unless they have been twice excluded. In that case parental preference rights are reduced. In October 2004, we issued guidance on the exclusion of pupils from schools, including guidance on the admission and re-integration of excluded pupils.

Children whose statements of SEN name a particular school must be admitted to that school.

CTCs are not subject to the same provisions and codes. However, we want all CTCs to become academies and some are already doing so; one has already converted and a further five are expected to convert by September 2005 with others seriously considering conversion. We believe that this is the best route to ensuring CTCs come within the same admissions framework as academies and maintained schools.

Admission forums, which include representatives of all parties interested in admissions, have a duty to promote arrangements for looked after children, children with special educational needs, and excluded children. They must also monitor arrangements for all children who arrive outside the normal admissions round—with a view to developing protocols for the admission of such children. The Secretary of State is making a speech to new headteachers on 18 November, at which he will talk about managing behaviour, and also about the need to develop local protocols to ensure that all schools play an equal part in the admission of permanently excluded and other "hard to place" pupils. Following that, we shall issue guidance to forums on how to develop and reach agreement on such protocols.

LEAs must invite CTCs to participate in the forum and the Admissions Code of Practice encourages them to do so.

Science Courses

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the changes in the numbers of students taking up science courses at (a) university and (b) A level in the last 10 years; and what steps the Government are taking to increase the number of students studying science. [198931]

Dr. Howells: The Government's "Science and Innovation Investment Framework 2004–2014", published in July sets out very clearly the challenge we face in securing an increase in the number of students taking A levels and enrolling on undergraduate science courses. The Framework builds on and takes forward progress made in response to earlier reviews of this subject, most notably the review carried out by Sir Gareth Roberts in 2002 and published as "SET for Success". Compared with 10 years ago, the proportion of A level and undergraduate students taking science courses has decreased (5.8 per cent. between 1994 and 2004 for A level entries in England; 6.7 per cent. between 1992 and 2002 for undergraduates enrolled in higher education institutions in Great Britain). The Framework sets out a raft of measures to ensure that every stage of the education system, from primary schools to universities, can play its part in producing the excellent supply of highly skilled scientists and engineers which we need for the economy.

Scientists in Higher Education

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the career paths open to scientists in higher education; and what plans he has to improve the career opportunities for scientists in higher education. [195635]

Dr. Howells: The Roberts' Review, SET for Success (2002) investigated in detail the supply of people with science, technology, engineering and mathematics skills including researchers. The Government are implementing the recommendations of this review, which includes: funding transferable skills training for Research Council-supported PhD students and postdoctoral researchers; increasing the minimum PhD stipend to £12,000 by 2005–06; raising the average for postdoctoral salaries by £4,000 between 2002 and 2005; and the development of the academic fellowship scheme, which guarantees permanent employment on successful completion. The recently formed Research Careers Committee, chaired by Sir Gareth Roberts will monitor trends, share and promote good practice and review the Concordat for research staff, originally signed in 1996.

Select Committee Recommendations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many recommendations by parliamentary select committees have been adopted by his Department since June 2001. [197769]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Select committee reports are given very careful consideration by the Department's Ministers. Since June 2001, several committees of both Houses have made recommendations on matters for which the Department for Education and Skills is responsible. Select committee reports and their responses are a matter of public record.

Sure Start

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on future funding of Sure Start. [198346]

Margaret Hodge: Increasing support for young children and families is a key priority for the Government. Sure Start funding was increased in the 2004 Budget and Spending review. The budget will rise by nearly 20 per cent. a year in real terms between 2005 and 2008.

Detailed plans will be published in a 10-year childcare strategy in December.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what arrangements are proposed for ring-fencing funding of Sure Start programmes through local authorities. [198347]

Margaret Hodge: As proposed in the "Every Child Matters" Green Paper, the Government are seeking to provide increased autonomy for local planning and decision-making. We are planning to merge the various child care funding streams into one allocation to give flexibility to help local authorities implement our child care agenda. Next year, we want to work with the 21 authorities who are piloting Local Area Agreements to see how a 'money for outcomes' funding system might work best.

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children in the Wansbeck constituency registered with Sure Start in each of the last three years. [198692]

Margaret Hodge: There are two Sure Start local programmes whose catchment areas fall within the Wansbeck constituency. The following table shows the number of children registered with these Sure Start local programmes at the end of March in each of the last three years.

	Number of children registered with Sure Start local programmes
2002	655

There is one Mini Sure Start Local Programme in Wansbeck constituency, Newbiggin-by-the-Sea, which has 197 children under the age of four in its catchment area. The Department does not collect information on the number of children registered at or seen by Mini Sure Starts.

Northumberland local authority has opened 17 neighbourhood nurseries creating 579 new child care places. Of these, five projects delivering 179 new child care places are within the Wansbeck constituency. Neighbourhood nursery monitoring data is collected by local authority. Figures for September 2004 indicate that 819 children are currently registered with neighbourhood nurseries in Northumberland.

Teacher Numbers

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how the number of (a) teachers and (b) teaching assistants has changed in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997; [198680]

(2) how many extra (a) nursery teachers, (b) nursery nurses and (c) nursery assistants have been employed in Newcastle-under-Lyme since 1997. [198681]

Mr. Miliband: The available information is provided in the table. Information is not collected on nursery nurses.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teaching staff have taken early retirement in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each unitary authority in each year since 1997; and what the average figures for a local education authority in England were in each year. [198660]

Mr. Miliband: The following tables give the number of full-time and part-time regular teachers in maintained nursery and primary and secondary schools in each unitary local education authority awarded premature retirement benefits under the Teachers' Pensions Scheme in each year from 1997/98 to 2003/04 and the average number of these retirements for all local education authorities in England.

Database or Teachers' Records and Pensioner Statistical System

Individual local education authority figures include those teachers who were employed in the authority in March of the preceding financial year who retired prematurely on the grounds of efficiency, redundancy or with actuarially reduced pension benefits. Teachers who retired on ill health grounds are excluded.

Changes in the Teachers' Pensions Scheme regulations that became effective from 1 September 1997 led to many more early retirements than normal in the 1997–98 financial year.

The average number of retirements is based on a total of 132 local education authorities in existence in 1997–98 and 150 for 1998–99 onwards.

Teachers' Pay

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps the Government are taking to reduce the disparity in pay between teachers in schools and further education colleges; [198718]

(2) what steps the Government are taking to increase the pay of teachers in further education. [198719]

Mr. Miliband: Further education colleges are run by independent corporations established under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. Individual further education colleges determine their own staff pay polices.

There are no national pay structures in place. Pay levels will therefore vary from institution to institution. Teachers in maintained schools are subject to national school teachers' pay and conditions.

On 16 September we announced that total funding for the post-16 learning and skills sector, excluding higher education, will rise to £11 billion by 2007–08. From this year, most colleges will have three year funding deals allowing them to plan on a longer term basis.

Universities

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research his Department has commissioned on the existing capacity of universities; and if he will make a statement. [197804]

Dr. Howells: The Department has not commissioned any research on the capacity of universities nor is this information available on a systematic or comprehensive basis. Information on the number of students expected to register with each university in the current academic year, and the actual number of students in previous years is available from the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE).

Information on funded expansion of students numbers in forthcoming academic year is also available from HEFCE. However, institutions also have the discretion to vary their total student population and mix of students without any change to HEFCE grant provided they remain within certain financial constraints.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 426

SESSION 2003–2004

1 November 2004—18 November 2004

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volume of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The index to the daily parts of Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references may be different as a result of changes to the text and column numbering.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Daily part and volume indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the vario POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisatio committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subj of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performan administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agen Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for examp Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland a Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that coun Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countr geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of st international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bo is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about spe communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and S Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doin propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental pol

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Pa of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'S committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific typ proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Memb or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered u their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indica of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For exam debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'S security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the hea 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are bro together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statement opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cas

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another hea 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the i is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, H of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings, written statements and written questions:
    - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
    - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
    - References ending in 'ws' indicate written statements.
    - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting, is a written statement or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
    - Chamber Debates (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
    - Westminster Hall Debates (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings);
    - Written Statements (consisting of ministerial statements issued in writing); and
    - Questions (which includes all written, oral and urgent questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R = First reading
- 2R = Second reading
- Com = Committee stage
- Rep = Report stage
- 3R = Third reading
- res = resolution
- amendt(s) = amendment(s)
- * = matter taken formally without debate or division
- (HL) = Bill starting in House of Lords
- (SP) = Bill in Scottish Parliament.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).
